TAKE OUR ADVICE ON BOILERS

WE MAKE EVERY KIND OF BOILER KNOWN, FROM THE SMALLEST TO THE LARGEST, BOTH STEAM AND HOT WATER.

There is no boiler in the world today that can compare with our 1910 Model Greenhouse Boiler for hot water heating. The Kroeschell Greenhouse Boiler was installed to heat over 9,000,000 square feet of glass during the past four years, and it replaced over 1500 cast iron boilers in the short period of six years.

We have no agents; all boilers sold direct to the user—you save the dealer's profit.

Help You Make Money at Decoration Day?

Before you can do business you must be sure of your supply. But you can leave that to us.

Go over your orders of last year and let us know what you need. You'll get it.

A MEMORIAL WREATH.

Of made-up flowers for Memorial day sales, probably the wreath takes the lead—it is the design invariably chosen where a piece is ordered for the tomb of some noted man. Flat sprays probably have the preference for private uses, but if a club, or lodge, or church wants a design, the wreath is the one that will be called for. The accompanying illustration shows an excellent form for such a memorial purpose. This wreath is made of laurel and lilies, but it might as well be made of any one of the flowers now in season. Instead of lilies, roses, carnations or peonies could be used with equally good effect. Instead of laurel, the wreath might be made of galax, boxwood or leucothœ. The ribbon adds more to the appearance than to the cost.

MEMORIAL DAY.

The Cut Flower Growers' Own.

Memorial day is one of the special flower holidays at which the grower of blooming plants "cuts no ice." No matter how loudly the retailer may proclaim at Easter or at Christmas, "I'll push the plants; no more high priced pickled-cut stock in mine," as May 30 approaches he has not a word to say, for plants or against cut flowers—the Memorial day requirements are practically exclusively for cut blooms; nobody wants plants that holiday.

There is, of course, a large demand for plants for bedding out at Memorial day, or rather a demand that the bedding-out shall be completed by that date, but as for special plant sales for May 30, there are none, nor is there any reason why the retail florist should care to change the existing condition.

Memorial day comes at a time when cut flower supplies ordinarily are large. This year the general prospect is for rather heavier supplies than usual of greenhouse grown cut flowers, if for rather light supplies of outdoor stock. stock.

Good Stock Abundant This Year.

Memorial day is not a time that quality counts so much as at other seasons. Most of the flowers sold find their way to the cemeteries, and if in presentable condition at the time they are left there, no one is the wiser if the lasting quality does not prove to be exceptional. What is wanted more than anything else at Memorial day is a big showing at no great expense. The peony is an ideal cemetery flower, but the carnation nevertheless has the lead in popularity. The cool weather which has prevailed since the middle of April has put greenhouse stock in finer shape than usual for Memorial day. Indeed, the quality of carnations and roses is almost up to the best midwinter grade and supplies are so large that only moderate prices are expected to prevail in the wholesale markets.

Growth of the Demand.

It is not so many years ago that Memorial day was considered as a little private affair of the survivors of the Civil War, and their families, but of late years the observance of the day has become general, and everyone now takes flowers to the cemetery May 30. When it was strictly an old soldiers' observance the extra demand in flower stores was hardly worthy special preparation, but it is quite different nowadays. No matter how fast the average florist's Christmas and Easter business has grown, the increase for Memorial day has been far greater. With the experience of recent years and the certainty that outdoor flowers will be scarce, at least in the section of the country that had the hard freeze in late April, the retailers can proceed to stock up heavier than ever before. To meet the demand, more flowers will be required than on any other one day in the year.

Memorial day promises to be specially good this year, because it falls on Monday. Experience has shown that where the day either next precedes or follows Sunday, the business is greater than where the day falls in the middle of the week. It virtually amounts to a two days' decoration.

Why Hide Your Light?

Although the business has grown to such large proportions, it has been almost wholly without the assistance of the florist. Hardly any retail florist has done more to increase the Memorial day business than simply to provide the stock in anticipation of the demand. While many have learned the value of advertising, especially at Christmas and Easter, extremely few have applied publicity at Memorial day. Slow to advertise as the average local florist is, he has done rather less at Memorial day than at any other time.

ply without limit. There is no line of merchandise which can be advertised in so many different ways with such uniformly good result. While many florists who advertise ignore funeral flowers on the principle that if you can induce people to buy flowers at other times, they are certain to order for funerals, still it is possible to advertise funeral flowers in a way not offensive to good taste. Every other phase of the flower business lends itself readily to all forms of publicity.

The daily newspaper is the best of all advertising media for the retail florist. You can do in newspaper space anything you can do by circular or letter; the only difference is that when you talk through the newspaper you address all the people who see your advertisement, at a cost much less than you could address them individually, by circular, letter or in person.

Pushing Memorial Day Sales.

In the big cities the cemeteries run their own florists' departments and do all they can to keep out other florists, but in the smaller towns the florist usually can get ready assistance from the cemetery officials—they like to have the florist get as much work as he can in their cemetery, because it improves the general appearance of the place. In such a cemetery the florist should have a complete record of the burials, just as the cemetery officials have. Then he can, along in May, send either a circular or a letter to each lot owner, calling attention to his facilities for placing flowers on cemetery lots on the morning of May 30. He should quote the price on loose flowers placed in vases, on two or three different styles of bunches, on such suitable designs as wreaths, crosses, etc., and if a printed circular is used it is a good plan to show cuts with the prices.

One florist who has worked up a big Memorial day business has advertised along the lines of selling his services, as well as his flowers. He found that a good many people who bought loose cut flowers May 30 to take to the cemetery did not know what to do with them when they reached the burying-ground. The cemetery vase partially solved the problem and gave the florist a few cents additional profit, but it did something better than that when it offered a suggestion. The next year the florist had on his counter some flat sprays made up of various flowers and at various prices. These were shown to buyers at Memorial day and many preferred them to loose flowers. The following year a circular was sent out showing cuts of the sprays, made of carnations, roses, peonies and one or two other flowers, with prices quoted under the cuts, and text offering to deliver any of the sprays on the morning of May 30, either placing on a grave at the cemetery or delivering to the buyer's residence. It was found that some preferred to have the florist make the trip to the cemetery, while others preferred to take the flowers personally.

Such efforts invariably result in increasing business. Those who have given study to the selling end of the business have discovered that it doesn't so much matter what one does so long as he does something. Some efforts are productive of better results than other efforts, but every effort produces something.

Delivery is Important.

FOR DECORATION DAY.

Retail florists do too little newspaper advertising. The Review has shown what is being done in this line by successful retailers in the hope that it would encourage others to work along similar lines.

As the saying goes: "Do it now."

DELIVERY.

Were you ever at a funeral where proceedings were delayed, awaiting the arrival of flowers ordered by the family? It never happened, you say? But it did! And the florist who was responsible now is out of business!

Perhaps it wasn't delaying that particular funeral that put that particular retailer to the bad; doubtless it was his general method, that the incident illustrates.

With the average order for flowers there is nothing whatever that is more important than prompt delivery. No matter how fine the flowers, no matter how artistic the arrangement, if their non-arrival delays the wedding, the dinner, or the departure for the theater, the florist need never expect that customer to return.

If you are sure of the perfection of your delivery service, it isn't a bad thing to advertise.

TELEGRAPH ORDERS.

With the increase in the importance of Memorial day has come a large development in the business of exchange orders between florists that day. Many people have relatives or friends buried at a distance, whom they wish to remember May 30. Also, many organizations cause wreaths to be placed upon the tombs of the noted dead. Retail florists everywhere can encourage the Memorial day business by making known their ability to place flowers on graves anywhere in the United States. The exchange of mail or telegraph orders between florists has increased at a marvelous rate the last few years, but it is capable of still further development and Memorial day offers one of the best of opportunities.

Two methods are available in addition to the use of newspaper space. The least expensive method is to have a sign painter make a small, neatly lettered sign for your window and another for your store. The second method is to have a neatly printed or engraved card prepared in advance, to be mailed or delivered to prospective buyers.

CAPE JASMINE WREATH.

The cape jasmine crop this year appears to be coming in just right for the Memorial day special demand, when it will fill the place of more northerly grown outdoor flowers not available because of the advanced season and the April freeze. What the peony is for decorative effect at Memorial day, the cape jasmine is for designs. During its season it relieves the monotony of eleven months' use of greenhouse flowers and gives the design-maker an opportunity to make his pieces with flowers that some of the customers at least will know cost 75 cents apiece for mid-winter boutonnieres.

With the more general observance of Memorial day has come an enlarged demand for designs, many of which are taken to the cemeteries, or to be placed upon the monuments erected in honor of the great men of history. For such a purpose as a Memorial wreath there could be no more suitable flower than the cape jasmine. How well it works into such a design is shown by the accompanying illustration, which is reproduced from a photograph of a wreath made to be placed on the tomb of a famous soldier. The flower's own green largely suffices in such work, but care should be taken that stems be not cut too short; when set too closely in the wreath the flower loses much of its natural grace.

MOTHERS' DAY.

General Satisfaction Expressed.

The letters reaching the REVIEW continue to speak of a splendid business done for Mothers' day, and it becomes more and more apparent that a new flower holiday of the first magnitude has become fairly well established. Next year the observance will be still more general, if one may judge by the reports, and it will be smoother sailing. Growers will see to it that there are more white carnations and retailers will push colored stock "for Mothers living," thereby equalizing prices and making it possible to do more business.

Kenosha, Wis.

I went to our mayor and he issued a proclamation for Mothers' day, in which he recommended the wearing of

A white flower for Mother's memory.

I also went to nearly every pastor in town, and they all had something to say about Mothers' day. Now, in regard to business: Every florist in Kenosha stocked heavily, but by 2 p. m. everything was gone; we could have sold more. Colored carnations sold as well as white.

Seattle, Wash.

Acting upon the suggestion of the REVIEW, we took up the subject of Mothers' day. We first secured an editorial in a leading paper, which we promptly followed with an almost verbatim copy of the advertisement the REVIEW suggested, of appropriate flowers for this day. The newspapers gave a full page describing the rise of the custom and honoring Miss Jarvis with pictures of her and her mother, and some of the decorations in our store. Even the newspaper cartoonists helped to swell the cry, and we are more than gratified to be able to say to you truthfully that we were entirely sold out both on Saturday and Sunday.

The custom certainly took splendidly, and Mothers' day is now on our regular annual holiday list. We often find and appropriate many useful suggestions in your paper and wish to compliment you on its efficiency. L. W. MCCOY.

Marlboro, Mass.

In the last REVIEW we notice several subscribers write of their success with Mothers' day. This is the second year we have tried to push it, and we feel well repaid for all effort on our part. Last year the people took kindly to the idea and the sale of flowers for the day exceeded our expectations; but this year it seemed more generally known, we advertised more, and the demand was greater than we anticipated. We were kept busy until late in the evening and all of the forenoon Sunday.

We were somewhat handicapped by a piece in our local paper, that the flower appropriate to the day was the carnation, white for the dead and red for the living. Naturally, everyone called for red or white pinks, and many could not be convinced that any other color, or flower, would answer. We think it a mistake to specify any one flower or color. It should be as you suggest:

A white flower for Mother's memory.
A bright flower for Mothers living.

We sold our pinks for 5 cents apiece, not raising the price to customers, although we had to pay more at wholesale that day than usual. We feel that it is a day which will grow in popularity.

There cannot be enough white carnations to supply everyone with white, and by using the colored for the living it will give the colored an even chance with the white. That will keep the prices down so that the poor and those in moderate circumstances can have an equal chance with the rich in remembering "the best mother that ever lived."

ATEN & MORELAND.

New Castle, O.

Business was surprisingly good for Mothers' day. Carnations being exhausted, geraniums and other flowers were used. Committees from Sabbath schools came for miles for flowers. They took anything they could get—white or colored. One school took geraniums in pots to present to each member. Others made it a home-coming day, the family gathering around the mother, bringing her flowers, and then gathering around the table. I suggest that another year announcements be made earlier, and believe that more flowers can be sold Mothers' day than any other one day in the year. So let every florist become interested and thank the REVIEW for pushing the day upon our attention.

A. O. NYSEWANDER.

Massillon, O.

In the issues of May 5 and 12, in regard to Mothers' day, the REVIEW seems to place all the blame for high prices on the retailers; in fact, it looks as if the REVIEW was subsidized by the wholesalers. I should like to know who created the demand for flowers on Mothers' day, or, in fact, for any special day? Under existing conditions, who is reaping the benefit of the created demand?

As for myself, I saw great possibilities for the florist in Mothers' day and did what I could to push the sale of flowers. The result was I did an enormous business; but, on account of the unreasonable stand taken by the wholesalers, did the business at a financial loss. There is absolutely no inducement for the retailer to push for any special day in the flower business, and if they do not, where will the wholesaler get his excuse to boost prices? It is not the retailer, but the wholesaler, who will kill the goose that lays the golden egg.

AUGUSTIN WEAVER.

[The question of holiday prices has been thrashed over so often that nothing new can be said of it, but this correspondent evidently did not catch the REVIEW's idea. The REVIEW never put the "blame" for high prices on the retailers. If Mr. Weaver were a grower for a wholesale market he would not use the word "blame" in connection with high prices, but with low. The point of view makes all the difference. What the REVIEW did say was that the law of supply and demand is "to blame" for prices, both high and low, and that the retailers could reduce the price of white carnations by working to turn a part of the Mothers' day special demand to colored stock, thereby equalizing values and making prices fair to all.]

FATHERS' DAY.

A woman florist supplies the following:

"Many fathers question among themselves, 'Why don't they have a Fathers' day?' They argue thus: 'Now, while we are having Mothers' day and praising her as she deserves, let's not forget father. Who was it at 3 a. m. "walked the floor" with mother when she was a baby? Who heated the milk over a smoky lamp for that same squalling child?—Father.' Even if the state doesn't set aside a day for father, have one yourself. Too many people have the idea that father is just a human being with no feeling, just to go and come, hand mother the money and work—that's all. Let's have our Mothers' day, but away down in your heart have a big space for father."

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Benching.

It is usual, in the spring rush which comes along in every florist's establishment, that the mums are forgotten, but the early varieties at least should be benched during the present month. Too often, at this season of the year, do we see the cuttings left in the sand weeks after they should have been taken out and either boxed or potted up. The result is apparent in the thousands of wretched looking plants that are annually benched, which, had they been taken and potted in good season, would have been nice, sturdy, healthy stock.

There is no place better than the coldframe for young mums after about the middle of April, for then the weather is mild enough so that the plants do not need much attention in the line of covering. I said a moment ago that early varieties should be benched this month, but the same thing really applies to a good many of the midseason kinds, if one wishes to grow them to their highest perfection. The exhibition grower has long since found out that to get a deep, well finished flower, he must plant early and get the age in his plants to ripen up the wood properly.

A large percentage of exhibitors today are growing their plants in pots or boxes, claiming, and apparently with good reason, that with the roots confined plants can be more heavily fed when the blooms are finishing, and with better results. In our case, as in almost every commercial establishment, pot culture is too expensive and we continue to stick to bench culture.

Early varieties, such as Golden Glow, October Frost, with its yellow sport, and Monrovia, if benched now, have time to make a nice growth before the bud is taken in July. If they are not planted until late, the growth is either too short or the bud is produced too late to get the largest returns from the flowers. This is particularly true in the case of Monrovia, as buds secured from July 12 to 25 produce flowers greatly superior to buds secured during August.

Many growers who claim that Monrovia does not come full enough with them, ought to realize that the fault is most likely their own, in not getting the bud at the proper season.

Soil.

The question of soil in benching chrysanthemums is perhaps not of so much importance as it is for roses, or some other crops, since the mum seems equally at home in the black prairie soil of the west or the light sandy soil of the Jersey coast.

We always aim, at planting time, to set out the plants in three parts fresh, sweet loam with one part of rotten manure mixed through it. The more fiber there is in the loam the more we like it, as it is almost impossible to make such soil sour by watering, and the first thing to do above all others is to get a good rooting medium even though the soil may incline to be poor, because I think with a good strong root action on a plant, feeding can easily be applied in liquid at any stage of the growing period.

The question is often asked me at this season of the year, "Would you rather grow your plants on a raised bench or a solid bed?" and from my experience I invariably reply. "In a raised bench." There the plants only have from four and one-half to five inches of soil to grow in and the root action is absolutely under control at all times. Planted out in a solid bed, the roots are apt to get away and one cannot tell whether the fertilizer that is being applied is doing the good it should.

In filling the bench we just simply fill it level full, and then after the plants have been set out and the bed rendered solid, more or less, the soil settles down about half an inch from the top and gives ample room for watering at all seasons.

Spacing.

The distance apart to set out the plants must be governed considerably by the grade of flowers and the varieties one proposes to grow. We set out our plants about eight inches by ten. In the case of Mlle. Desjouis, Yellow Ivory or small leafed varieties of that description, one can set the plants quite a little closer with safety. I am well aware that some growers plant a great deal closer than this, with fairly satisfactory results, but our aim is to have the finest flowers obtainable, as we have discovered that the market in New York will pay the price for the flowers that are away above the market grade.

If a man is in a small town, where the retail price is from $2 to $5 per dozen, he will naturally plant closer and endeavor to make his income by a larger quantity of flowers to cut. Anyone who purposes to grow flowers for exhibition will find that it is absolutely imperative to give the plants sufficient room so that every flower develops perfectly in its own space.

While it would not do for every florist to grow only just the best flowers, still I have often thought that, if the grade were twice as good and the number reduced one-half, there would probably be a much better price prevailing in the fall for mums than there has been for the last two years.

Early Sorts Most Profitable.

It is a question with many sometimes whether to concentrate on the early flowering varieties or to have more of the later varieties. It will be found, five seasons out of six, that the early varieties are more profitable to grow.

When we get the early fall frosts, nipping everything outside, during the last of September, the demand for early flowers is immediate and profitable. If the weather continues warm, however, early varieties do not sell so well, but under average conditions the man who has a first-class lot of flowers to sell around the first of October can almost always make a profit on them. It is, of course, possible to get some varieties in from the middle of August to the first of September, but I have always argued that there is a time and place for everything and the time for the mums does not seem right until the frosty nights and clear, cold, crispy days remind us that the summer has really ended.

Late varieties, in some localities, pay pretty well, but in most of the eastern markets people do not want to see mums after Thanksgiving.

Midseason varieties pay least of any, because they are in during the glut and unless of superior quality often get sacrificed.

The far-seeing grower is he who studies out this question before planting time. It is of little use regretting next October, when a little foresight before planting time will make considerable difference in the returns per square foot of bench surface.

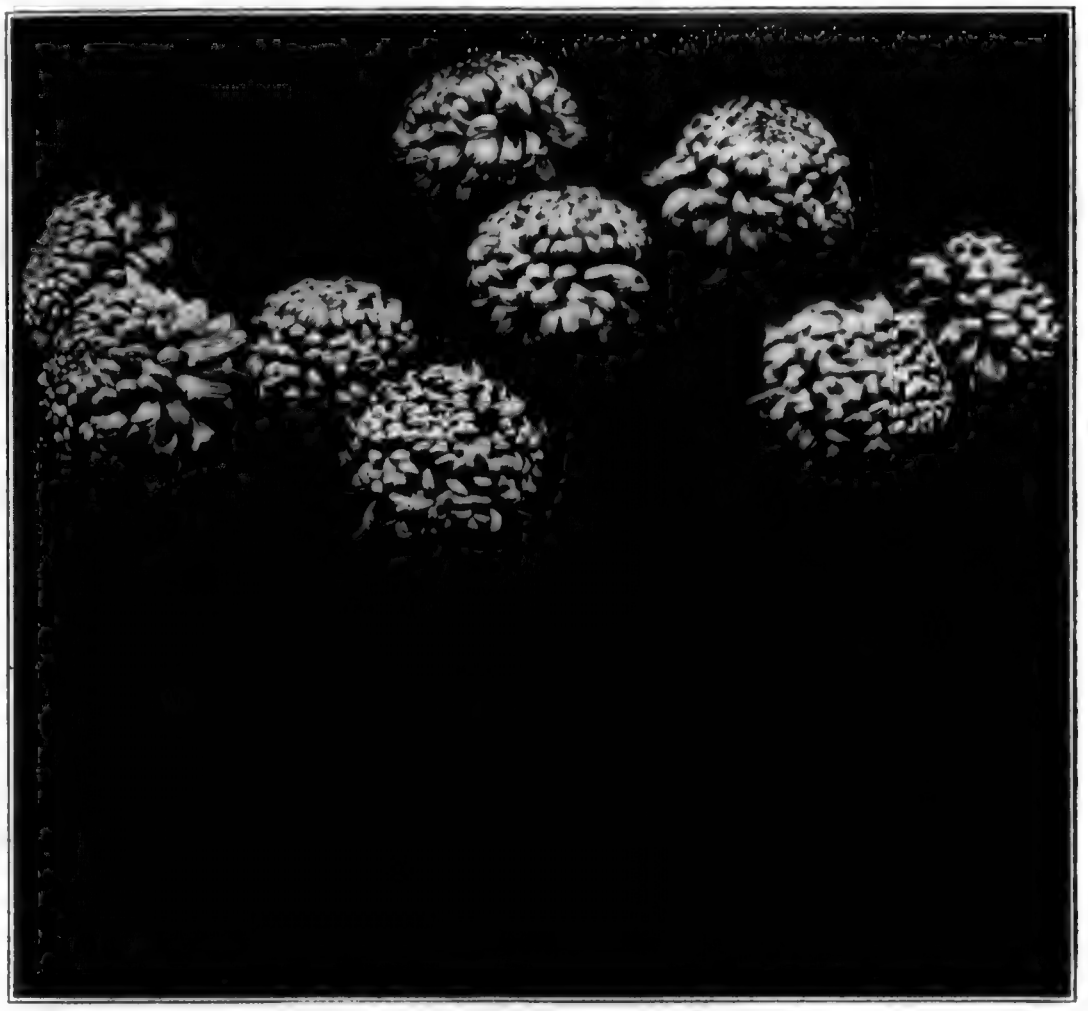
SOME GOOD VARIETIES.



Kindly name some good mums in white, pink and yellow. I should also like to know which is the best size to buy for planting directly into a bed—rooted cuttings or larger sizes. I am located in Indiana. L. E.

I would suggest the following: White—Byron, Beatrice May, Desjouis, Taft, Lynnwood Hall, Chadwick. Pink—Pacific, Brock, Hopetoun, W. Duckham, Winter Cheer, M. Hankey. Yellow—Yellow Miller, Golden Glow, Monrovia, S. A. Naceur Bey, Appleton, Cheltoni, F. S. Vallis.

While there are many varieties to select from, the foregoing will give you a good selection, in early, midseason and late. They are all easy doers and seem to give good satisfaction through the country generally.

As to which is the right size to buy for planting for the best results, there is, to my mind, nothing like a good plant in a 2¼-inch pot. If finances play an important part in the operation, rooted cuttings may be procured, but I do not call it the best policy to buy rooted cuttings if they have to be shipped any distance.

Golden Glow Mums Photographed May 7, 1910.

MUMS AT ALMOST ALL SEASONS.

Perhaps the majority of florists are not fully aware of the possibilities that exist in the Golden Glow chrysanthemum as a flower for nearly all seasons of the year, available for about all of the great holidays and church festivals when flowers are especially in demand. A correspondent of the REVIEW stated, in the issue of May 12, that he had just seen some shipments of well flowered pots of Golden Glow mums. The flowers, he said, were fully equal to those usually produced in October. He added that he "had seen this variety in bloom for Labor day, Thanksgiving and Christmas, and, with the addition of Memorial day, only Easter is lacking to complete the cycle of floral festivals."

E. Leroy Johnson, of Palmer, Mass., writing at almost the same date as the correspondent quoted from, unconsciously verifies the foregoing statements, and even supplements them, for he says it is possible, also, to have Golden Glow mums for Easter. A sample of Mr. Johnson's blooms is shown in the illustration here reproduced. The mums, he says, were planted last winter and the first blooms were cut April 23. With reference to the methods used in growing them, he says:

"I took the cuttings October 22, 1909, and put them in 2¼-inch pots November 9. They were placed in the bench about January 1 and run in a cool house, with mum stock plants and the like. In fact, the temperature one night went down to 28 degrees. They did not make much growth, except at the roots, until the latter part of February. Then they grew like weeds. They were grown one bloom to a plant and were fed with liquid cow manure from the time the buds showed until they showed color. They were grown as an experiment, so only 100 were planted.

"By growing them a little warmer, say at a carnation temperature, they could be had for Easter in most years. Also, they could be grown on into 3-inch pots before benching, thus saving room."

YELLOW PETUNIA FOLIAGE.

I should like to know what makes the leaves on my double petunias turn yellow and die at the bottom, near the pot. Some are all yellow and some not at all. I cannot see any insects on them.

C. P. M.

Too dry root conditions, or lack of food, may be the cause of the leaves turning yellow. Give an abundance of water and if the pots are well filled with roots, give liquid manure once in four or five days. A teaspoonful of nitrate of soda in three gallons of water, given on two occasions a week apart, will tone them up. Petunias want plenty of water and quickly take on a yellow hue if starved at the roots. C. W.

RICHMOND, IND.—Fred H. Lemon & Co. have shown that they are wide-awake and hot after business, by running a two-column advertisement of bedding plants in a local daily paper.

mother is living or deceased. We think that this should be published and known throughout the country by the time that another Mothers' day comes around. There cannot be enough white carnations to supply everyone with white, and by using the colored for the living it will give the colored an even chance with the white. That will keep the prices down so that the poor and those in moderate circumstances can have an equal chance with the rich in remembering "the best mother that ever lived."

Aten & Moreland.

New Castle, O.

Business was surprisingly good for Mothers' day. Carnations being exhausted, geraniums and other flowers were used. Committees from Sabbath schools came for miles for flowers. They took anything they could get—white or colored. One school took geraniums in pots to present to each member. Others made it a home-coming day, the family gathering around the mother, bringing her flowers, and then gathering around the table. I suggest that another year announcements be made earlier, and believe that more flowers can be sold Mothers' day than any other one day in the year. So let every florist become interested and thank the Review for pushing the day upon our attention.

A. O. Nysewander.

Massillon, O.

In the issues of May 5 and 12, in regard to Mothers' day, the Review seems to place all the blame for high prices on the retailers; in fact, it looks as if the Review was subsidized by the wholesalers. I should like to know who created the demand for flowers on Mothers' day, or, in fact, for any special day? Under existing conditions, who is reaping the benefit of the created demand?

As for myself, I saw great possibilities for the florist in Mothers' day and did what I could to push the sale of flowers. The result was I did an enormous business; but, on account of the unreasonable stand taken by the wholesalers, did the business at a financial loss. There is absolutely no inducement for the retailer to push for any special day in the flower business, and if they do not, where will the wholesaler get his excuse to boost prices? It is not the retailer, but the wholesaler, who will kill the goose that lays the golden egg.

Augustin Weaver.

[The question of holiday prices has been thrashed over so often that nothing new can be said of it, but this correspondent evidently did not catch the Review's idea. The Review never put the "blame" for high prices on the retailers. If Mr. Weaver were a grower for a wholesale market he would not use the word "blame" in connection with high prices, but with low. The point of view makes all the difference. What the Review did say was that the law of supply and demand is "to blame" for prices, both high and low, and that the retailers could reduce the price of white carnations by working to turn a part of the Mothers' day special demand to colored stock, thereby equalizing values and making prices fair to all.]

FATHERS' DAY.

A woman florist supplies the following:

"Many fathers question among themselves, 'Why don't they have a Fathers' day?' They argue thus: 'Now, while we are having Mothers' day and praising her as she deserves, let's not forget father. Who was it at 3 a. m. "walked the floor" with mother when she was a baby? Who heated the milk over a smoky lamp for that same squalling child?—Father.' Even if the state doesn't set aside a day for father, have one yourself. Too many people have the idea that father is just a human being with no feeling, just to go and come, hand mother the money and work—that's all. Let's have our Mothers' day, but away down in your heart have a big space for father."

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Benching.

It is usual, in the spring rush which comes along in every florist's establishment, that the mums are forgotten, but the early varieties at least should be benched during the present month. Too often, at this season of the year, do we see the cuttings left in the sand weeks after they should have been taken out and either boxed or potted up. The result is apparent in the thousands of wretched looking plants that are annually benched, which, had they been taken and potted in good season, would have been nice, sturdy, healthy stock.

There is no place better than the cold-frame for young mums after about the middle of April, for then the weather is mild enough so that the plants do not need much attention in the line of covering. I said a moment ago that early varieties should be benched this month, but the same thing really applies to a good many of the midseason kinds, if one wishes to grow them to their highest perfection. The exhibition grower has long since found out that to get a deep, well finished flower, he must plant early and get the age in his plants to ripen up the wood properly.

A large percentage of exhibitors today are growing their plants in pots or boxes, claiming, and apparently with good reason, that with the roots confined plants can be more heavily fed when the blooms are finishing, and with better results. In our case, as in almost every commercial establishment, pot culture is too expensive and we continue to stick to bench culture.

Early varieties, such as Golden Glow, October Frost, with its yellow sport, and Monrovia, if benched now, have time to make a nice growth before the bud is taken in July. FILLING CEMETERY VASES.

An Important Item With Many.

Memorial day will soon be here and it brings a busy time. Not only do our customers want their vases filled in the cemeteries, but there is often the desire expressed: "I want our flower beds and veranda boxes filled by Decoration day." Those who do what we call a cemetery business, and fill 300 or 400 vases, know what a laborious business it is. Some years ago there were several kinds of vases and baskets used for this purpose. There were cast-iron vases, wire baskets or stands and rustic baskets. Now there are few of any kind but the iron vases and they certainly have the best appearance, as well as being practically everlasting. A coat of paint annually and they are always new.

There is rather too much sameness in the painting. Ninety-five per cent or more are painted white. While any gaudy color would be quite out of place, if more were painted a deep green and others a stone color it would relieve the monotony.

Do It at the Greenhouses.

Time was when we used to send wagons loaded with plants to the cemetery and other wagons with soil, and a gang of men, and attempt to fill fifty vases in a day. We have got over that, for there was too much waste of material. Plants were broken and wilted and the battered plants that came back made too big an item. There are a few old-fashioned iron vases and, of course, some large stone vases that have to be filled at the cemeteries, but nearly all iron vases are of the reservoir type and the top, or bowl, can be lifted off and brought to the greenhouses and much more satisfactorily filled. The work can be done much better, with no waste of plants, and you have the contents of the whole greenhouses at your back. There may be a little more teaming this way, but, all things considered, it is by far the better plan.

The Profit.

We never considered that there was much margin of profit in this vase filling business, yet a change in style of late years has been somewhat in our favor. Ten years ago, with few exceptions, the vases were filled with a mixture of plants, with vines around the edge. Often have we counted the plants and found that at wholesale prices they would cost as much as we got for the filling, soil, moss and labor thrown in. But remember that in those cases we largely used what we had and so cleaned up on everything, and that makes a wonderful difference.

Did you ever think of the difference in the profits of a place where all the stock is in salable shape and the benches emptied and one where one-third or one-half the plants, for some reason or other, are left unsold? It is the difference between success and failure. Every foot of your bench room must yield you some profit. If it does not, it has dragged down the profit of the space that did pay.

Bedding Plants at a Rochester Residence.

Red Geraniums Mostly Wanted.

But to return to the vases. The great majority are now filled with one kind of plant, mostly geraniums. There are several reasons for this. They are always in bloom, are neat and compact and do not suffer from a little neglect of water. They make a bright, gay spot. S. A. Nutt is such an admirable variety for this purpose that it is overdone. The individual owner of a cemetery lot may be charmed with his brilliant mass of scarlet blooms, but when there are forty similar ones within 100 yards, the effect is not pleasant. There should be more pink, white and salmon. Beaute Poitevine, Mrs. Frances Perkins and John Doyle are all fine for the purpose. The green vinca is good for edging the scarlets and the variegated vinca for the pink and salmon shades. A dwarf white geranium is fine for Mrs. Perkins and Mme. Salleroi is often wanted as an edging for Nutt. A combination that many want is a pink geranium for the center with an edging of the pink ivy-leaved geranium.

Other Good Material.

Large vases are sometimes filled with dwarf, free-flowering cannas of one variety, such as Tarrytown, the Express, or Souvenir de Antoine Crozy. Large stone vases are sometimes filled with Caladium esculentum, but these vigorous rooting plants should never be used in combination with other plants, for they quickly starve them out. Begonias of the Vernon type make pretty vases and where there is some shade during the hottest hours we have filled vases with tuberous-rooted begonias, and rich and choice they look.

This doesn't pretend to have exhausted the list of available plants for this purpose, but always recommend the filling to be of one kind of plant. There is more profit for you and it is sure to be more satisfactory to your patron. If your customer wants scarlet geraniums, it will have to be so, but encourage variety. It is not the beauty of one lot that should please the visitor to the city of the dead, but the generally pleasing appearance of the whole grounds.

Mixed Plants.

If the mixed vase is still preferred, there is considerable choice of material. For a center plant there is nothing equal to that cast-iron plant, Dracæna indivisa. It not only exists, but it grows and endures the fierce sun and drying winds. Then there are the geraniums, coleus, achyranthes, variegated geraniums, Begonia Vernon, acalypha, Boston fern, centaurea, fuchsias (in the shade), petunias, etc. About the only palm that would be good for a center plant in place of the dracæna would be the phœnix. They will stand the sun and the wind.

It is neither fair nor wise to put in plants that will make a fine show for a week or two and then be out of bloom for the whole summer. Such plants as the white feverfew or show pelargonium will not do, or any plant the flowering season of which is short. Nearly every cemetery has situations where any plants will thrive and other bleak, windy positions where only the hardiest plants will preserve a decent appearance. This must be studied.

Drooping Plants.

All these mixed vases will want an assortment of drooping plants and there are few really good ones. Some that may thrive and flower in a sheltered, partly shaded place will look like rats' tails in a few weeks if exposed to the winds and starved for root reom. The English ivy will remain just where you put it, but in a vase is not graceful. The vincas are truly the best of all. Then there is the ivy geranium, Abutilon vexillarium, double sweet alyssum, money vine, senecio (often called German ivy), lobelias, maurandia, nasturtium, etc. There are two splendid climbing plants, both excellent for this purpose, but seldom seen because they are neglected in the winter, in fact, often lost, viz., Ipomœa Mortonii and Pilogyne suavis.

Bedding as it is Done About a Rochester Residence.

Don't Crowd the Plants.

Now, if you are a beginner at the laborious vase business, remember that you crowd into a space of two feet in diameter or less, as many plants as would about properly fill a 6-foot bed. Therefore the soil should be of the best. In addition to manure, use a 6-inch pot of bone flour to every wheelbarrow of soil and be sure to get the soil firmly and compactly down between the balls of the plants. Let each plant be well firmed in its place. You can cover the surface of the soil with green moss. It keeps the soil from washing off, prevents some drying out of the soil and when the roots reach it they thrive in it.

One thing more. When you start a young man filling these vases, your stock is abundant and he wants to make a nice looking job and crowds in your fine geraniums. Now, with these early filled vases there is no need to crowd, for they will soon fill up and be all the better for a little room to spread. Don't put in more stock than you are paid for, just because it is abundant. Save your plants, for there are lots of belated orders coming along until July 4. Then you would be glad of the plants you so lavishly used when they were plentiful, and it is the late filled vases that need crowding, if any.

It is a good plan to arrange to water the vases you fill and if you water several hundred at $2 or $2.50 each for the season it does not seem a large charge for the individual, but it will be found a better paying operation than the charge for filling, and you have the opportunity to care for your own work.

BEDDING OUT.

The time for bedding out has arrived —at least, over the greater part of the country, floriculturally speaking, the time for planting out most of the soft-wooded stock is from May 15 to the early part of June. Earlier than this date there is danger of frost. Indeed, so warm was March and the early part of April that a good many people were impatient to get their lawns and window-boxes in shape, and some florists who yielded to their customers' insistence have now to explain why they did so—the cold of late April and early May has ruined whatever tender stock was exposed to it.

It is the duty of the florist to suggest the most appropriate style of bedding to his customers where advice is asked for, and poor policy to crowd in more than is discreet when it is left to his judgment. In residence streets a flower bed on the lawn between the house and the sidewalk is not good taste. At the side or slightly to the rear of the house is much better. Houses of a moderate size, with verandas at side and front, have often a row or two of cannas in the border surrounding the veranda, and extremely handsome they look.

Florists are divided into several classes. The strictly store man has no interest in bedding plants, nor has the wholesale grower more than to dispose of them, but the great majority of the florists of the country raise bedding plants for their spring crops and depend upon their sale for a good part of their income. If well and carefully done and a fair and just charge made, customers will be unlikely to leave and one can depend on the order from year to year.

The profit will largely depend upon the florists' ability to keep a good stock of plants in a comparatively small space till after Easter. From fall till after Easter benches are wanted for successive crops, but Easter sales largely clear them except those planted with roses and carnations. Geraniums can be then given their last shift, and so can ageratum, feverfew, heliotrope and salvia. Coleus can be grown from a cutting to a fine bedding plant in eight weeks. Cannas and caladiums can be kept in flats till the middle of April and then make fine plants by June 1. Petunias can be pricked out in pans and then in six weeks will make the best of bedding plants. Centaurea, coleus, achyranthes, verbenas, heliotropes, many of the geraniums, lobelias, aloysias, and all the carpet bed-

Do It at the Greenhouses.

Time was when we used to send wagons loaded with plants to the cemetery and other wagons with soil, and a gang of men, and attempt to fill fifty vases in a day. We have got over that, for there was too much waste of material. Plants were broken and wilted and the battered plants that came back made too big an item. There are a few old-fashioned iron vases and, of course, some large stone vases that have to be filled at the cemeteries, but nearly all iron vases are of the reservoir type and the top, or bowl, can be lifted off and brought to the greenhouses and much more satisfactorily filled. The work can be done much better, with no waste of plants, and you have the contents of the whole greenhouses at your back. There may be a little more teaming this way, but, all things considered, it is by far the better plan.

The Profit.

We never considered that there was much margin of profit in this vase filling business, yet a change in style of late years has been somewhat in our favor. Ten years ago, with few exceptions, the vases were filled with a mixture of plants, with vines around the edge. Often have we counted the plants and found that at wholesale prices they would cost as much as we got for the filling, soil, moss and labor thrown in. But remember that in those cases we largely used what we had and so cleaned up on everything, and that makes a wonderful difference.

Did you ever think of the difference in the profits of a place where all the stock is in salable shape and the benches emptied and one where one-third or one-half the plants, for some reason or other, are left unsold? It is the difference between success and failure. Every foot of your bench room must yield you some profit. If it does not, it has dragged down the profit of the space that did pay.

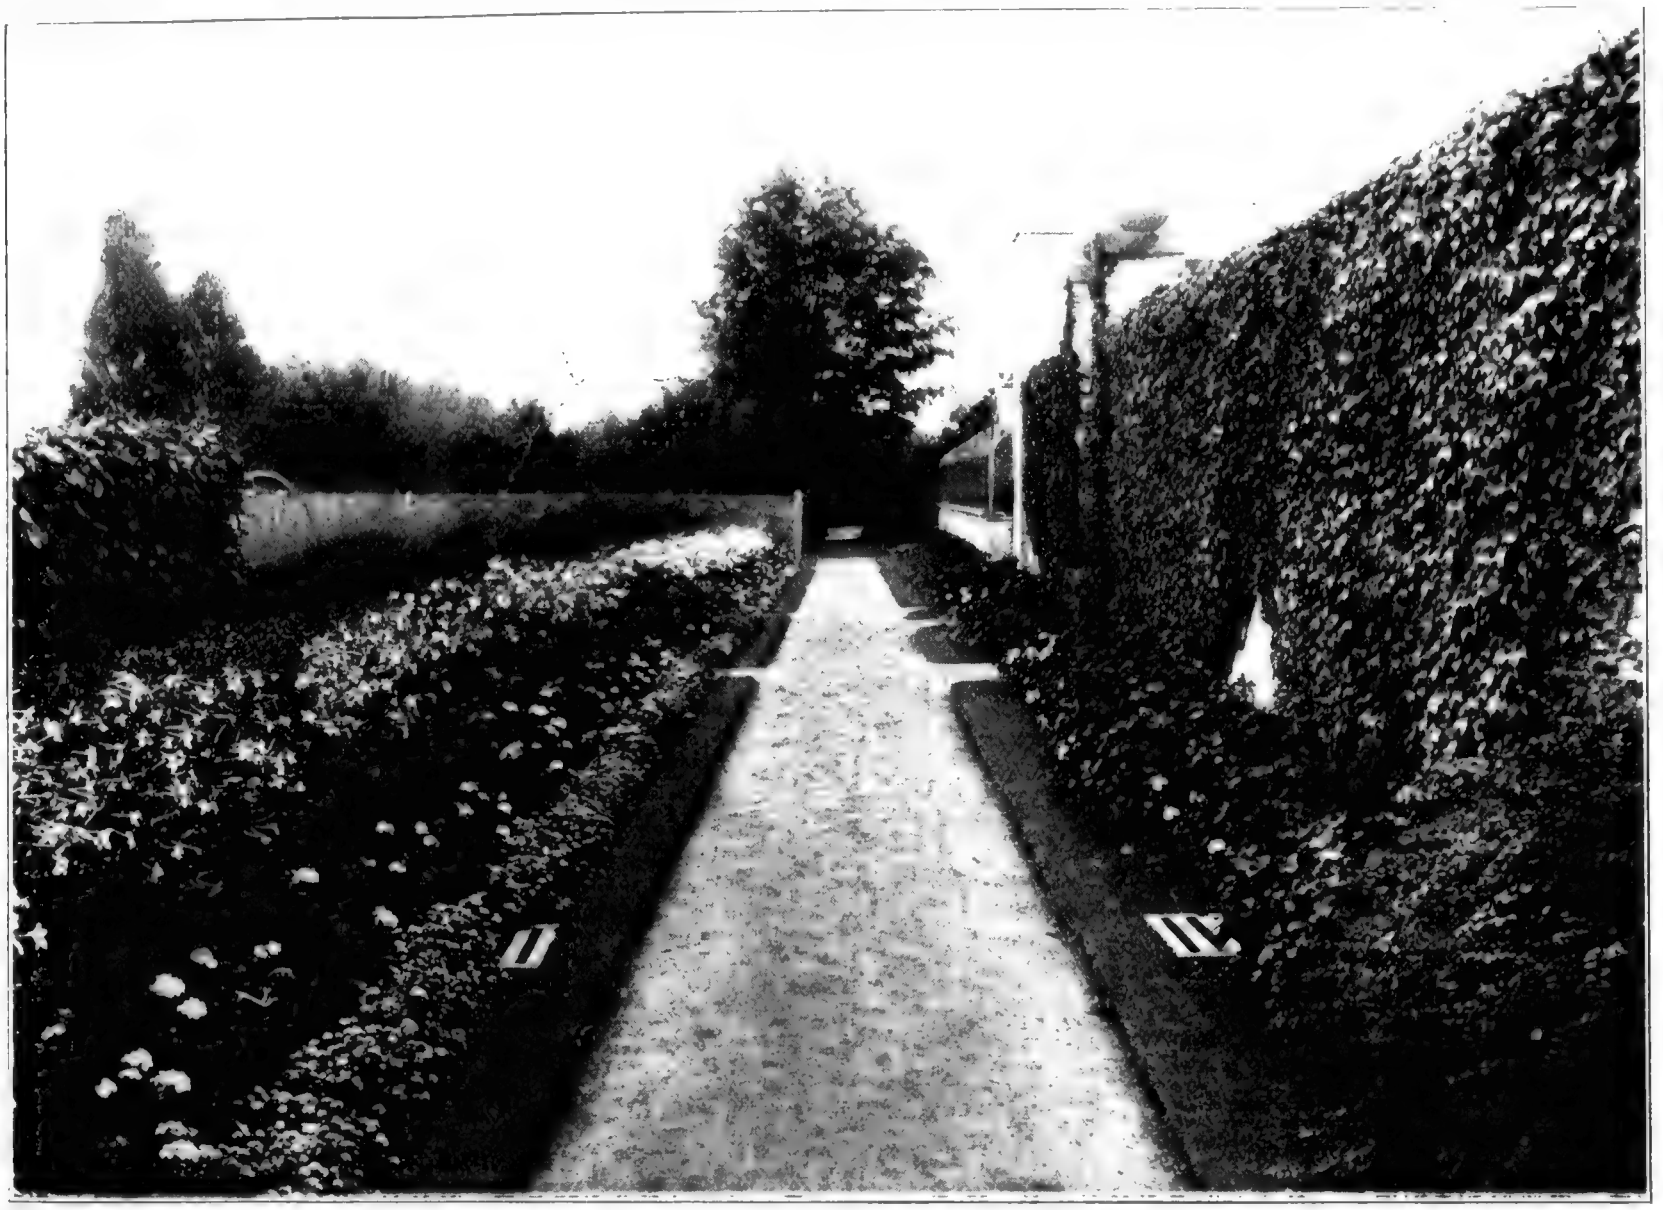
Red Geraniums Mostly Wanted.

But to return to the vases. The great majority are now filled with one kind of plant, mostly geraniums. There are several reasons for this. They are always in bloom, are neat and compact and do not suffer from a little neglect of water. They make a bright, gay spot. S. A. Nutt is such an admirable variety for this purpose that it is overdone. The individual owner of a cemetery lot may be charmed with his brilliant mass of scarlet blooms, but when there are forty similar ones within 100 yards, the effect is not pleasant. There should be more pink, white and salmon. Beaute Poitevine, Mrs. Frances Perkins and John Doyle are all fine for the purpose. The green vinca is good for edging the scarlets and the variegated vinca for the pink and salmon shades. A dwarf white geranium is fine for Mrs. Perkins and Mme. Salleroi is often wanted as an edging for Nutt. A combination that many want is a pink geranium for the center with an edging of the pink ivy-leaved geranium.

Other Good Material.

Large vases are sometimes filled with dwarf, free-flowering cannas of one variety, such as Tarrytown, the Express, or Souvenir de Antoine Crozy. Large stone vases are sometimes filled with Caladium esculentum, but these vigorous rooting plants should never be used in combination with other plants, for they quickly starve them out. Begonias of the Vernon type make pretty vases and where there is some shade during the hottest hours we have filled vases with tuberous-rooted begonias, and rich and choice they look.

This doesn't pretend to have exhausted the list of available plants for this purpose, but always recommend the filling to be of one kind of plant. There is more profit for you and it is sure to be more satisfactory to your patron. If your customer wants scarlet geraniums, it will have to be so, but encourage variety. It is not the beauty of one lot that should please the visitor to the city of the dead, but the generally pleasing appearance of the whole grounds.



Mixed Plants.

If the mixed vase is still preferred, there is considerable choice of material. For a center plant there is nothing equal to that cast-iron plant, Dracæna indivisa. It not only exists, but it grows and endures the fierce sun and drying winds. Then there are the geraniums, coleus, achyranthes, variegated geraniums, Begonia Vernon, acalypha, Boston fern, centaurea, fuchsias (in the shade), petunias, etc. About the only palm that would be good for a center plant in place of the dracæna would be the phœnix. They will stand the sun and the wind.

It is neither fair nor wise to put in plants that will make a fine show for a week or two and then be out of bloom for the whole summer. Such plants as the white feverfew or show pelargonium will not do, or any plant the flowering season of which is short. Nearly every cemetery has situations where any plants will thrive and other bleak, windy positions where only the hardiest plants will preserve a decent appearance. This must be studied.

Drooping Plants.

All these mixed vases will want an assortment of drooping plants and there are few really good ones. Some that may thrive and flower in a sheltered, partly shaded place will look like rats' tails in a few weeks if exposed to the winds and starved for root room. The English ivy will remain just where you put it, but in a vase is not graceful. The vincas are truly the best of all. Then there is the ivy geranium, Abutilon vexillarium, double sweet alyssum, money vine, senecio (often called German ivy), lobelias, maurandia, nasturtium, etc. There are two splendid climbing plants, both excellent for this purpose, but seldom seen because they are neglected in the winter, in fact, often lost, viz., Ipomœa Mortonii and Pilogyne suavis.

Bedding as it is Done About a Rochester Residence.

Don't Crowd the Plants.

Now, if you are a beginner at the laborious vase business, remember that you crowd into a space of two feet in diameter or less, as many plants as would about properly fill a 6-foot bed. Therefore the soil should be of the best. In addition to manure, use a 6-inch pot of bone flour to every wheelbarrow of soil and be sure to get the soil firmly and compactly down between the balls of the plants. Let each plant be well firmed in its place. You can cover the surface of the soil with green moss. It keeps the soil from washing off, prevents some drying out of the soil and when the roots reach it they thrive in it.

One thing more. When you start a young man filling these vases, your stock is abundant and he wants to make a nice looking job and crowds in your fine geraniums. Now, with these early filled vases there is no need to crowd, for they will soon fill up and be all the better for a little room to spread. Don't put in more stock than you are paid for, just because it is abundant. Save your plants, for there are lots of belated orders coming along until July 4. Then you would be glad of the plants you so lavishly used when they were plentiful, and it is the late filled vases that need crowding, if any.

It is a good plan to arrange to water the vases you fill and if you water several hundred at $2 or $2.50 each for the season it does not seem a large charge for the individual, but it will be found a better paying operation than the charge for filling, and you have the opportunity to care for your own work.

BEDDING OUT.

The time for bedding out has arrived —at least, over the greater part of the country, floriculturally speaking, the time for planting out most of the soft-wooded stock is from May 15 to the early part of June. Earlier than this date there is danger of frost. Indeed, so warm was March and the early part of April that a good many people were impatient to get their lawns and window-boxes in shape, and some florists who yielded to their customers' insistence have now to explain why they did so—the cold of late April and early May has ruined whatever tender stock was exposed to it.

It is the duty of the florist to suggest the most appropriate style of bedding to his customers where advice is asked for, and poor policy to crowd in more than is discreet when it is left to his judgment. In residence streets a flower bed on the lawn between the house and the sidewalk is not good taste. At the side or slightly to the rear of the house is much better. Houses of a moderate size, with verandas at side and front, have often a row or two of cannas in the border surrounding the veranda, and extremely handsome they look.

Florists are divided into several classes. The strictly store man has no interest in bedding plants, nor has the wholesale grower more than to dispose of them, but the great majority of the florists of the country raise bedding plants for their spring crops and depend upon their sale for a good part of their income. If well and carefully done and a fair and just charge made, customers will be unlikely to leave and one can depend on the order from year to year.

The profit will largely depend upon the florists' ability to keep a good stock of plants in a comparatively small space till after Easter. From fall till after Easter benches are wanted for successive crops, but Easter sales largely clear them except those planted with roses and carnations. Geraniums can be then given their last shift, and so can ageratum, feverfew, heliotrope and salvia. Coleus can be grown from a cutting to a fine bedding plant in eight weeks. Cannas and caladiums can be kept in flats till the middle of April and then make fine plants by June 1. Petunias can be pricked out in pans and then in six weeks will make the best of bedding plants. Centaurea, coleus, achyranthes, verbenas, heliotropes, many of the geraniums, lobelias, aloysias, and all the carpet bedding plants, are far better in the hotbeds than in the greenhouses, giving plenty of room for the spreading out of fine geraniums, cannas and caladiums.

Bedding plants are all soft-wooded and while they rest largely, or can be just kept slowly growing during winter, they feel the suns of spring and must have attention when it is needed or it is too late. How often you hear the remark: "No, I am short on this or that. Was too busy and neglected them." This attention is only close application and good management. Having sufficient help at the right time, and setting the men at the work most suited to them, is the very best of good management. One would have hard work to suggest a business where neglect to do work at the proper time will bring about worse results.

Half the success with bedding plants depends upon the planting out. Those who do much of this work charge nothing for planting if the bed is dug and prepared and the plants to fill it amount to, say, $5 or more. If not prepared they charge for labor, manure, etc. The florist who is trying to give results always prefers to plant where there is no gardener kept, for then it is properly done. Sufficient plants are put in to make a good appearance. If the bed looks skimpy, you don't want it to be known that they were your plants, and you will perhaps get the blame for poor general effect, for there are plenty of unreasonable people about.

Good planters arrange the plants carefully, just placing them in the holes, but not filling in the soil, and then when all are in place give each plant a good soaking and in a few minutes fill in with the dry soil. That watering is worth ten applied on the surface. Tell your customers that cannas and caladiums can be soaked every dry evening, but that geraniums and beds of coleus and almost everything else should be left alone except in dry times, when a thorough soaking should be given once a week, followed by a hoeing the next morning if the plants are not touching each other.

In charging for the bedding plants, you should put down in your daybook just how many plants of each variety it took to fill the different beds. Then, if the customer orders the bed filled with geraniums again next year you will refer to the charge of last year and find that it took a certain number of plants to do the job. Whether you plant the same or vary it, you will know exactly how many are needed. Again, one is asked a hundred times this question: "I have a flower bed eight feet across. How many geraniums will it take to fill it?" Planters generally reckon ten inches apart for 4-inch geraniums, about nine inches for coleus, fifteen inches for cannas and caladiums. You can have a card with the sizes of the beds and quantities needed all made out, so that you can give an answer in a few minutes, whereas, if you do not have the thing figured out you will have to do a sum in mathematics while somebody else is waiting for an interview.

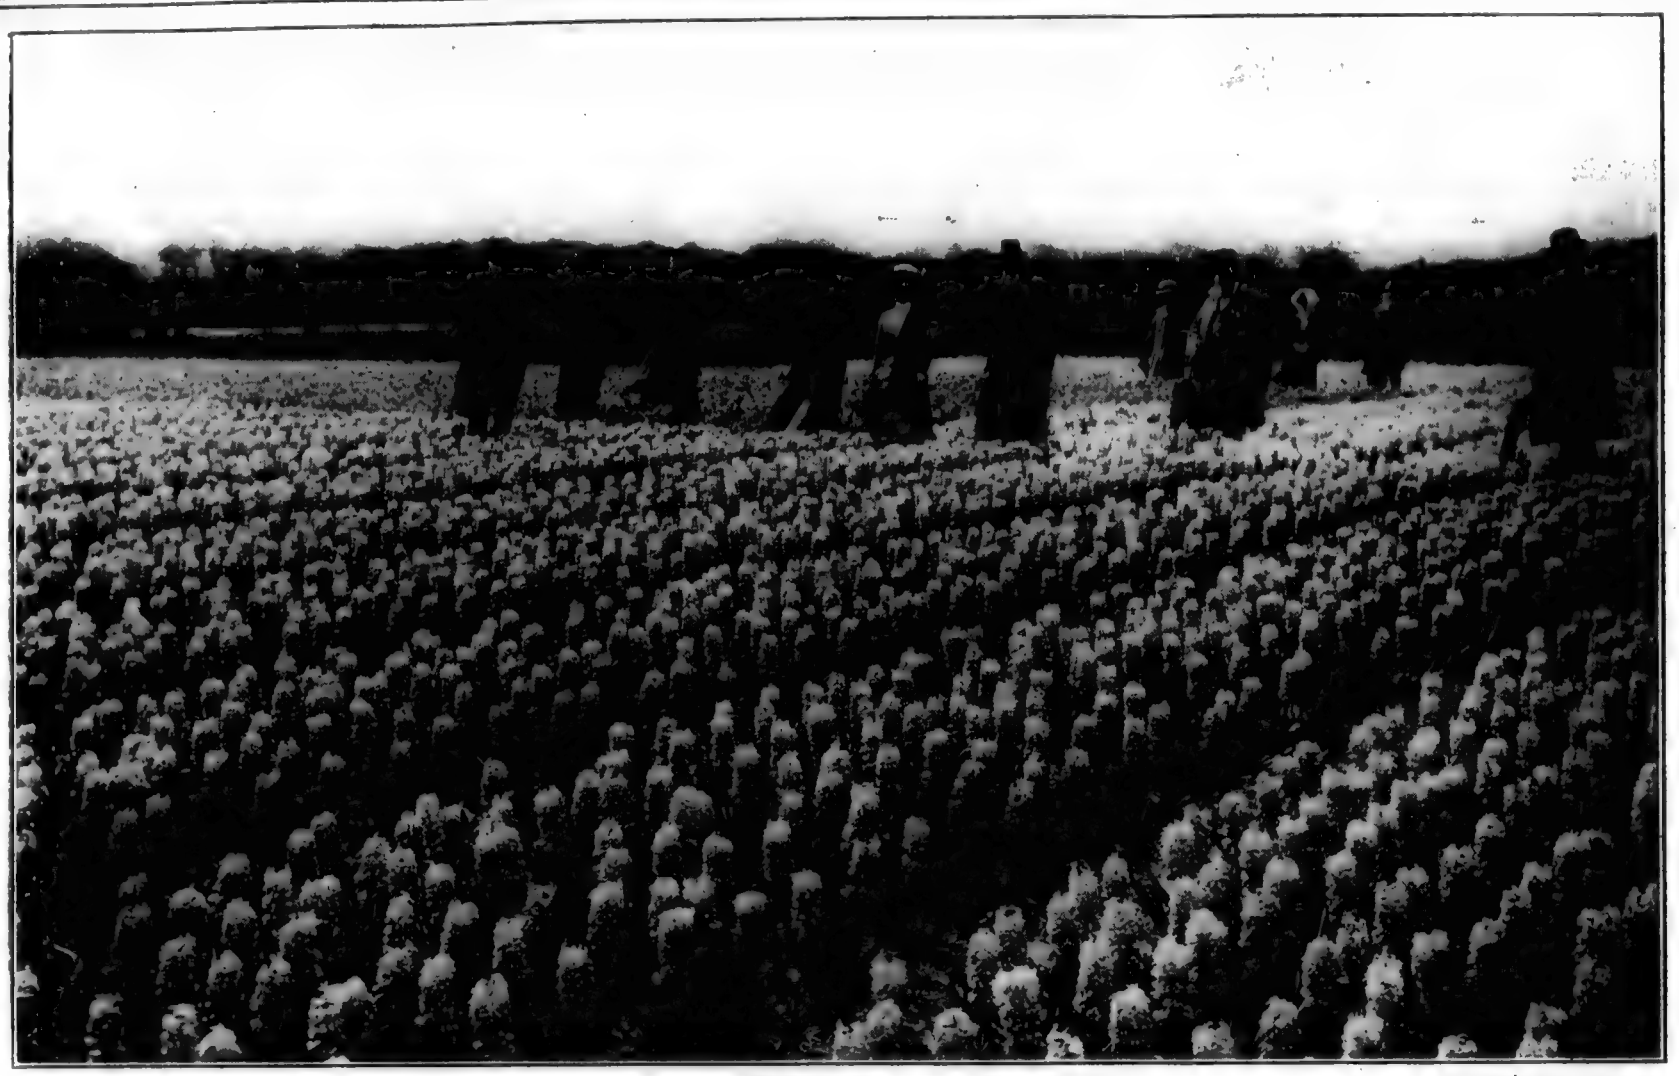
BRUSSELS EXPOSITION.

From Haarlem's paradise of flowers I went on to Brussels, and here another feast of flowers was in store. The horticultural section is part of the great international industrial exhibition in Brussels, which runs from May to October, and, to the credit of horticulture, the flower exhibition was the only complete section in the great area devoted to the products of nations. The grounds around the half-finished buildings were in a state of disorder, and, in spite of the activity on all sides, it will be well into June before everything is shipshape. Horticulturists, however, were hard pressed to get their exhibits staged on time, owing to the general confusion, but the jury commenced business only an hour or so late, with M. Truffaut, from Paris, as president, and W. Watson, of Kew, England, and Arthur De Smet, Ghent, Belgium, as vice-presidents.



The display was characterized by a most artistic arrangement of groups of plants and flowers, all of the highest merit, especially the orchids, lilacs, carnations and azaleas. In orchids, Ch. Vuylstehe, Loochristy, was awarded three gold medals; in hybrid odontoglossums he is unassailable. Ch. Dietrich was awarded a gold medal for a pretty collection of cattleyas, miltonias and odontoglossums. Ch. Maron, from Brunsy, France, received a similar award. In the same section gold medals were awarded to Stuart Low & Co., Bush Hill Park, England, and to Charlesworth & Co., Haywards Heath, England.

The best carnations were from English exhibitors, namely: C. Engelmann, Saffron Walden, who received a large gold medal for a magnificent group of splendid blooms, and Stuart Low & Co., who were awarded a gold medal for a smaller group.

Naturally, azaleas were an important feature. Ch. Vuylstehe again came to the front with nicely flowered specimens, and August Haerens, Somergem, had a most extensive exhibit. Lady Roosevelt, Lilacs in pots in great variety, all well flowered, were capitally arranged by F. Stepman de Messemacher. The group was a most imposing one and the exhibitor carried off all the leading prizes in this section.

Jean Brache, Loochristy, who prides himself upon being the possessor of the most complete collection of rhododendrons in Belgium, was awarded highest honors for his collection of well flowered specimens, three to four feet in height.

R. P. Ker & Sons, Liverpool, England, staged the best amaryllis, with Louis Van Houtte, Ghent, Belgium, close behind.

Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co., Paris, arranged a fine group of cinerarias, including Boule de Neige, which is sure to be in great demand, also Primula obconica in splendid strains, herbaceous calceolarias, etc., for which gold medals were awarded.

Hartmann, of Ghent, arranged araucarias in many sizes; Sander, Bruges, had bay trees in all sizes, splendid, healthy specimens, and the Societie Anonyme Flandria, Bruges, had a large, representative collection of palms.

New Holland plants from De Smet, Vinderhaute, all splendidly flowered specimens, beautifully arranged, covered a large area. In decorative foliage plants, Societie Anonyme Horticole, Ghent, and A. Dalliere, Ghent, were in the front rank. BEE.

POINSETTIAS.

Please advise the proper treatment for poinsettias from this time until marketing. I have my plants out in flats and they are showing growth. How should these cuttings be handled? J. W. S.

As soon as the cuttings are two and one-half to three inches long, rub them off with a heel; dip them at once in some powdered charcoal to stop the bleeding. Place them in a propagating bench where the sand is rather gritty. Some successful growers prefer mixing some fine charcoal in the sand. Keep them well watered and carefully protected from sunshine. In a warm house they will be rooted in three to four weeks. Pot them off singly while the roots are small. If allowed to remain until the roots are several inches long, they are liable to become broken, and the cuttings get hard and fail to start well after potting. Use leaf-mold and loam with some sand at first potting and keep in a close, warm house. Later they can be grown in a cooler house, or even in coldframes, successfully.

If you want to grow the plants in benches for cutting, plant out before they get too much potbound. A compost such as suits chrysanthemums answers well. A house which can be kept at 60 to 65 degrees at night after the bracts show is necessary if you want fine heads.

If wanted for pans, later propagation, say from June 10 to July 15, is sufficiently early. Any rooted now would become much too tall before flowering time. Fine single heads can be grown in 6-inch pots, averaging fifteen to eighteen inches across. For the last shift use a compost of fibrous loam, dry cow manure and sand, adding a little fine bone. Pot firmly and do not feed until the bracts show. Avoid dryness at the root, and sogginess, each of which will cause a loss of foliage. The plants, once established, want full sun all the time. C. W.

BUTTERFLY SWEET PEAS.

I should like to grow a couple of houses of the Butterfly (Spencer) sweet peas next year and should like to get the names and colors that sell best, also the time to plant so they will come in the latter part of April. I intend to plant these two houses so they will come in the middle of October, and two more to come in in January. By replanting the two again, I should be able to ship continuously from October to June. J. F. N.

The Spencer varieties of sweet peas require a rather longer season under glass to flower than the older type. Sow the seeds early in January and they will not be any too early. Some sown last Christmas started flowering here April 10, being grown in an average night temperature of 48 degrees. Sow the seeds in flats and transplant, allowing four to five inches between each plant. This will give much stronger haulm and stems than those allowed to grow more thickly.

Some of the most popular colors of Spencer sweet peas are: White Spencer; Countess of Spencer, clear pink; Mrs. Routzahn Spencer, delicate pink on apricot ground, very charming, a large flower; Asta Ohn Spencer, lavender, suffused mauve, a beautiful shade; Primrose Spencer, pale primrose. These Spencer sweet peas do well under glass until July 1, if they have a large, airy house. C. W.

WINTER FLOWERING PEAS.

Let me know as to what kind of soil I must use for the growing of winter-flowering sweet peas. The land I am going to put the houses on has well rotted manure in it, also some nitrate of soda. What is the best food for the peas and what are the best varieties? Also tell me where I can purchase a book on sweet pea cultivation. F. B.

If you have good, deep soil which is liberally manured, sweet peas should do well in it. The drainage, of course, should be good. If inclined to hold water on any part, it will require draining, either by tiles, to carry the water outside, or by a good bed of stones or coarse cinders. There is no need for bed or benches. Sweet peas do best grown right in the ground. The rows should be five to six feet apart for best results. They are sometimes seen much closer, but that is a mistake. I would never plant even the shortest growers closer than four or four and one-half feet apart. The houses cannot be too light. Ample height must be provided. The rows are best lengthways of the houses.

Well rotted cow or horse manure should be used freely in preparing the soil. Spread it three to four inches thick and get it down to the bottom of the trenches when spading the ground over. Sheep manure and fine bone are useful as surface dressings during the flowering season. Fork the ground after applying. Nitrate of soda I do not approve of, except for hurrying or toning up a crop.

Good winter varieties are now quite numerous. A few popular ones are: Mont Blanc, Watchung, Florence Denzer and Snowbird, white; Mrs. Alexander Wallace, lavender; Mrs. William Sim, salmon; Christmas Pink or Earliest of All, pink and white.

I do not know of any book treating on sweet pea culture under glass. C. W.

SWEET PEAS FOR OUTDOORS.

I want to plant sweet peas in the open ground for summer and fall blooming. Will you kindly tell me which will be the best pink, white and lavender, I could use? Should the soil be heavily manured? H. M.

Soil for sweet peas must be heavily manured and deeply plowed or spaded, to secure best results. The following varieties can be highly recommended for outdoor culture: White, Dorothy Eckford; orange-pink, Helen Lewis; blush pink, Mrs. Routzahn Spencer; clear pink, Countess of Spencer; lavender, Lady Grisel Hamilton or Frank Dolby.

Sweet peas should be sown as soon as possible after frost has left the ground. If sown while the ground is cool and moist, they will make strong roots before the tops appear. If sown when the ground has become warm and dry, they germinate quickly, but the stems are always weak, the plants having few roots to support them. Mulching is of great benefit, as it keeps the roots cooler and more moist. C. W.

SWEET PEA PRIZES.

The following additional prizes have been offered for the annual exhibition of the National Sweet Pea Society of America, to be held in July: F. R. Pierson Co., prize for the best twelve vases of sweet peas; first prize $10, second prize $5; Aphine Mfg. Co., prize for the best collection of sweet peas, open to the florists only; first prize $15, second prize $10; Anton Zvolanek, prize for the best ten vases of Spencer and Unwin types, $10; John Young, prize for the best vase of sweet peas never before exhibited, $5.

We are expecting additional prizes and the regular schedule is now in course of preparation. The preliminary schedule will be mailed upon application to anyone requiring it.

If any concern or individual wishes to offer a prize for the coming exhibition, kindly notify the secretary. The prospects are that we shall have not less than 3,000 vases exhibited this summer. Details and particulars will be furnished later. Harry A. Bunyard, Sec'y.

CARRIED-OVER CARNATIONS.

I have some small White Enchantress carnation plants which I housed late last fall and they bloomed during the winter. Could these be cut back, planted out and housed again this fall? If so, how should they be treated? G. C. H.

As a general proposition we do not favor running carnation plants over for a second season, but, as there are exceptions to all rules, we would not hesitate to do so under certain conditions.

When the plants are handled properly, it can be done with success. We have this season a bed of Beacon which was worked for cuttings. After the propagating season ended we cut them back quite hard, so that when the new breaks came the plants would be low and bushy. At the present time the prospects for a fine bed of Beacon are good.

I would advise you to lose no time in cutting back your plants, so that they will be making new growth before the weather gets too hot. Do not be afraid to cut them back hard. I would say, leave the main branches about four inches long. Clean off all the dead leaves and do not be alarmed if you have only bare stems left when you are through cleaning. Run the roots a little on the dry side, but not extremely so, until the breaks appear. A light spraying once or twice on bright days will help the eyes to break. When growth is resumed, water more liberally and give a good, heavy mulch of rotted stable manure. Guard against red spider by syringing hard every few days during the summer months. More mulching and feeding will be required than with young stock, planted in new soil, to keep the plants growing and producing good blooms.

There is less danger in this method of treatment than there is in transplanting the plants either to the field or to another bench. The critical point is from the time of cutting back to the resumption of new growth. Be careful with the watering; if this is overdone the breaks will come weak, and if the water is withheld the breaks will be few and the plants straggly.

As I said in the beginning, we do not approve or practice this idea except under stress of circumstances. If we happen to be short of a desirable variety, it is permissible. Plants so treated are apt to be fine in the fall and early winter months, but I hardly think they will hold up as well through the season as young plants will. Another objection is, that it cuts a most profitable six weeks off your season, which means much to those who have a good demand for their blooms all through June. A. F. J. B.

WHITE FLY ON GERANIUMS.

I send you a sample of some of my flowers that are affected with some disease. My geraniums are nearly all like the leaves I send to you. Scarlet sage and even fuchsias are getting the same way. The little white flies get under the leaves, making them all curl up. Now, what shall I do to get rid of them? I smoke with tobacco stems and use snuff, but it does not take any effect on them. What shall I do to get rid of the flies?

G. G. Y.

The leaves sent were all badly attacked by white fly, one of the worst pests attacking greenhouse plants. Fumigation with tobacco stems, or, in fact, any of the nicotine preparations, is of little avail against this fly. You can keep under control somewhat by syringing with soap, but the only thoroughly effectual remedy is fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas. Use the gas on a cool evening; likelihood of injury to foliage is much less in a low than a high temperature. You will find frequent articles in recent back numbers of the REVIEW about the use of this gas, and you can thoroughly clean out the pest in no other way.

Once you have used this gas and mastered any little details regarding it, you will find it not so difficult to use as many think. It is deadly, and must be used with care, but many hundreds of growers now rely on it for controlling insect pests under glass. C. W.

BEDDING GERANIUMS.

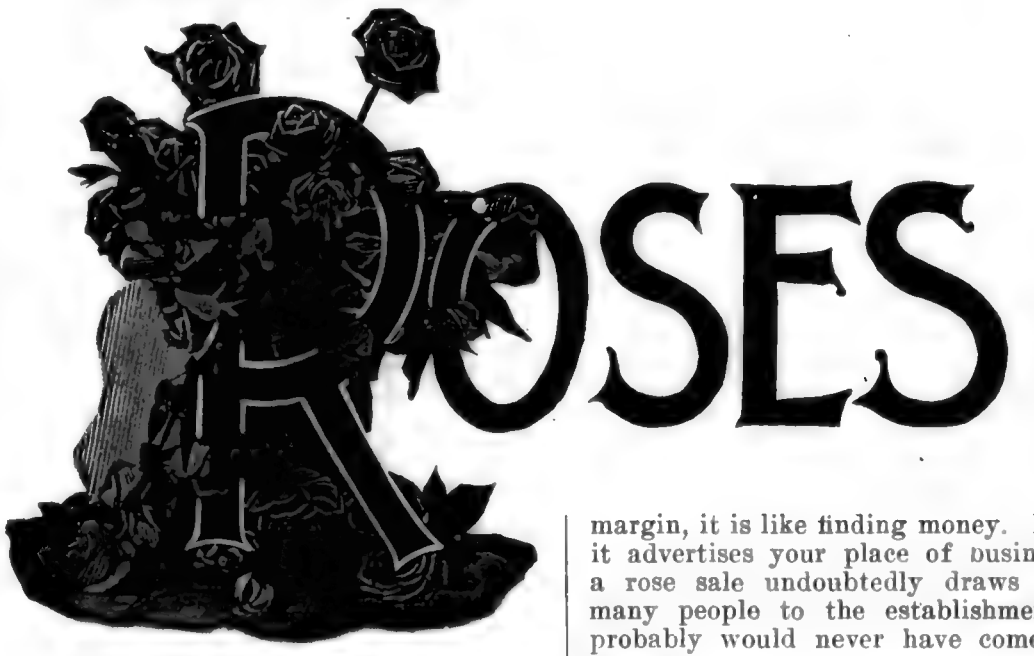
In the cities of even quite northern states geranium planting is now under way. If well hardened, a light frost will not harm geraniums. A temporary bronzing of the leaves will soon give way to greener, luxuriant looking foliage. In spite of the advance in the popularity of cannas, there is no bedding plant yet in sight which is a serious rival to the geranium in popularity, and, in spite of a steadily increasing supply each year, there is rarely much of a surplus left.

Nearer Memorial day, orders for bedding come so thick that it is hard to keep abreast of them. It is, therefore, an advantage to have some early orders filled, if this can be safely and satisfactorily done before the strenuous bedding season starts. The taste for mixtures of geraniums continues to decline. Blocks or beds of one color are far the most effective. Some there are who like to see a bordering of some variegated geranium, like Mme. Salleroi, around a bed of Nutt, Ricard or Grant, "just to show it off." Leave the bordering out and you will have a far more effective and pleasing bed, but if your customers demand the bordering, of course let them have it.

A common error is to manure geranium beds too heavily. This induces a soft, rank growth at the expense of flowers. Another mistake is in having the bed raised considerably above the walk or lawn. This may look well, but it is bad for the plants. A level surface permits the water to reach the roots better. In planting, never set out any which have the balls at all dry. We prefer to have them well soaked. Press the ground firmly around them. There is then no need to water for some days, even if the weather is dry. Too often this watering is overdone and is a positive detriment to the plants. Night after night the hose is played on beds until the surface bakes like a macadamized road. One thorough watering a week, with a good loosening of the soil the following day, will do a lot more good than the persistent pouring of water over the beds.

NAME OF GERANIUM.

Can you tell me the name of the enclosed geranium? The plant is a stocky grower and has large clusters of bright red flowers. W. E. G.



As near as can be told from specimen received, the variety is Jacquerie, or one nearly akin to it. C. W.

ORNITHOGALUM ARABICUM.

Can you give me some information as to the culture of Ornithogalum Arabicum? I bought fifty bulbs last fall for blooming in the greenhouse. I treated them as I did the allium—kept them in a dark place, away from frost, for two months and then brought them into the greenhouse, set the pots (deep azalea pots) on the bench and watched them grow. From the fifty bulbs I had just two blossoms. All grew green leaves, but only two bulbs bloomed. I have decided that I need some instructions and shall be grateful if you will inform me on this subject. A. W. W.

Ornithogalum Arabicum is a notoriously uncertain plant, being about as capricious in its nature as any other bulbous plant I know. There are generally supposed to be two varieties in commerce, one free flowering, the other the reverse. Possibly you have got stock of the latter. The proper way to treat bulbs is:

Pot as soon as received in the fall. Do not water them or place them in a dark place, as you would alliums and other bulbs, but stand on a shelf in full sun and give the bulbs a good baking. Just as soon as they show signs of growing, begin to apply water. With this treatment many of the bulbs will flower. Like the nerines, or Guernsey lilies, they must have a thorough baking, or they will not bloom. Some part of the trouble may also arise from premature digging, the bulbs not being properly ripened. C.

THE PLANTING SEASON.

Disposing of the Old Plants.

The plans for planting should be complete by this time and everything in readiness for work, as general planting can be started after Memorial day. In order to make as much out of the old plants as possible, it is well to advertise them in your home town at a reasonable price, for planting out. These old plants, especially Beauty, Chatenay, Reid, Killarney and Richmond, make excellent bloomers during the summer. As these plants have to be thrown out anyhow, if they can be disposed of at a price that will pay for the work and leave a small margin, it is like finding money. Besides, it advertises your place of business, for a rose sale undoubtedly draws a good many people to the establishment that probably would never have come otherwise.

Our experience has taught us that June planting is the most profitable, and the planting should be pushed along so that by July 10 every rose shall be planted.

After the old soil has been removed from the benches and all repairs have been made, the house should get a thorough cleaning, including the washing of the benches, walls and glass, as there is always an accumulation of scum and dirt from the preceding year, which, if not attended to when the house is empty, is difficult to remove after the planting is done, and then a great many times it is put off, and in such cases you can generally see it there the next year.

All wooden benches should be washed and should then receive a good coating of hot lime. This, while acting as a preservative to the wood, is a great help in destroying insects.

Planting and Future Care.

When filling the benches, the soil should be spread evenly and each lump of any size should be broken up, so that it may settle evenly with the future watering.

Particular care is necessary to prevent taking wet soil into the house, as soil that is handled in that condition is bound to pack, which greatly impairs its usefulness.

At the time of planting in the benches, it is well to give the soil a sprinkling of bone meal. This is done by simply spreading the meal on the surface, without stirring it in, as all the bone the young plants need at that time will fall around them at the time of planting.

When planting young stock they should be handled with the same care and interest that they have received since propagating time. This should be watched closely, for the success of a house depends a great deal on this one point.

The plants should be disturbed as little as possible when turning them out of the pots, and should be planted firmly, just deep enough to cover the balls and leaving a small depression around the plants to receive water.

The plants should be disturbed as little as to prevent the formation of mud. Each plant should be watered separately for a week or so, until the roots begin to spread. It is well to syringe frequently during favorable weather, to encourage leaf development.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Gardenias.

We like to plant our new stock of gardenias in the benches early in June. They are now nicely rooted in 3-inch pots and it may be necessary to give them a shift into 4-inch pots, rather than allow them to become potbound. Some growers think it pays to carry over old plants. Sometimes these can be pruned back and break nicely. The trouble, however, is that collar rot is liable to attack them. No matter how carefully they are looked after, once this appears the plants are useless. Rather than run any risk of this kind, it is better to plant afresh each summer. Much of the success of gardenia culture lies in having the compost sufficiently porous so that water passes readily through it. In fine soil which holds moisture long, the plants will inevitably fall a prey to the yellows.

Good fibrous loam two-thirds, and the other third dried, rather lumpy cow manure, broken charcoal and coarse sand makes an excellent compost. A few shovels of soot, mixed through the pile before housing it, will assist materially in keeping the foliage a dark, lustrous green color. Do not use over five inches of soil; four inches is better than six. Allow the plants eighteen to twenty inches between the rows and set them fifteen to eighteen inches apart. Do not soak the whole bed when watering them; merely water around each plant and never saturrate the beds, even in the hottest, most drying weather. Benches with some heating pipes below them are best when flowers in winter are wanted, and the house they are grown in should be piped to maintain a minimum of 68 to 70 degrees in the most severe weather.

Bedding Out.

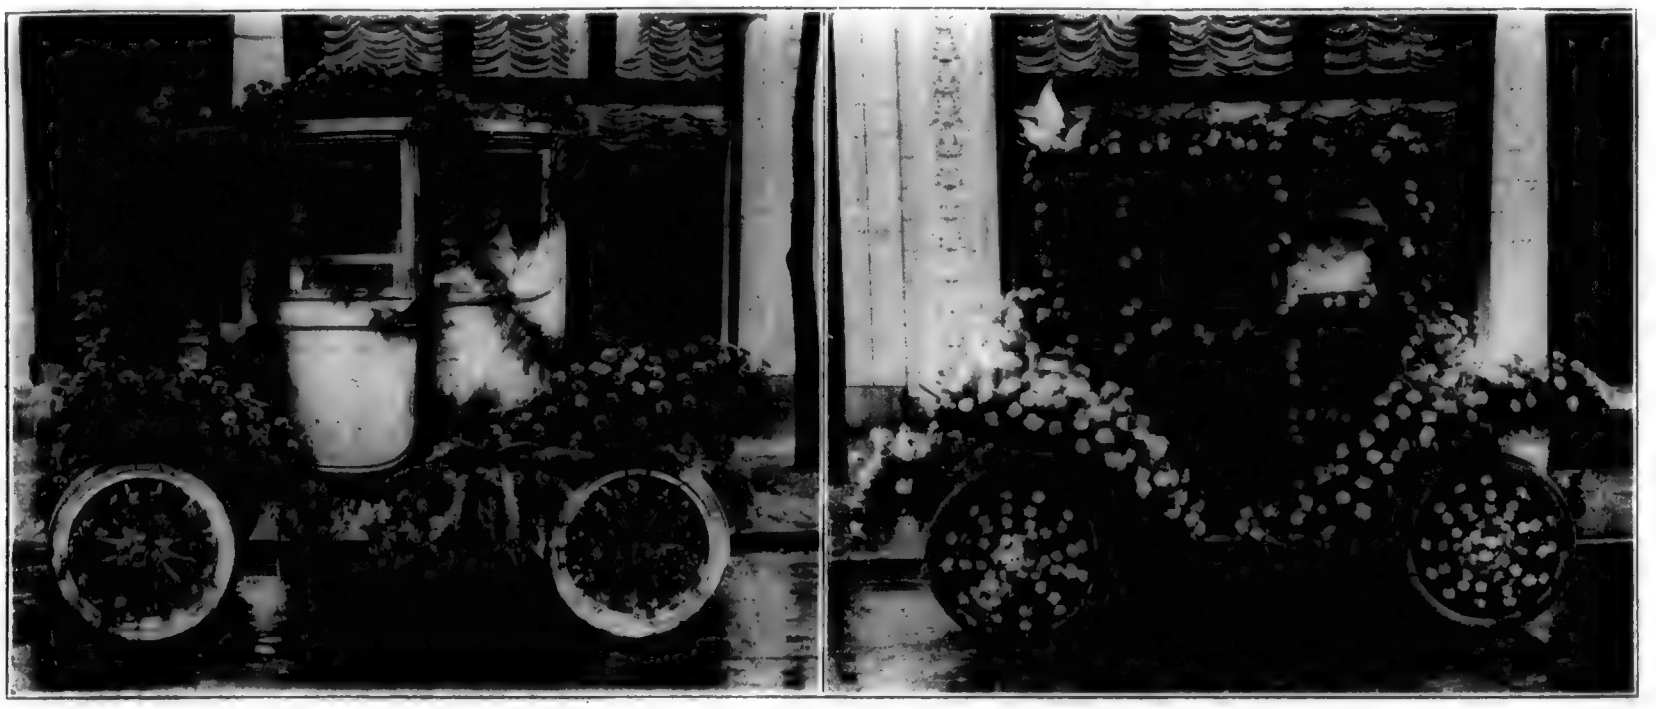
The weather has been so unseasonably cool during May that it has militated against the sale of tender bedding plants. It is always a great advantage to the average country florist if orders come along in good season and climatic conditions permit of at least a fair proportion of the bedding-out being done before Memorial day. The cut flower business in itself taxes one's energies at that season. A great many customers want their flower beds filled at home and vases or small grave lots filled in the cemetery and every effort should be made to get this work done. It will probably mean long hours for all hands, but then Memorial day comes but once a year and we can stand it.

Geraniums remain the most popular of all bedding plants, and if well hardened will not suffer any harm from even a light frost. One variety to a bed is the most effective way to use them. A band of Mme. Salleroi around Jean Viaud or Jacquerie does not add to its beauty and it is the same in vases. One filled, say, with S. A. Nutt wants no variegated vinca to "set it off," to use a hackneyed phrase. If a drooping plant is used, let it be one with green foliage.

Except in the warmer states, it is too early to risk alternantheras, acalyphas, crotons, coleus and similar tender foliage plants outdoors, but geraniums, verbenas, begonias, lobelias, ageratums and other varieties can go out with safety. Cannas are rather more delicate. Dahlias, or at least green ones from cuttings, should be kept under cover a little longer. Heliotropes and scarlet salvias are both tender. On the other hand, such annuals as stocks, asters, Drummond's phlox and dianthus can go out any time now. Excepting geraniums, which flower best when the soil is not too rich, other bedding plants like plenty of well rotted manure incorporated in the beds.

Vases and Window Boxes.

Rich soil should always be used in vases and window boxes. As the plants have but a moderate root run, they soon ramify through it and, unless it has been well enriched, they will show speedy signs of starvation. The use of window boxes shows a surprising increase and many of the retailers in the cities find this no unimportant part of their business. As an advertisement keep one or two filled outside the store to show would-be customers how boxes look if properly planted. As a general rule, it is best to fill these boxes at home, unless they are large and heavy. There are some customers who want their boxes refilled from time to time. When this is the case a number of plants which are not perpetual bloomers are permissible and at this time an arrangement of marguerites, fuchsias, hydrangeas, show pelargoniums and Calceolaria Golden Gem, with suitable drooping plants, like Lobelia gracilis, vinca, ivy geranium or tradescantia, can be used. Ivy geraniums make a beautiful box in themselves and are not nearly enough appreciated.



For piazza boxes greater depth and height is possible than is the case with window boxes; six to eight inches deep for the latter is about the limit, but on piazzas this may well be increased to ten or twelve inches deep and proportionate width to allow of the use of some of the hardier palms, crotons, dracænas, ficus, etc., of tolerable size. In shady spots nephrolepis and other ferns do well. Fancy caladiums are excellent later in the season, if they are not too wind-swept. All boxes, if at all possible, should be filled now and kept in a greenhouse until wanted. In using palms, Phœnix rupicola or Carariensis stands sun and wind well. Kentias are not adapted for a sunny location, neither are latanias. Dracæna Australis and D. congesta are good green plants for centerpieces and will stand sun or shade equally well.

Memorial Day Crops.

More flowers are sold at Memorial day than any other holiday in the year and the uncertain weather conditions have kept growers guessing as to what flowers will be in season. It looks at this time as though indoor flowers would be particularly valuable and every effort should be made to have as large a cut as possible ready. About every florist has a host of orders for bouquets to fill and a large variety of flowers can be used for this purpose. Crops of ten weeks' stocks, double feverfews, snapdragons, gladioli, larkspurs, candytuft, Spiræa Japonica and lilies want careful watching. If rather late, give them more heat; if early, retard as much as possible. Gladioli, lilies, callas and a few other flowers will keep some time in the cut flower room. Everything with bright flowers is in great request, so that any late tulips which can be cut and kept fresh will net good prices. While we disapprove of the wholesale pickling of supplies, there are a number of flowers which it will pay every florist to cut and hold on hand for Memorial day.

Cyclamens.

In the rush of other duties do not overlook cyclamens. A little scratching over of the surface soil, removal of weeds and occasional spreading out will be all that is necessary until the plants are ready for larger sized pots, which should be five inches in diameter. A night reading of 52 to 55 degrees, shade during the warmest part of the day, a spraying with some nicotine extract once in ten days and careful watering will help to build up nice, stocky plants. Avoid using any heavy shade, as it only causes a spindling growth. When time permits, prepare some compost to use when the plants are ready for larger pots. Sterilization of the soil will help to ward off attacks of mite, and also accounts for all insects and larvæ contained therein.

Brief Reminders.

Chrysanthemums should be potted on if benches are not ready. They speedily spoil if left to mat in the pots and once they become hard are of little value.

Water spring planted evergreens if weather continues cool and dry. Keep a good mulch around the roots.

Put in poinsettia cuttings before they get too long. They are preferable if taken off with a heel.

Provide shade for gloxinias and tuberous begonias, to prevent scorching of the foliage.

Do any pruning to lilacs while they are in flower. A good plan is to head back the long, strong center shoots.

Spray hardy roses with hellebore water, or use the poison blown through a powder bellows while the foliage is damp.

Get the spraying pumps in readiness to fight the elm tree beetle and other injurious pests. Arsenate of lead can be recommended as a sovereign remedy.

Jot down the names of some desirable late tulips and plan to grow a few at least another season.

Palms should be hosed well at least once a day. Use the spray nozzle. It helps to keep the foliage clean.

Keep a sharp look-out for cutworms and use poisoned mash directly after any signs of their attacks are visible.

Do not forget to pot along the little seedlings of Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri. Give them a moderately warm house and some shade for a time.

In selling geraniums and other bedding stock, be sure not to forget to save sufficient stock for yourself and do not keep all the weakest plants, although the temptation to do so is often strong.

DECORATING AUTOMOBILES.

The decoration of automobiles for parades promises to become an important part of the business. But one fact should be recognized at the outset: If the owner of the automobile is not prepared to spend a fair sum, it is just as well to let the job go to the fellow down the street; those who have tried decorating automobiles with greenhouse flowers have found that considerable outlay is required to make a showing that anybody concerned will consider creditable.

The accompanying illustrations are reproduced from photographs of automobiles decorated by leading Chicago retailers for the recent parade in that city.

PURE SUPERPHOSPHATE.

Where can superphosphate be purchased in a form that is completely soluble in water? G. W. D. & S.

The best place to secure this article in its purest state, or in fact in any degree of purity, is at some wholesale chemist's. If he does not have it in stock, he will be able to say where it can be got.

RIBES.

DISTANCE APART FOR COLEUS.

Would you kindly let us know how far apart to set coleus when a solid coleus bed is made for lettering in various colors? Also, how many inches apart when used for bordering canna beds, etc.?

M. & J.

If you have plants of average bedding-out size, allow them eight to nine inches apart each way. With a little necessary topping they will soon cover the ground. For borderings, ten to twelve inches apart is sufficiently close, although they are sometimes planted much closer; in some cases only six to eight inches apart. The latter is, however, altogether too close, unless it is wished to use as many plants as possible, not a policy to be recommended. C. W.

SEASONABLE NOTES.

Odontoglossums.

Odontoglossums are the most difficult of all orchids to grow in the United States. Coming, as they do, from locations where a maximum of 65 degrees is rarely exceeded, it is telling on them when we get hot waves, with temperatures of 90 to 95 degrees in the shade for several successive days. Yet, while these most beautiful of all orchids are hard to succeed with, more growers are handling them successfully than ten years ago. An old error was to give them a low winter temperature of 45 degrees in a north house, whereas 10 degrees higher in a sunny house, which will give the leaves a ruddy hue, hardens them, makes them flower better and earlier and puts them in a vastly better condition for standing our torrid summers than the dark-green-leaved plants grown in shady houses. Some day, when an inexpensive system of artificial refrigeration for greenhouses is possible, we may grow good odontoglossums, such as abound in Europe. Until then we must be satisfied with rather mediocre ones.

Before the arrival of hot nights, move the odontoglossums into a north house. If sunken below the ground level, it will be much cooler. As the flowering season is now nearly over, many can be repotted. Use pots about half filled with crocks, mix a little sphagnum in chopped fern fiber for compost, and put a little of the moss on the surface if you are sure it will not bring a crop of shell snails, which will later devastate the flower spikes as they appear. After repotting, the plants will need little water other than sprayings overhead until roots and growths are being freely produced. Allow the plants to have some early morning sun, and during the latter part of the afternoon, and air freely at night.

Such varieties as O. citrosmum and O. pulchellum majus succeed well at the warm end of the cattleya house. The former is now flowering and succeeds best in pans suspended from the roof. For summer, shading lath or cloth blinds suspended a foot above the glass are better than putting whitening on the glass, as they keep the house much colder.

Summer Cattleyas.

Summer cattleyas are now making a gorgeous show and they are of such easy culture that no commercial grower with even a small place need be afraid to try his hand at one or the other of them. C. Mossiæ is now in its glory and is of easy culture. Keep the plants drier at the root and cooler while in flower. In the case of buying new stock, never buy established plants unless obliged to. The specialists, of course, cull out all the choice forms as they bloom and ask fancy prices for them. In getting a case, it is not at all unlikely that a white-sepaled and petaled one will much more than pay for the original outlay.

Cattleya Skinneri is a useful summer variety of a color much like the autumn flowering C. Bowringeana. It succeeds well at the coldest end of the house, where a winter minimum of 55 degrees is maintained. C. Mendellii is a beautiful summer orchid. The sepals and petals are usually nearly pure white. It is more expensive than Mossiæ, hence is less grown for the markets. It likes the warmest end of the house, with C. Trianæ, when growing. A few C. gigas are already open. This is the largest and most showy of all cattleyas. The flowers lack the substance of other sorts named and must be well shaded to prevent burning. C. gigas likes more heat than some cattleyas and enjoys being up close to the glass.

Many importations of cattleyas have lately come to hand and will soon arrive. On arrival, sponge the plants carefully. Cut out any decayed bulbs. Stand them on a bench, or, better still, hang them below a center bench until they start to break. Pots or pans are better than baskets. The roots are in more perfect control in them. The old idea about these plants having aëriel roots and feeding on the air is utter nonsense. Keep them inside the pots if you want healthy plants. Pure osmunda fiber is the only potting medium needed. Water not at all for a starter, but give fine sprayings each afternoon. As roots appear and pseudo-bulbs advance, water a little, but better give too little rather than an oversupply.

If we could all use movable shades on our cattleya houses, as in Europe, we would get better results, but it is too laborious where large collections are grown. The next best thing is kerosene or naphtha and white lead. We sometimes wish, when we get day after day of dark weather, that it was not there, but this is better than trying any colored shadings, which may be all right on palm or fern houses, but are out of place over orchids. It should be possible to leave some air on cattleya houses all the time now, and the night temperature may vary from 62 to 65 degrees, although on hot nights it will exceed that. Watering after June 1 we like to do in the afternoon, and a spraying on bright afternoons is refreshing.

New Bedford, Mass.—John H. Cleary, employed by Wm. P. Peirce, the Market street florist, was recently an important witness in the trial of one of the county officials for malfeasance in office.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The general condition of the market is about the same as at the last writing. The large supply of stock of all kinds meets with a fair demand and moves at fair prices. The quality of the blooms is noticeably better. The supply of roses is still large and of the finest quality. They move readily, but only at fair prices. The white varieties are especially in request.

The supply of carnations was large, and the call for them took them up slowly. In spite of this, the prices were scarcely shaded at all. There was just enough white to meet the demand.

Sweet peas are taken up by the buyers as rapidly as they are offered. Valley is a little scarce, but apparently enough is on hand to meet the demand. Gladioli and new stock in cornflowers and delphiniums sell well. Good lilies are offered. There is enough of green goods, such as ferns, leucothoe, smilax, plumosus and Sprengeri, to meet all demands.

Various Notes.

Weiland & Olinger are installing a new battery of self-feeding boilers at their greenhouses at New Castle. They have already received many inquiries and some large orders for flowers for Decoration day.

J. A. Peterson's field of Iris pallida Dalmatica is in full bloom. The flowers are a beautiful shade of lavender. Mr. Greensmith, the horticulturist for the local parks, pronounces it one of the finest sights he ever saw.

C. E. Critchell, while out of town for a few days last week, arranged for large shipments of stock for Decoration day. Large quantities of jasmines are arriving at his place. He has added labels to his stock of supplies.

The Heckman Floral Co. and R. D. Ruttle, of Madison avenue, Covington, supplied many flowers when the new assistant postmaster of their city took his office.

William Murphy reports a large shipping trade. His sweet peas and white carnations are good and are selling well.

Tom Windram is sending good carnations, and Honaker, of Lexington, Ky., excellent roses and carnations to J. M. McCullough's Sons.

A large shipment of magnolia leaves arrived at E. G. Gillett's this week. Clarence Ohmer's plumosus from West Palm Beach, Fla., is fine. Mr. Gillett has his force of wire workers hustling to keep ahead of orders for wire baskets.

L. H. Kyrk offers cornflowers that fill the bill nicely for a small blue flower. These and the delphiniums are from George Klatter, of Price Hill. Mr. Kyrk also has some gool longiflorum.

Wm. Speck is sending fine Harrisii to Critchell's.

Wm. Gardner took a hurried run down from New Castle last Saturday evening. He returned the following evening.

Alex. Ostendarp has the sincere sympathy of the trade. His baby son died last week.

Eddie Bossmeyer, at Critchell's, is again on the sick list.

W. Giles, representing Hummel & Downing, of Milwaukee, Wis., showed his samples to the trade the early part of last week.

Messrs. Goldman, of Middleton, and Lodder, of Hamilton, were in town recently. C. H. H.

BOSTON CLUB MEETING.

Orchid night, May 17, attracted an excellent attendance for a busy season of the year, about 125 members being present. E. O. Orpet, South Lancaster, Mass., was the speaker of the evening and gave an interesting and exhaustive talk on "Orchid Culture." He said pans or pots are preferable to baskets as receptacles and osmunda fern fiber is the best compost. Moss is better left out, on account of its bringing in so many snails, although some species like a surfacing of it. A too common practice is to give plants an excessive night temperature when growth is being made. This is harmful. Mr. Orpet considered a carnation temperature, 52 to 55 degrees at night, all right for many cattleyas and lælias. Plenty of sunshine should be given, as the plants get an abundance of it in their native habitats. Roller or other movable shades are the best; shading on the glass does not give needed light in dark, cloudy weather. He said there is such a thing as too much drying off. The cattleya family, the most popular in America, have no long resting period; seedlings want even less rest than the woodland species, as they usually make two growths per year and are continuously growing. Potting of all orchids should be done in the resting period, which is usually during the winter or earlier spring months. In raising seedlings some are fine and dozens of little value. Hybrids, however, possess sturdy constitutions. In the hot months watering should be done in the evening; in the winter months, in the morning to allow of proper drying out before nightfall. There has of late years been a wonderful development in orchid culture in America, which Boston's big coming show will undoubtedly greatly stimulate.

A good discussion followed the reading of the paper, participated in by Messrs. Butterworth, Cameron, Craig, Palmer, Finlayson and George Stewart. The cattleya fly came in for considerable notice. Cutting out of the young growths was admitted to be the only remedy, although it is a radical one.

Some discussion arose over the annual picnic. An exchange of views showed that some favored a change from previous years' programs, an ocean sail being favored, to some prominent shore resort. The date and place were, however, not decided upon. The question of the S. A. F. national show came up, and a special committee was appointed to consider plans for entertainment and report later. The committee consists of Thomas Pegler, J. P. A. Guerineau, Peter Fisher, Wm. Downs and Robert Cameron.

One new member was elected.

Exhibits included superb snapdragons from Wm. Sim, fine Golden Glow mums from W. W. Edgar Co., a collection of trolliuses from J. Heurlin, and pink calceolarias from Wm. Downs, which latter received a report of merit.

A field day at Wm. Sim's June 4 was decided upon.

It was announced that for the June meeting ladies will be invited and a musical and literary entertainment furnished. Refreshments were served as usual.

CLARKSBURG, W. VA.—C. C. Jarvis, N. J. Hayman and C. H. Griffin have incorporated, with $25,000 capital, to do a greenhouse business.

DETROIT.

The Market.

The last week was a busy one for everyone concerned. In the greenhouses things were not quite as lively as they would have been had we been favored with weather more favorable for outdoor planting. We experienced several severe frosts lately, which did some damage. From now until after May 30 those florists doing outside gardening will be worked to the limit.

In the stores business has been good. The daily arrival at the commission houses of good stock of every description has been large; still the demand, with but few exceptions, was equal to the supply. Large openings of new stores, theaters and several large boat launchings have created a demand for flowers for some time, which means just that much extra business to the florists favored with the orders. The store openings, especially, call for many baskets, horseshoes and big bunches of Beauties. Only in recent years has the practice of sending flowers to the openings become so popular, thanks to those florists who encourage the practice.

Club Meeting.

Besides a large attendance of regular members, there were in attendance, also, a number of engineers of this city, to hear Dr. J. R. Price and W. J. Hubel, of Chicago, and others, talk on the combustion system of heating. This system is the invention of Francis J. Doyle, of Chicago.

Dr. Price went into a lengthy talk on principles of combustion. He had heated an 8-room flat with $18 worth of coal all winter, and with no smoke.

W. J. Hubel spoke of the business end of the Doylair device, stating many instances where the cost of heating was cut nearly in half. All soot and clinkers were done away with, as there is perfect combustion in the Doylair system.

Mayor Breitmeyer said that if this device would do what is claimed for it, he would see that an ordinance was passed making it necessary to use it.

Various Notes.

J. Breitmeyer's Sons are to have a branch store on Woodward avenue and Grand river. This will be in connection with the McDermiad Candy Co.

Taepke's spent a busy Sunday, May 15, decorating Brushaler's new store for the opening.

Thomas Gowanlock was seriously injured by his wagon being hit by a car while he was delivering plants to Gus. Knoch. The horse had to be shot. An auto belonging to Mr. Knoch was damaged by skidding on wet asphalt and hitting a fire alarm pole. The occupants were not hurt. H. S.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The American Rose Society has commissioned the Rev. Dr. Spencer S. Sulliger, of Vancouver, Wash., an amateur rosarian of repute and one of the Pacific coast members of several years' standing, as representative to the annual rose show in England. Dr. Sulliger leaves New York this month for Great Britain.

Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., takes a letter to the international horticultural meeting at Belgium, which he is going to attend. These gentlemen will report back to the society, and the report will form a part of its annual proceedings.

John F. Huss, of Hartford, Conn., one of our prominent members, goes to France and Switzerland, and this trip also is in the interest of roses.

The society has closed up its premium list as awarded at the spring show, with one exception. The membership of paid dues exceeeds the number received as regular members at any previous time.

An inquiry has been received from one of the government departments, as to the value and volume of roses used commercially in the United States, and inquiries forwarded to the various distributing centers have brought responses which indicate that probably one-fourth the value of all flowers grown under glass is in roses. The observations made in travel indicate that the rambler roses are becoming more and more popular, all of which shows that with the growth of the country, the nice things are also coming in for large development.

The officers of the society wish to thank the many donors of special prizes for the prompt response and payment of their respective premiums.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, '01

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.

Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August 16 to 19, 1910.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

True, you can hire your selling done, but, also, if you are a salesman you can hire the growing done.

When the mum and the aster were in season together it was considered a marvel, but now the mum and the peony stand side by side in flower stores! Good Golden Glow are seen.

The comet has got past at last. If it is in any way responsible for the weather conditions of the last few months, nearly everyone will be glad it appears only once in seventy-five years.

"Ten months of the year it is not a question of supply, but of one's ability to find an outlet for the stock." The speaker was one of the leading commission-men of the country and his words support the Review's statement that merchandizing ability is now one of the essentials for success in this trade.

At Ida Grove, Ia., a minister, impressed by the general observance of Mothers' day, designated May 15 as Fathers' day, and asked each member of his congregation to wear the flower that person thought best suited to the day. Communication with Ida Grove being somewhat slow, a waiting world has not yet heard how Father stands in that community.

EXPRESS RATES.

The uprising against the rates charged by the express companies has, all at once, become general. From all parts of the country, and from many business organizations, is coming the demand for a thorough investigation of the subject by the government, either through the Interstate Commerce Commission or a committee of Congress. At both New York and Chicago meetings have been held at which numbers of commercial bodies have joined in resolutions voicing the consensus of opinion that conditions demand an investigation of the present system of charges. The New York meeting last week not only went on record in strong language, but provided a committee with funds to push along the work with the Interstate Commerce Commission. A day or two later a Chicago congressman introduced a resolution in Congress calling for an investigation of express companies, their capitalization and their charges, by a committee of the House of Representatives.

The S. A. F. has pointed with pride to the work accomplished when the general special rate was obtained for plant shipments. If general revision of rates becomes a fact as the result of the agitation now in progress, the S. A. F. will have an opportunity not only to defend what it once obtained, but to look after the interests of cut flower shippers, for it is almost certain that without adequate representation for cut flower interests, the companies will seek to maintain present rates on the plea that special service is given on all such shipments.

WARNING!

Don't Pay Money to Strangers.

Within the last few days the Review has received several complaints from eastern Pennsylvania that "a smooth-talking young fellow" has been falsely representing himself as working for the Review and soliciting new subscriptions or renewals in its name. If a receipt is given it never is on printed blanks, sometimes bears no name or address, but in one case was signed "H. Hunter."

Don't be duped by this petty swindler. If "H. Hunter" shows up, call the police and wire the Review.

Never pay money to strangers, for the Review or on any other account. Review representatives all are well known members of the trade in their respective localities.

A POWDER PASTE.

Do you know the name of a firm in New Jersey that makes a paste put up in a powder form called "Paste Substitute"? We have used it and it is the finest thing for putting the label on cut flower boxes we have ever seen, but unfortunately we have lost the address. I think it was made by some milling concern as a by-product, either in Newark or Paterson. If you can help us find the name of this concern we shall greatly appreciate it. C. F. C.

Who knows the name and address? The Review will be glad to have someone supply the desired information.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The market has enjoyed another week of excellent business. The special demand for Mothers' day cleaned up everything so closely that it gave tone to the market for several days after. In addition, also, the spring months often show considerably greater activity on Tuesdays and Wednesdays than is the case at other seasons of the year. This is accounted for by the special call for flowers for weddings and commencements, which ordinarily are held not later than Thursdays. Friday, Saturday and Monday ordinarily are the best days of the week in this market, so that everyone has been happy for a fortnight or more. Now interest is centering on Decoration day.

One of the reasons that business has been so satisfactory is that there has been neither shortage nor oversupply of stock; the daily receipts have been just about equal to requirements, prices advancing slightly, but at no time exceeding the rates at which stock will move freely. Fair supplies and fair prices result in more money than can be gathered in from the high prices that go only with short supplies, or the large cuts which sometimes glut the market.

The quality of all the stock in the market continues extremely good for so late in the season. Beauties have much larger heads and better color than one expects to see the latter part of May. Killarney is in good form and yielding well with most growers. Richmond is fine, both in color and stem. White Killarney is compelled to compete with first-class Kaiserin, now available in considerable quantity. Maid and Bride are good, but these roses now are second choices. Some fine Jardine, Maryland,

Reid and Cardinal are seen, occasionally a few fine Perle. All roses are selling well and all except Beauties at slightly better prices than earlier in the month. Short and medium Beauties hold stiff, but prices are shaded on long Beauties if the buyer takes a quantity and does not require too close selection.

Carnations have enjoyed an excellent demand ever since Mothers' day, and prices at the beginning of this week were higher than at the close of last week. Average returns to growers for last week will not be so good as the Mothers' day week, because whites have been bringing only a little more than pink. Fancy white and red are the best sellers. As the week has progressed, prices have receded somewhat.

Sweet peas are more abundant; the cut of the Butterfly varieties is on the increase, while there still are fair pickings of the winter bloomers, though these are mostly short in stem. The Butterfly sorts sell briskly at good prices and are extremely nice, clean stock.

Peonies have come in heavily and are selling better than heretofore, though most of the stock has gone into storage. As usual, there are good, bad and indifferent peonies, but not much evidence of frost injury.

Easter lilies have become abundant, several local growers now being in with crops. Callas are slightly less plentiful. Cape jasmines have come on to take the place of the waning bulb stock. Quite a little double narcissus is seen. Miniature gladioli are abundant. Iris is less plentiful. At the end of the week there frequently is an accumulation of valley, which sells well the days wedding flowers are wanted. Cattleyas continue plentiful.

The once popular stephanotis now is one of the dead issues—it won't sell.

There is little change in the green goods market. Leucothoe is pretty nearly out; the stock in cold storage houses has damped off. Mexican ivy also is gone.

Decoration Day Prospects.

The way inquiries and advance orders are coming in leads the wholesale market to look for the largest Decoration day business on record; indeed, Decoration day business has grown so rapidly the last few years that some of the wholesalers expect to exceed Easter in quantity of stock handled and to equal it in money value of sales. That will be "going some."

It is interesting to note that the orders already booked are largely for carnations. No doubt 250,000 already are booked at prices that will average $40 per thousand for good stock. The tendency now is to push the price up a notch. The consensus of opinion is that the supply will not be so large as last year, though the quality will be better.

The general report is that rose crops are on the increase and that supplies will be large and fine.

There will be a large quantity of peonies, southern crops held in cold storage. There is some difference of opinion among the large operators as to what the market will be. One house has seen fit to book a large number of orders at a low price, while another operator is holding back all his best stock in anticipation of realizing better prices than usual at Decoration day. Most of the wholesalers report few advance orders for peonies, but at the outside prices peonies still make more show for the money than most other flowers and a big business is regarded as certain, especially as other outdoor stock is practically out of the running this year.

A large supply of Easter lilies is a factor to be reckoned with.

Growers are being urged not to hold back their stock. Decoration day will not stand high prices. The stock will be wanted May 27 and 28, not later.

The standing of the bowlers after the three games of May 13 was:

Various Notes.

E. C. Amling is an exception to the rule in that where most wholesalers look for light supplies of carnations for Decoration day, he thinks they will prove to be large. A. L. Randall agrees with him.

Kyle & Foerster stated, May 14, that they had then booked more orders for Decoration day than they filled at either Christmas or Easter.

Robert Northam says that recent experience at George Reinberg's has shown that if retailers have use for orchids, they will pay a fair price for them; that nothing is gained by cutting prices when the supply is large. He considers 50 cents each a popular price for choice cattleyas.

C. L. Washburn says he looks for the comparative shortage of carnations to make a good market for short roses for Decoration day.

John Muno, who now grows vegetables, says this has been a fine season for lettuce; up to quite recently he has received 35 to 45 cents a case. His son, George, grows carnations and reports the sale for cuttings as surprisingly brisk.

There are plenty of good vacant stores inside the loop for any retailer who wants to carry the load imposed by the landlords.

Last week Wietor Bros. planted four of their new houses. Seven more are being glazed. They have made short work of the rebuilding of this range of eleven houses.

Vaughan & Sperry say they expect carnations to be of better quality than last year, but with lighter cuts for Decoration day. They look for big business on peonies.

A. L. Randall Co. reports the arrival of its first shipment of cape jasmine May 13; $3 per hundred was realized.

Kennicott Bros. Co. reports the quantity of peonies in storage greater than ever at this date. E. E. Pieser says they have been buying buckets for a week and that the arrivals now are heavier than ever. He considers the peony the special flower of Decoration day, just as the lily is of Easter, and is counting on a record-breaking demand the last week of this month.

Klehm's Nursery is sending a large cut of Easter lilies to Percy Jones.

Joe Straus, who has been in the office of the A. L. Randall Co. for several years, recently went on the road for a few days for the first time. He says he got an entirely new idea of the importance of the industry.

R. Mayer, formerly at the Reissig place at Riverside, has taken a partner and is building a new place of five houses at Lyons, Ill.

John Enders, of Poehlmann's store force, is a member of a Masonic glee club. One night last week he and Mrs. Enders were invited to a five-dollars-a-plate banquet, because of the way Mr. Enders uses his voice.

The next auto parade probably will occur in June, when the weather will be a little less likely to upset plans.

Henry Van Gelder reports Myer Heller, of New Castle, Ind., as a visitor May 12.

At E. H. Hunt's, C. M. Dickinson is a firm believer in the policy of pushing exclusive articles; he doesn't enjoy working up business to find that someone else has taken the order away from him by shading the price. In line with this policy, he has built up a list of specialties on which prices always are maintained, no matter how many are selling. The latest addition to the list is an elastic glazing putty.

The daily papers this week have chronicled the recording of the transfer of the James A. Hart property on Beacon street to Poehlmann Bros. Co. It is stated that it is to be occupied by John Poehlmann, president of the company. The residence is a handsome one and the ground is 100x191. The deed was dated April 21 and gives the consideration as $18,000. Mr. Hart, the former owner, was once widely known as president of the Chicago National League baseball club.

J. A. Budlong has only 3,000 plants of the Mrs. Jardine rose, but is cutting 400 flowers a day. They sell at just a little better prices than any other rose in their list.

Zech & Mann say that shipping business is excellent—something doing all day long. Mr. Zech thinks the quality of stock is better now than he ever before has seen at the middle of May.

Although many growers have discarded it, Peter Reinberg finds Rose-pink Enchantress one of his most profitable sorts. It always is a big producer in spring and, this year at least, is coming in just when wanted.

Frank Benthey says the house at New Castle, crushed by snow, has been rebuilt and is now filled with stock for the local retail trade there, which Otto Benthey is making quite profitable.

Dearborn street, where an old building is to be torn down, and is handling a large quantity of stock there.

Hoerber Bros. have not yet reached water with the well they are putting down at their plant at Des Plaines. The hole is now more than 600 feet deep. it costs $2.50 a foot. Such a well presents an interesting problem. Over $1,500 already are invested; to stop is to lose the money, while to go on may result in water being reached any day, or it may be simply putting good money with bad. Hoerber Bros. say they have set the mark at 1,000 feet before they turn to other sources of water supply.

L. H. Winterson reports bedding plants now going well at Winterson's Seed Store.

Weiland & Risch say the part of their plant not already in training for next season is in much heavier crop than it was in May last year.

C. W. McKellar looks to see the cape jasmine relieve the Decoration day strain on other flowers and return the shippers much better money than in recent years.

John Kruchten reports business as excellent and predicts a record Decoration day.

Frank Oechslin says it keeps them humping to fill the orders that are pouring in. He had to buy a large number of Boston ferns, as those grown in his own houses were not nearly enough to meet the demand.

L. Baumann, of L. Baumann & Co., is making an extensive European trip. He is in search of new designs, etc., and is not expected to return before August 1.

Business Developments.

Ernst C. Amling, eldest son of Albert F. Amling, is building on his father's farm two houses, each 27x250 feet, to be planted exclusively to American Beauties, the special favorites of the young man. The place will be heated by steam, with a Hippard trap to return the condensation. Everything will be modern and up-to-date.

Walter Burhop, a nephew of Henry Wehrman, of this city, bought an acre of ground from Albert F. Amling, and is building one house, 27x200 feet, to be heated by steam. It will be planted to chrysanthemums and sweet peas. He is also erecting a fine residence.

Another young grower, by the name of Ernst Weiss, who was with the Albert F. Amling Co. for a number of years, is negotiating for the purchase of a number of acres from A. F. Amling, on which he will locate a greenhouse establishment by next fall.

William H. Amling, in addition to building a house 29x350 feet, to be planted to sweet peas and mums, is remodeling his boiler house and changing from hot water to steam heat. A new boiler, sixty-six inches by eighteen feet, is now being installed in the new boiler room, which is 18x85 feet. A new chimney, now under construction, will be sixty feet in height and four feet in inside diameter. Two acres of ground were recently purchased, adjoining the present place, at $500 per acre. On the border of this new property a nephew of the Amlings, Paul E. Weiss, of Milwaukee, has bought two acres, with the intention of building a number of greenhouses in the near future. Mr. Weiss is a board of trade man in Milwaukee, with the firm of L. Bartlett & Son Co., grain dealers.

At the establishment of the A. F. Amling Co., the six new houses are nearing completion, and it is expected that they will all be planted during May, with Beauties and White Killarneys. A large reservoir, 25x130 and eight feet deep, is nearly completed, and into it will drain all the water from the roofs of the entire range. A triplex pump, with a capacity of 300 gallons per minute, and operated by a twenty-five horse-power electric motor, will pump the water out of this reservoir into an air-compression tank, 8x24 feet, which will automatically keep a constant pressure of sixty pounds on the entire water system. The roof material for all of the above-mentioned greenhouses was furnished by the A. Dietsch Co. The ventilating apparatus for all the establishments was supplied by the Evans people, and all pipes and fittings came from George B. Limbert & Co., Chicago. The building contractors are William Mailander, of Morton Grove, Ill., and the Winandy Bros., of High Ridge, Rogers Park, Ill.

The members of the Amling baseball team have just received their new suits. They rented five acres of ground adjoining the greenhouses and now claim to have the best diamond in this section, as well as the best team that ever came across the pike.

CONCORD JUNCTION, MASS.—The work on the new greenhouse of Leonard Cousins, Jr., is going forward rapidly. It is of the truss frame type, designed by the King Construction Co. With the new addition, this establishment will be rated with the big fellows in carnation growing. Pansies are one of the main crops here, and a successful season is reported. A fine lot of bedding stock in the way of geraniums, salvia, dracænas, etc., will be just right for Memorial day trade.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

We have had another week of chilly and unseasonable weather. Roses were abundant Monday. The sun was shining; it was warmer, but there was nothing special to lift the market. Prices will, therefore, remain on the even keel of the last week. There will not be much stirring of the waters before Decoration day. That promises to be unusually lively and great preparations are being made for the demand in bedding plants and blooming stock of every seasonable kind. No roses are selling now at their true value. It is a shame to have to sacrifice such splendid stock as is now arriving. There is no outlet equal to that of last week, when the big official dinners, the fat weddings and the actors' fair stirred up things quite encouragingly. Beauties are away down. Killarneys show no signs of decrease. It is a mystery where they all come from. Richmonds are in good demand and keep at the top of the procession.

Carnations do not get above 2 cents and they have to be wide-awake to command it. Day-old stock goes for a song. There are some gladioli in the market, and a few mums. Peonies are now abundant and prices are falling. The red ones are fine and popular. There is a large supply of orchids and most of them go at 50 cents. Valley will not improve until the June weddings begin. Everybody is booking them and banking on them to lift the retail business into a final burst of paying enthusiasm before the summer dullness materializes.

The sweet pea stock now arriving is superb. Valley, lilies and gardenias all join in the general retrogression. The retail windows are brilliant with a wealth of dogwood, spiræas and snowballs. Lilac is about over; not many days until the Crimson Ramblers are in bloom.

Horticultural Society Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Horticultural Society of New York was held May 11. Officers were elected as follows: President, Geo. T. Powell; vice-presidents, N. L. Britton, T. A. Havemeyer, Patrick O'Mara, Samuel Thorne, James Wood; secretary, George V. Nash; treasurer, F. R. Newbold; council, F. L. Atkins, J. W. Cromwell, Henry F. DuPont, Henry Hicks, John E. Lager, J. A. Ward, C. W. Weathered, A. L. Willis.

The annual report showed increased activity all along the line. It was decided to hold a summer exhibition at the botanical garden June 4 and 5. A schedule has been prepared, including peonies and other seasonable flowers, a copy of which may be had by addressing George V. Nash, secretary, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx Park.

Various Notes.

C. H. Totty will send out two new carnations next season, White House, raised by Dailledouze Bros., and Wodenethe, raised by F. E. Whitney.

Arthur Herrington reports an extremely satisfactory start for his landscape enterprise.

Charles E. Ferry, secretary of the Wilson-Hoyt Co., says orders for bench molds are coming from all parts of the country.

Nicholas Lecakes has been suffering with a severe affection of the eyes, but is improving.

Sigmund Geller has returned from a business trip through New England.

H. R. Crawbuck is marketing dogwood cut in his own nursery at Chatham.

B. S. Slinn, Jr., and M. A. Bowe are contemplating trips to Europe.

At J. K. Allen's, one day last week, chrysanthemums, peonies and gladioli sat on the counter.

Russin & Hanfling have leased the entire building at 45 West Twenty-eighth street for a term of years.

Burnett Bros. are now using three floors in their building.

The topic of general discussion is the orchid show next week at Boston. The New York boys expect to go in a body by boat Thursday evening, May 26. Many of the wholesalers and growers will make up a large and jolly company. Messrs. Welch and Stewart, of the Hub, were in town May 14, booming it. If all reports are realized, it will be well worth going many miles to see. Naturally, New York and vicinity expect to carry home the bulk of the prizes. Among those certain to attend is James McManus, who has done as much as any man in the business to boom and popularize the orchid in the last ten years.

George Saltford does not move until July. It looks now as if in time Twenty-eighth street from Sixth avenue to Seventh avenue will be the concentration center of the wholesale cut flower business of New York. For a while, however, those having leases will remain where they are, and several of the best houses of the trade are among them.

Charles Vick, of Rochester, was in the city Friday, May 13, booming the convention, selling space in the exhibition hall and souvenir program, and stirring up things generally. While a guest of F. H. Traendly and A. T. Bunyard, Mr. Traendly encouraged him with some unique effects in floral table decoration at an impromptu dinner to himself and friends. Mr. Vick is enthusiastic over the convention prospects.

W. F. Jagger, of West Hampton, was in town last week. He is a famous Victory and Enchantress grower, whose stock is handled by Walter Sheridan.

For the new plant market it is publicly announced that applications for more than 1,000 stalls have already been filed, with space for only 300. This certainly looks promising. The revenue anticipated from the market by the city is $15,000 a year.

William H. Kuebler, of Brooklyn, and Frank Millang, of New York, were visitors last week at Boston.

A large business in window-boxes and hotel decorations, involving great quantities of blooming plants, boxwood and bay trees, is in progress. Most of the retail florists get their share.

Stumpp & Walter Co. handles the entire output of bulbs of Freesia Purity grown by W. Matthews, of Great Neck, L. I., in addition to quantities grown by the originator, Rudolph Fischer, at his place in California, and from other sources. They expect the season's total this year to exceed 200,000 of this variety. One of their orders recently placed with a single firm in Holland amounted to over a million bulbs, and everyone will agree that it is "going some." Mr. Stumpp resides at Dumont, N. J., where the company has trial grounds and nursery and where he recently was elected mayor of the town. Mr. Walter resides at Newark. He has just returned from his annual European trip. The secretary of the corporation is Mr. Sperling, for years one of the firm's successful salesmen.

S. Jacobs & Sons, Brooklyn, report this their most active season to date. The sons constitute a quartette of practical workers who achieve results.

David McKenzie, manager for the John Scott enterprise at Flatbush, says everything salable is already engaged for Decoration day. He deplores the scarcity of Scottii, which he still finds the most popular of all the nephrolepis family.

Anton Schultheis is well prepared for Memorial day and its requirements. All his famous ramblers have been timed carefully and he has a large stock of evergreens, boxwood, hydrangeas, ferns and palms. J. AUSTIN SHAW.

WASHINGTON.

The Washington Florists' Club held a regular meeting May 10 and discussed plans for an outing in July. The flower show to be given in November also was under discussion. The following committee was appointed on arrangements: W. F. Gude, George Cooke, Elmer C. Mayberry, F. H. Kramer and W. W. Kimmell.

The following were proposed for membership in the club and referred to committee: J. G. Schattmaier, Joseph J. Goudy, W. A. Ward and G. Edward Schultz.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—August Luther, after carrying on a successful business here for thirty-nine years, is preparing to retire from the work on account of poor health and proposes soon to visit California. It appears, however, that the business will still bear the family name, as his son has purchased an interest in it.

WARNING.

Don't Pay Money to Strangers.

Within the last few days the Review has received several complaints from eastern Pennsylvania that "a smooth-talking young fellow" has been falsely representing himself as working for the Review and soliciting new subscriptions or renewals in its name.

Don't be duped by this petty swindler. If he shows up, call the police and wire the Review.

Never pay money to strangers, for the Review or on any other account. Review representatives all are well known members of the trade in their respective localities.

PHILADELPHIA.

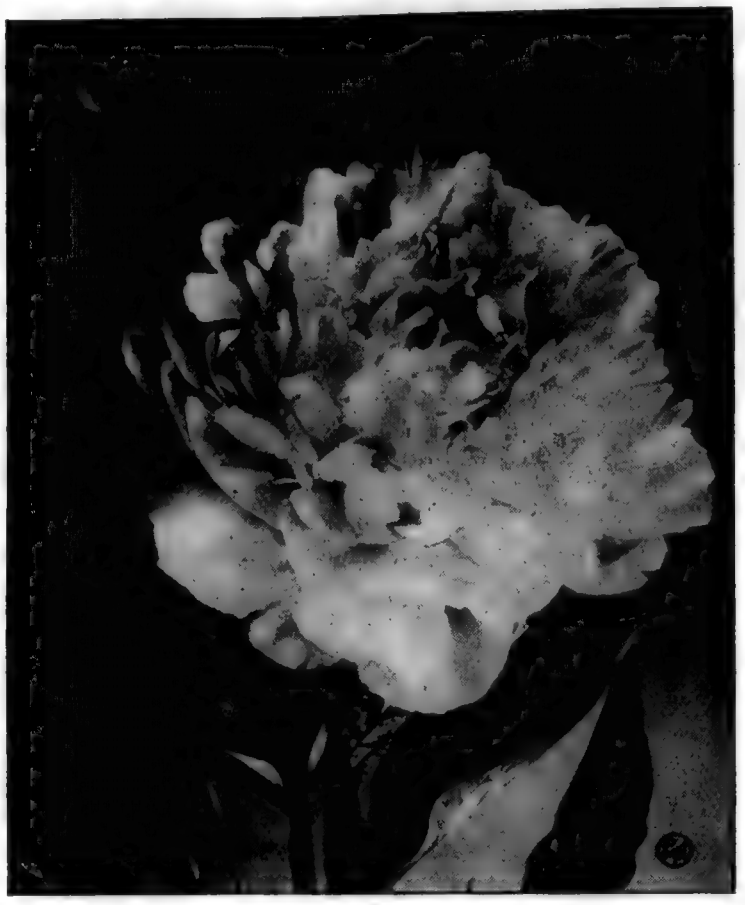
The Rising Eastern Market.

The April-like chill of mid-May proved invigorating to the cut flower market. There was a large amount of business on the closing days of last week, principally for the May processions in the churches and for the various forms of adornment, the desire for which comes to everyone in the spring. The present week opened actively, with prospects for a moderate demand. The south has made some calls on the Philadelphia supply for the different Memorial days of the various states that precede the national holiday. The supply of flowers continues heavy. There is no shortage of anything, only the cooler weather has improved the quality so that there are many more fine flowers obtainable now than is usual at this season. I do not wish to be understood to say that the cool weather has had no effect on the quantity of flowers; it certainly has, but it would take a sweeping of the earth by the comet to check production in mid-May to the extent of increasing prices of the general list.

Peonies have increased in number. The local supply of officinalis, red, is coming in from sheltered positions, while other varieties will be here by the end of this week.

Sweet peas are in the transition stage from indoor to outdoor stock. The majority of the indoor flowers now show a sad shortening of stem and lack of luster. In contrast to these the new crop from under glass is superb, while from the south come the forerunners of the outdoor peas.

The carnation supply is shortening a little. Really fine stock is in demand, for much of the stock cannot be so classed today.



Roses are plentiful, good grades selling rather better than medium or poorer stock, partly perhaps because the best goods always come in smaller quantities.

Valley is about equal to the demand. It grades well for the season. Easter lilies are selling better. Callas are quite scarce. Cattleyas depend on Mossiæ. Gardenias are dull. Yellow daisies are in active demand, but white suffer from the competition of their cousins of the field. Pansies are still sought. Adiantum are selling better. The reports on asparagus differ, but greens generally seem dull.

An Incident.

When the bright business mind of M. Rice was called upon to solve the question, "Where shall we find a reliable traveler to add to our corps?" he naturally turned to the group of young men who were pressing forward. From this group Robert Shoch was chosen. He had pushed a wheelbarrow well, he had pushed flowers well, he would push supplies well; that was the reason. But this is not what I began to tell you; it is merely introductory. Robert Shoch is now known all along the eastern seaboard from New England on the north (or should I say "down east"?) to the farthest point south, where the pretty girls care for pretty things, and to the banks of the Ohio, or it may be farther.

One day, when calling on a lovely lady that shall be nameless, Mr. Shoch was greeted with this question: "Wasn't that a funny joke about Mr. Reid being like William Jennings Bryan, because the solid south is for him, you know?'' Happily, Mr. Shoch knew the story; he, too, reads the REVIEW, and though a little startled, he was able to acquit himself creditably and reply it was a very funny joke indeed.

Now, the curious thing about this incident was that the lovely lady should have happened to mention this particular joke to Robert Shoch. It was his pet.

Mr. Heacock's Kentias.

A brisk walk through the palm range; bench after bench of small and medium sizes; long beds of large sizes, with the growingly popular tubs strongly in evidence; the plants in perfect condition, with the deep, lustrous green so clean that merely looking over an occasional leaf that has been missed by the hose is all that is necessary before sending them out—this is what you see at Wyncote.

To describe the kentias of the Joseph Heacock Co. would require a gifted pen. It is quite beyond mine. A description, to be adequate, should cearly convey to the reader what the writer sees and wishes to portray. A far abler writer, from the middle west, once wrote a singularly graphic paragraph that I think will answer my purpose. The paragraph made a great impression on me on account of its clear, terse language, right to the point, and because it appeared with the name of a man whom I had believed to be in heaven. Probably an able successor to his business, of modest mien, had coined or adopted the phrase. It ran as follows: ''Not the largest, nor the oldest; just the best.'' acter of the flower business in May is changing. Fridays and Saturdays are busier days than the other four combined. Everyone seems to want flowers for Sunday at this season.

This phrase aptly describes Mr. Heacock's kentias. I've seen larger kentias; I've seen older kentias; I've never seen better kentias. I doubt whether better kentias are grown to-day.

Berger Bros. are receiving nicely colored sweet peas from their father's East Washington Lane greenhouses.

A. F. O'Connell has commenced work planting the city squares with showy flowering and foliage plants.

There is a foolish tradition about the ill luck that comes with Friday falling on the thirteenth, which has been effectually disproved in the home of George S. Faulkner, where on that eventful day a son and heir arrived.

Ranstead street is a hustling center of business. Last Monday a lad lost a silver dollar down an area three feet deep. In desperation he was about to wreck the grating which separated him from his property when John McIntyre came along and said, "See the janitor." Edward Reid said, "Put dextrine on the end of a stick." This restored the missing coin to its happy owner.

George Burton will discard his house of Golden Gate this season, replacing it with American Beauty. Gate was formerly grown to advantage during the scarcity of Bride and Maid, but since the arrival of the improved hybrid teas they have become less popular.

Arthur Zirkman has been bringing cheer to 1220 Race street, where he returned last week from an excellent business trip.

Godfrey Aschmann plans a two months' trip to Europe in July. He will look after his business interests in Germany and Belgium and take a brief rest at his old home in Switzerland.

John F. Erwin Co., Delanco, N. J., made a handsome horseshoe wreath for Blackburne, the popular shortstop of the Chicago American League team, which was presented to him when he appeared at Shibe park to play against the Athletics last Saturday.

W. E. McKissick & Bros. have a successful specialty in blue cornflower, much prized by those requiring this shade for floral effect.

Edward Reid points with pride to the high grade White Perfection Enchantress and Victory, which he considers the best red, which his growers are sending him.

Paul Berkowitz is getting a surprising amount of stock for Memorial day out of the factory and warehouse of H. Bayersdorfer & Co. Earlier in the season both partners pushed the stock out, now one pushes it in while the other pushes it out. PHIL.

The Market.

We continue to get cool weather, abnormally so for the middle of May, and business is holding up nicely. Carnations are in much reduced supply. It is suspected that the annual holding back for Memorial day is already under way. Prices rule stronger than a week ago, and all good flowers are quickly snapped up. Flowers of the pink varieties are holding good, thanks to the cool weather. Roses are not selling as well as carnations. Bride and Maid are hard to move at any price. Few of these will be seen here another season. Killarney sells well, also White Killarney. Carnot, while not seen in large numbers, is popular. Beauties are in good supply. Mrs. Aaron Ward continues to make a name for itself, and the better class stores handle quite a few Bon Silene and Safrano. Red roses will be in big demand next week; of late they have not sold specially well. Sweet peas sell well, those of the Spencer type making the highest prices.

Darwin and other late tulips are plentiful. They are much better for cutting than the early ones, having such long stems. Narcissi, except poeticus, is practically done. Spanish iris is quite plentiful, and there are altogether too many of the small flowered gladioli. May, Shakespeare and Augusta are seen in fine condition and bring good prices. Easter lilies and callas each sell quite well. Spiræa is a slow seller. Some good outdoor valley is now in and is vastly superior to the bulk of the forced article. Cut lilac is abundant and meets with a fair sale. Cattleyas are in good supply, but move better than in any previous year. Gardenias are good and sell quite well. Yellow marguerites are in rather short supply; white are more plentiful.

Asparagus Sprengeri is more abundant. A. plumosus remains about the same. Adiantum is much better in quality. Continued cool weather has not been encouraging for trade in tender bedding plants, and while growers are satisfied with sales, a warmer spell would give it a decided fillip. Hydrangeas, rambler roses and geraniums are in demand for Memorial day and everyone is anticipating the heaviest sales on record.

The Great Orchid Exhibition.

There is a good entry in every class for the big orchid show, which opens May 26 at Horticultural hall. There will be a battle royal in the blue ribbon class, where the first prize is $1,000 and a gold medal, and some artistic groups will be put up. From all parts of the country visitors are coming, and these are by no means confined to orchid fanciers. The show will undoubtedly prove the leading horticultural feature in 1910 in America. The flooring of the main exhibition hall has been removed and the winding walks will be of gravel and crushed stone. Some beds will contain large specimen plants other than orchids. These will be plunged and the surface sodded over.

It has been decided to allow the judges a free hand the opening day, so that all awards can be made and prize cards attached before the opening, which will not be until 8 p. m. On the first evening a great outpouring of society is expected; admission, $3. On the second and third days $1 admission will be charged, and 50 cents on the last days. Complimentary tickets will not be good until the third day. A superb orchestra will furnish music each afternoon from 3 o'clock to 5 o'clock and in the evenings from 7:30 to 9:30. Some of the leading exhibitors will have special express cars and will be on hand for preparatory work early in the week of the exhibition.

Various Notes.

Leonard Cousins, of Concord Junction, has had a remarkably successful season with pansies, in which he is a leading specialist. He has made recent shipments to points as far distant as Utah, Wisconsin, Kansas and Missouri.

Bernard McGinty, the popular salesman at 2 Park street, is handling an extra fine lot of Killarney and White Killarney for W. R. Morris, of Wellesley Hills. Mr. McGinty has no further use for Bride and Maid; he says they are the hardest flowers to move which he handles.

The Boston Cut Flower Exchange has a baseball team of young and doughty enthusiasts who are anxious to receive challenges. William J. Thurston, the genial market manager, has charge of the team, and some of those belonging to it are Walter Elwood, James Murray, Alfred E. Walsh, M. Ruane, Frank Edgar, D. Briscoe, William McAlpine, Sam Beck and Fred Solari. A challenge has been sent to W. H. Elliott's team at Madbury, N. H., and a match is expected in a few days.

George E. Buxton, of Nashua, N. H., is one of the growers who never seems to send anything poor to the market, probably because he has forgotten how to grow inferior stock. Certainly his carnations are still equal to midwinter quality, as handled at Thomas Pegler's stand. He is also sending in a fine lot of double feverfews, a flower always salable around Memorial day.

William Sim, in addition to sweet peas, has at present a lot of beautiful pink antirrhinum, which meets with a ready sale. Mr. Sim will have a grand lot of Spencer sweet peas in his big, new 500-foot house for Memorial day. His numerous houses of tomatoes are also making fine headway.

Edward Winkler, of Wakefield, was one of the first to bring in a variety of the hooded or Spencer sweet peas to the market, and will have a fine lot for Memorial day.

R. Caplin, the popular Massachusetts avenue florist, was married May 9 in Dorchester to Miss Rose Pearlstein. A large bell of white lilac and Killarney roses and a shower bouquet carried by the bride, of valley and Cattleya Mossiæ, showed the skilled work of A. Roberts. Mr. and Mrs. Caplin received numerous gifts and have the best wishes of a host of friends for a long and happy married life.

Mann Bros. are handling a fine line of late-flowering tulips. They are having an exceptionally heavy trade in bedding-out and other plants, preparatory to Memorial day.

At 226 Devonshire street all is life and hustle, for Welch Bros. expect a bigger Memorial day business than ever before. Large supplies are predicted.

Henry Hurrell, of Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., was a visitor last week. His firm will make a big exhibit at the coming orchid show. He reports the orchid business as better than ever.

N. F. Comley, of Lexington, is the largest sweet pea specialist at 2 Park street, growing several big houses of them. He sends in thousands daily, including all the leading varieties.

A tour of the Boston park system at present is delightful, there being a wealth of beautiful trees and shrubs in flower. Cornus florida and its pink form are particularly fine and alone worthy of a visit. Spraying operations against the gypsy and brown-tail moths and elm beetles commenced this week. Over thirty tons of arsenate of lead will be used in this work.

E. J. Rogean is handling large quantities of fine valley and lilac these days, in addition to many other flowers.

Hospital tag day in Lynn took some 25,000 carnations out of the market last week.

Sunday, May 15, the Arnold Arboretum was the Mecca for thousands of visitors, to see the grand lilac display. The collection of nearly 200 varieties was never better flowered.

The continued cold weather continues to keep many growers on the anxious seat as regards Memorial day crops. The season is now two or three days later than a year ago, and a continuation of similar weather the balance of the month will find considerable lilac, Spiræa Van Houttei, viburnums, Iris Germanica, valley and other hardy material to add to greenhouse supplies. No peonies outside of officinalis forms flower here on time. Moutans are already open, but they will cut no figure. It looks now as though carnations would not be nearly plentiful enough for demands.

Maurice Fuld has issued a call to all gladiolus fanciers to meet at Horticultural hall, Boston, May 27, at 3 p. m., to assist in the formation of a gladiolus society. Offers of support are arriving from all sections and there will be a strong charter list.

William C. Stickel, of Lexington, has been on the sick list, but is able to be around again.

QUINCY, MASS.—It is said that George F. Elcock, a West Quincy dahlia fancier, has just imported from Germany and France forty new cactus dahlias, all of which took prizes in London last year.

MONTREAL, CAN.—The Canadian Floral Co. pleaded not guilty before Recorder Weir April 26 to a charge of keeping open after 7 o'clock on the evening of Thursday, April 17, contrary to the early-closing by-law. The defense was presented that the company does a wholesale business as well as retail. The recorder took the case under consideration and later gave judgment in favor of the company, pointing out that the by-law is limited in its application to those doing a retail business only.

DES MOINES, IA.

The Market.

Business was good last week, many large funeral orders helping out the general run. The weather has been so changeable that people are afraid to begin planting out, but we look for the season to start with a rush about May 20.

Mothers' day was well observed here. In accordance with a rule fixed by popular accord and pushed by the florists, the white carnation was worn in memory of a sainted mother called to her reward, while the red or pink carnation was worn as a badge of honor for the loving mother who is still numbered with the living. Many a man with a white carnation brushed a tear from his eye as he wandered along the streets and saw in the coat lapel of another the red or pink carnation. Before the day was half over, every florist in the city was sold out of flowers. Something over 10,000 carnations were disposed of and more could have been sold. This city seems to have taken kindly to Mothers' day; many of the ministers in the large churches preached sermons on "Mother," and some requested their congregations to wear a flower to church Sunday morning, May 8. The price asked by most of the florists was 10 cents each, or $1 per dozen.

Various Notes.

Wm. Trillow reports a fine business in his new downtown store, and is more than pleased with results.

Frank Riley, of the Iowa Floral Co., has gone to his old home in Cleveland, O., on a short visit. BOOSTER.

FARMINGTON, UTAH. — Robert Miller, president of the Miller Floral Co., which was recently incorporated with a capital of $100,000, has been engaged in growing roses for about twenty years and is considered an expert in that line. The company has purchased ten acres of ground and is erecting greenhouses.

WELLINGTON, O.

In common with the rest of the world, we had April here when we should have had March, and March when we should have had April. In consequence, stock got a big start and then a setback. We have had a lot of hard frosts and some snow, which weighted down early flowers, such as tulips, etc. A bed of about 500 tulips was buried out of sight with snow April 19, but they were not seriously damaged.

T. J. Yale, who has been located here some ten years, has sold to Albert Richter, of Sturgis, Mich. Mr. Yale has built up a good trade and there are many expressions of regret at his leaving. He will retire and spend his remaining days with his son. He had lived alone most of the time since the death of Mrs. Yale, about five years ago. Mr. Richter is no novice in the business, but has been engaged in the same line and is reported to be a first-class florist. He is in the prime of life.

DELAWARE, O.—Joseph H. Cunningham states that from October 10 to May 12 his sales of pansy plants as the result of advertising were 421,000.

The Market.

Business is reported as far from satisfactory, although early commencements brought in a little extra work. The uptown florists have had a few small weddings and receptions, but all say the bulk of the business is in funeral orders. Of course, the greenhouse men are busy now that the warm weather has set in, but they have their troubles, as everybody wants his work done first. However, it will be well into June before they will be through with the rush. The wholesalers have been busy packing away stock left over at the end of each day, and say that stock of all kinds is in abundance. Peonies and cape jasmines have now reached the market and are at present commanding top prices, but will soon come down to a level with carnations and roses, which are most plentiful. The stock in all these is of excellent quality. Fancy carnations are as low as 2 cents and roses 5 to 6 cents. Extra fancy long Beauties were quoted as low as $2 per dozen Saturday.

There are plenty of lilies in both callas and Harrisii, and when graded they bring $6, $8 and $10 per hundred. Peonies in white, pink and red are selling well at $3 and $4 per hundred and long, fancy cape jasmine goes at $1.50 per hundred. There is some extra fine lily of the valley in the market daily. The report is that all outdoor flowers will be scarce for Decoration day.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting Thursday, May 12, in Odu Fellows' building. When President Windler opened the meeting, only fifteen members were in attendance, including all the officers, as the day was fine and most of the members were busy with the planting. The president stated that all the important business would be laid over until the June meeting, when a big attendance is looked for; therefore, only the regular routine work was transacted. The trustees were instructed to arrange for the annual picnic of the club, to take place during the month of July, and report the date and arrangements at the next meeting, which will be the twenty-third anniversary of the club and will take place Thursday afternoon, June 9, at 2 o'clock.

Various Notes.

Henry Ostertag reports that his firm has the decorations for the electrical show next week in the big Coliseum, in which they will use 150 large bay trees. These and wild smilax will comprise the decorations.

Fred J. Foster reports that he has leased a store, to be known as the Paris Floral Co., in the La Salle building, Broadway and Olive street, and will open it this month. He says he will also retain his old quarters in the Century building.

Frank A. Weber will have charge of the local delegation of nurserymen for their trip to Denver, Colo., next month to attend the annual meeting of the American Association of Nurserymen. He is chairman of the entertainment committee. The Florists' Club, at its last meeting, extended an invitation to the association to hold its 1911 meeting in this city.

William Smith, who has been keeping bachelor quarters at his home for the last six weeks, says things are more homelike again. His mother has returned after a six weeks' trip to California.

Henry Emunds, of Belleville; Edwin Denker, of St. Charles; William Winter, of Kirkwood, and John Connon, of Webster Groves, were the out-of-town members who spent Thursday, May 12, in this city and attended the club meeting in the afternoon.

The planting season has at last opened for good and from now on the greenhouse men will have their hands full. A great deal of the early planting will have to be done over. Most of the growers around here report that their peonies were all frozen during the recent cold spell.

Miss Matilda Meinhardt, secretary of the Ladies' Home Circle, says the next meeting of the circle will take place at Chautauqua. The plan is for the members to start the evening before and stop all night at the Meinhardt cottage and hold their meeting the next afternoon, which will be June 14.

Charles Beyer has received a fresh importation of aspidistras, which have become rather scarce of late, also a big lot of orchids, for which they are going in quite heavily, as tne demand is growing steadily.

The next meeting of the St. Louis Florists' Club, June 9, will be the twenty-third anniversary and special invitations will be sent to the members to attend it.

There is a lot of building going on in Kirkwood and will be all summer. Gus Gross, brother to Hugo Gross, is contemplating building several new houses. W. J. Pilcher is building one large house and F. Vennemann has three new houses in course of construction. Others who are building were reported in the REVIEW earlier in the season, and at present it is understood that about thirty-five new greenhouses are being erected.

Martin Reukauf, traveling salesman for H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, called on the trade last week. J. J. B.

Otto G. Koenig, secretary of the St. Louis Horticultural Society, has sent to the REVIEW a copy of the resolutions of condolence on the death of Mrs. M. S. Vesey, which were adopted by that society at its meeting, May 13, 1910.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Twenty-eighth annual meeting, Atlantic City, N. J., June 21 to 23 1910.

THE word is that the English crops of turnip seed this year will be light.

RADISH is about the only item that really is displeasing the California seed growers.

THERE is still some call from the canners who are under the necessity of replanting peas. The right stocks are hard to locate.

L. H. ARCHIAS, the seedsman of Sedalia, Mo., was recently slated for the fourth degree of the Knights of Columbus at St. Louis.

IT appears that the loss on peas in Wisconsin may not be as great as was feared while the seed lay dormant in the wet, cold ground. The germination has been better than one might expect with such weather as prevailed.

CONRAD APPEL, Darmstadt, Germany, is an indefatigable exhibitor at expositions, having participated in about all throughout the world as far back as the Chicago world's fair. This year he is showing German grass and tree seeds at the expositions at Brussels and at Allenstein.

THE seedsmen of Rochester are getting their breath after an unusually busy season. Extra help has been needed in all departments, to care for the numerous orders by mail, and now the retail stores are equally busy. Many kinds of seeds are sold out entirely, and the prospects are that there will be only a small amount of stock to carry over to another season.

THE growing of seeds on the government irrigation projects in Montana is becoming a considerable industry. Northrup, King & Co., and others, are offering contracts to the farmers and it is said that on the Huntley project several hundred acres of peas will be grown this season. Locally it is said pea growing for seed appeals to the farmers, among other reasons, because "the company furnishes the seed for planting and pays the farmers from 2 to 2½ cents per pound. The crop produces well, is harvested early, and the settler gets his money as soon as the seed is delivered at the railroad station."

LETTUCE ought to be in first-class supply next season, from all reports.

THE Californians are having a fine season—no cause for complaint, save on a few pieces of radish.

VISITED NEW YORK: Charles H. Vick, of James Vick's Sons, Rochester, in the interest of the S. A. F. convention.

PLANS for the Atlantic City meeting are well along. Secretary Kendel will issue the program in a few days. The outlook is for a banner convention.

THE paper on "Seed Growing as a Business," by W. W. Tracy, published in the REVIEW, issues of May 5 and 12, will be reprinted in pamphlet form by the U. S. Department of Agriculture and seedsmen who wish to procure copies for distribution among farmers may purchase at cost of production.

PUGET SOUND cabbage is reported as promising no better than a light crop this year.

ADVICES to hand from France do not give any rosy accounts of seed growing prospects for the season. The season has been cold and wet and has resulted in injury to some crops and delay in planting others.

BURGLARS gained access to the store of the W. W. Barnard Co., in Chicago, a few nights ago and made a determined but unsuccessful effort to open the safe in the office. Although they drilled holes into the doors, broke off the handles and smashed the combination lock, the doors held fast. It required the services of an expert locksmith for two and a half hours to get inside the safe, during which time business was almost suspended, pending getting out the books and papers. There is no clue to the burglars.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seeds through the port of New York for the week ending May 7 were as follows:

Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.	Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.
Canary	350	$ 1,618	Coriander	100	$ 215
Caraway	100	646	Cummin	98	1,448

Castor	3,428	15,179	Poppy	250	984
Clover	50	1,477	Other		2,372

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $17,710.

COMMERCE IN SEEDS.

The foreign commerce of the United States, in seeds, for the month of March was as follows:

Imports.
Exports.

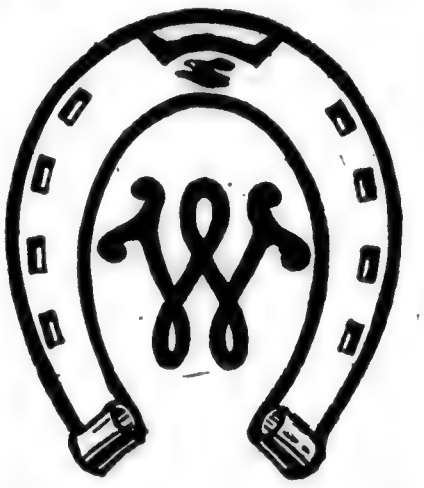
AS SLUIS SEES CONDITIONS.

"The seed trade everywhere in America seems to have had an extremely busy season and to be in a condition of prosperity not excelled elsewhere in the world."



The speaker was Yoost Sluis, of Sluis Bros., seedgrowers at Enkhuizen, Holland, who is back at New York, preparatory to sailing May 24 after his first visit to America. Mr. Sluis has crossed the continent, having visited the cabbage seed growers on Puget Sound, passed down through the Santa Clara valley and returned east by way of Los Angeles, Denver, Kansas City, Chicago, Cincinnati, Washington and Philadelphia, spending the last days of his stay in visiting the cabbage and cauliflower seed growers on Long Island.

"The seed crops in California, so far as I saw them," said Mr. Sluis, "are looking good, with the exception of radish, and this, I was told, is the general condition at those places I did not have time to visit. Lettuce looks particularly well, but the growers are not complaining at the condition of onion, sweet peas or, in fact, any crops other than radish.

"Our own main crops are cabbage and cauliflower and I was, of course, specially interested in the growing of cabbage for seed at the Puget Sound. They do not have the prospect of a large crop there this year.

"At home we have had a time of extremely high prices; high as prices for seeds have been in practically all the countries of the world, I think Holland has had a sharper rise than any other.

That promises to be corrected in part with this year's crop. Understand that I do not predict low prices, but moderate prices. The high prices have done their part in increasing the acreage devoted to seed growing, but of equal importance has been the mild winter that has permitted all biennials to winter well.

"High prices for any crop will naturally correct themselves, by increased production, though the situation in seeds may be a little slower in working out than it is with less specialized crops, partly because of a succession of poor crop years, partly because of a scarcity of stock seeds in some important lines and partly because the demand for seeds has increased at an unforeseen rate, in Germany, France, England and Holland, as well as in America."

Mr. Sluis is accompanied on his American trip by his brother, P. Sluis, formerly a seed grower, but for the last fifteen years a dealer in bird seed at Amsterdam.

VALUES OF BIENNIALS.

A special meeting of the board of directors of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League was held at New York May 5, the object being to discuss conditions prevailing as to the growing seed crops of the biennial families, plants of which were raised last midsummer and autumn, 1909, for the production of a seed harvest this midsummer, 1910.

The directors present were F. W. Bruggerhof, C. H. Breck, W. Atlee Burpee, Robert Buist, H. W. Wood, S. F. Willard, J. B. Rice, represented by Mr. Hunt, and Burnet Landreth, and in addition to the eight directors there were present two guests, E. E. Bruggerhof and Burnet Landreth, Jr.

The subject of values was discussed exhaustively, the secretary presenting a tabular statement and a digest from letters and cables received from Europe within the last two weeks. The original letters and cablegrams were shown as confirmatory of the accuracy of the digest.

The board concluded that the seeds of crop 1909 now unsold are certainly of greatly enhanced values. After much discussion the following rates are offered as suggestive of what, in the opinion of the board, under a conservative view of the situation, should be considered the actual value of 1909 seeds on hand at this

The circular of the secretary calls attention that the board only passed on values of seed of biennial families, and that varieties of the same families unnamed are, of course, equally enhanced in value consequent upon the diminished harvests in sight.

The subject of postal regulations as respects semi-transparent seed packets was discussed and the following statement was directed to be issued:

Concerning his recent interviews in Washington with the Third Assistant Postmaster General, Mr. Burpee, Chairman of the Committee on Postal Affairs, reported strongly in favor of the seed trade generally complying with the rulings of the Post-office Department as to using transparent paper.

The Third Assistant Postmaster General and Mr. Bacon both emphasized the fact that it would be a great mistake to further agitate the question just now, when Congress is so opposed to special privileges (and seeds enjoy one-half the postage rate of other fourth-class matter) and when there is so much discussion as to second-class matter. The Third Assistant Postmaster General was most courteous and seemed disposed to be as liberal as possible in his interpretation of the word "transparent," in permitting the use of any paper that is not so opaque as to conceal character of contents of sealed packages. Quarts and pounds can be put up in opaque paper bags if only tied (not sealed) or in cartons, without sealing.

This ruling of the Department is in no sense new, as the P. L. & R. under which it is made has stood for more than twenty years. Previ-

AMMONIATED LAWN LIME

Kills Weeds—Makes Grass Grow

Applied as a light top dressing to lawns, it kills all flat leaved weeds, such as Dandelion, Daisy, Plantain, Sorrel, Chickweed, Moss, etc., in 48 hours, and without other fertilizer produces a wonderful, luxuriant, rich green growth of lawn grasses, which is distinctly noticeable 50 feet away.

The use of Ammoniated Lawn Lime supersedes hand weeding of lawns, putting greens, etc. It saves the grass from being pulled up and in many cases ruined. Grasses take a new, vigorous growth, avoiding probable trouble in future.

Quantities: If very weedy, 1 lb. to 40 sq. ft.; 25 lbs. to 1000 sq. ft. (20x50). Half to one-quarter amount if moderately weedy.

ABSOLUTELY GUARANTEED

Money refunded if not satisfactory.

PRICES: 5 lbs., 50c; 25 lbs., $2.00; 50 lbs., $3.50; 100 lbs., $6.00.

We will ship a 100-lb. bag of Ammoniated Lawn Lime at $6.00 f. o. b. Louisville, to any Superintendent of a Cemetery, Park or Private Estate, where references are furnished. It is absolutely guaranteed as represented. If used as directed. If not satisfactory, we are to be notified within 30 days from date of invoice.

ously, however, the rulings have been only in individual cases and the subject has not before been made one of national scope.

H. L. Holmes, of Harrisburg, Pa., a resigned member, was reëlected to membership. Lester L. Morse, of San Francisco, was reported as having complied with the requirements for membership and as having sent his certificate of stock.

While the league meetings in the past have been generally held four or five times a year, it was considered best to fix three dates for stated meetings, these dates being decided upon as the first Wednesday in October, the last Tuesday in November, and the first Wednesday in May, special meetings to be held at any time at the call of the president.

The Review can supply any horticultural books at publishers' prices.

TRANSPARENT PACKETS.

Can you advise us as to the latest ruling of the Post-office Department in reference to the rate and classification for seeds in sealed packages, such as packets, ounce packets, etc.? We understand that there is to be in effect July 1 a requirement that seeds shall be in transparent packets if mailed at the rate of 1 cent for each two ounces. B. S. C.

The Post-office Department, through local postmasters where there are seed houses, has notified the trade that after July 1 sealed packets of seeds will pay first class rates of postage, except where the packet is sufficiently transparent to show the contents clearly. The department's circular advises seedsmen that they should submit samples of the envelopes they propose using for the approval of the local postmaster before ordering in quantity.

You should have received this notification from your local postmaster, and if you have not received it you doubtless will be supplied with a copy of the notice upon application at your post-office.

KENTIA PALM SEEDS.

Word comes from Sydney that at a recent meeting of the Australian Nursery Association a warm discussion took place on the recent rise in prices of Kentia seeds. Mr. Cheeseman, a member of the association, moved: "That this conference expresses dissatisfaction with the arrangement made by the New South Wales state officials for the distribution of palm seeds from Lord Howe island, whereby authority has been given to leaseholders and contractors to combine together to raise the price of seeds and control the output generally, which combine has raised the prices of seeds 650 per cent over the prices ruling before the combine was initiated.''

He stated that at one time the price was 8 shillings to 10 shillings a bushel, but now it had gone up to nearly £3, a rise of 650 per cent, and that most of the extra profit went to the company which controlled the output, and not to the islanders generally.

On the other hand, it was argued that before the trade was organized and controlled, the islanders were at the mercy of buyers who paid starvation prices, so that though Lord Howe's island had a monopoly of the supply, the inhabitants were reaping miserable returns for their labors. The motion was finally passed, and a deputation appointed to wait upon the minister responsible for the government of the island.

DISEASES AND PREVENTION.

Cucumber Diseases.

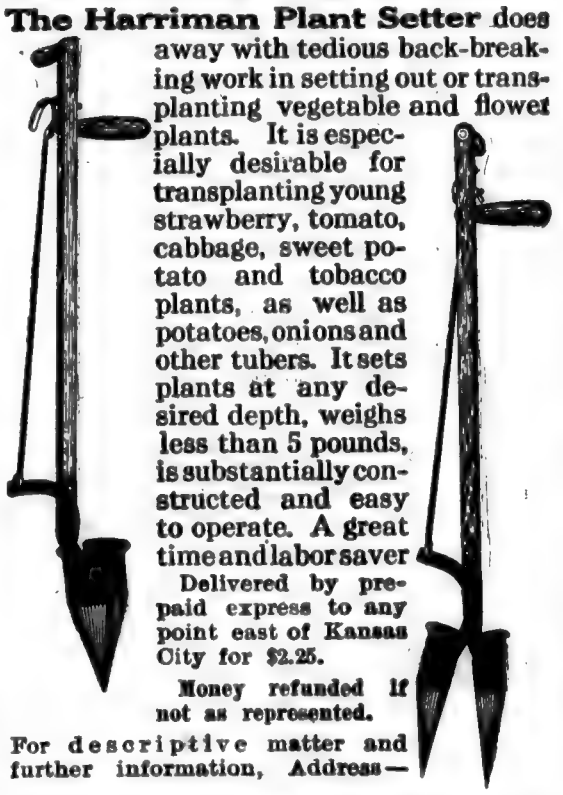
Diseases of muskmelons and more particularly, perhaps, diseases of cucumbers, are at times very rapid in their development under glass and very destructive to these crops. Without methods of soil sterilization, successful forcing house culture of muskmelons and cucumbers is practically impossible. With soil sterilization this culture is quite profitable. This shows what factor we have in the soil-infesting diseases which may be killed out by the soil treatment.

The diseases of cucumbers and melons include about three or four leaf troubles, two wilts, a fruit spot, and two serious root troubles.

Powdery mildew.—Powdery mildew often attacks the leaves of cucumbers, especially when the temperature and sunshine are deficient for their growth. It is rarely destructive and is controlled by a spray of dilute copper solution.

Downy mildew.—Downy mildew is caused by the fungus, Plasmopara Cubensis. It is a relative of the destructive late blight of potatoes. It spreads rapidly in the forcing house, but, if taken promptly upon its first appearance, may be controlled by Bordeaux mixture. I have seen forcing houses of both muskmelons and cucumbers promptly killed off with this fungus.

Anthracnose.—This disease attacks both cucumbers and muskmelons, as well as the bean. The fungus, Colletotrichum Lagenarium, causes rather rounded, dead spots in the leaves and somewhat elongated lesions on the stems. By attacking both leaves and stems, the anthracnose soon cuts down the yield of fruits. It is successfully controlled by Bordeaux mixture in the field, or in the greenhouse by a solution of copper sulphate, one pound to fifty gallons.



Leaf-spot and fruit-spot.—Outdoors we have had outbreaks in Ohio, caused by various leaf-spot fungi. And in other states, notably in Indiana and more recently in Michigan, we have had the cucumber scab or fruit-spot attacking young fruits. As far as I know, these troubles have not been conspicuous in greenhouses, though I am not fully advised as to conditions beyond the borders of Ohio.

Melon leaf-blight.—The muskmelon leaf-blight, which is quite a serious matter in fields, is also troublesome in the forcing house. I believe firmly in the efficiency of spraying to keep down this leaf fungus, alternaria. Muskmelons will not stand quite so strong a spray as cucumbers, and the strength of Bordeaux mixture may wisely be reduced.

Cucumber and melon wilts.—With each of these crops, we have two distinct wilt diseases; namely, a bacterial disease, which is transmitted by biting insects and probably through the soil; and a fusarium wilt, which is certainly transmitted both by biting insects and through the soil. Beyond soil treatment, for which steaming is best, it is wise to gather and burn all wilted plants of either kind, should this trouble break out in the greenhouse.

Rhizoctonia.—Two or three years ago we had a good deal of complaint in this district, and later from Cleveland, by reason of the unsatisfactory growth of cucumbers. These vines had small, somewhat curled leaves, and there was evident lack of vigor. It was finally found that, in this case of leaf-curl, a portion of the rootlets were destroyed by the fungus of lettuce rosette, rhizoctonia. It also developed that, where the strong formaldehyde drench had been used, the fungus had been well killed out, while with the weaker drench it was unsatisfactory, a disease developing on the cucumber roots. The same facts apply to muskmelons. The remedy lies in the thoroughness of soil treatment.

Nematodes.—Cucumbers are especially susceptible to attacks of eelworms, and the root-knots caused by them are easily discovered by washing out the roots. Soil steaming is effective against these microscopic worms.

The Market.

Business continues quiet, with a painful excess of all kinds of stock. Carnations are still a drug in the market and never before at this time of year have they been so plentiful or so cheap. The great addition of glass devoted to the culture of this flower during the present season has destroyed all previous prices. Roses, except for some of the best grades, meet with little or no demand. Beauties hold their own, and there has been some demand for white sorts during the last week. Spanish iris is at its height at present and can be bought for about $1 per hundred wholesale. Outside stock of all kinds, such as bachelor's buttons, coreopsis and gaillardias, seem to sell better than inside-grown flowers.

Bride gladioli have made their appearance in the stores and are proving to be good sellers; there is considerable inquiry for them from the country dealers and, if they are as scarce this year as they were last Memorial day, the growers who have a supply on hand will do well.

All eyes are turned toward Decoration day, and from present indications we may expect quite a fair trade. Many out-of-town dealers are here this week and preparations are being made to handle all possible orders.

There has been little doing in San Francisco of late, except for funeral orders, which have been quite brisk for several days, and there were a few fair sized wedding decorations thrown in for good measure.

Various Notes.

Ferrari Bros. are sending in a nice cutting of American Beauty roses.

J. J. Kegley is now located at Sawtelle, Cal.

The Seido Co., of Stege, will erect two carnation houses, each 25x150, in the near future.

H. M. Sanborn, of Oakland, has reorganized his business in Oakland and Berkeley as a corporation, with his son, A. D. Sanborn, as general manager. The father will depart on an eastern trip in a few days.

Robert Hutchison is with the Thorsted Floral Co. G.

ANNUALS IN CALIFORNIA.

The growing of annuals in the neighborhood of San Francisco has been brought to greater perfection this season than ever before. The demand has been large, owing partially to the severe frosts early in the year, which destroyed many bedding and border plants that usually survive our winters. On the other hand, the public has found that there is some difficulty in producing from seed many of our showy annuals so as to have them early enough for spring flowering. A few dealers have wisely taken advantage of the fact that the ordinary flower lover is poorly equipped to handle this part of gardening, and quantities of soft stock have been in the market since early in February for their benefit.

There has also been a notable advancement in the quality and in the methods of handling adopted this season. Well made, clean flats have taken the places of the old, harum-scarum boxes, and uniform sizes are now usually found where we were used to seeing all shapes and sizes. These are apparently insignificant items, but a neat flat and uniform sized plants have a good effect on the buying public and help to make sales. Flower lovers are quick to take notice of anything in this line in which they are interested, and the high standard set by some of our growers this season cannot but result in heavier sales for clean, healthy stock next year. As an indication of the amount of stock of this kind sold, one firm in the vicinity of San Francisco sold over 3,000 boxes since the first of the year. These were distributed among probably fifty retail flower and seed stores and the season is yet far from being over. The complaint has been made for many years that there has been but little of this stock shown by the retailers and that the people have had but little opportunity to see what they are most interested in at this time of the year. Now that the growers have shown what they can produce and how quickly the plant buyers will purchase when the chance is offered, there should be many more thousands of boxes of annuals placed on the market next year. GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The regular meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held in Glen Cove, Wednesday, May 11, with a large attendance, and President Duthie in the chair. Three new members were elected and three applications for membership were received. The schedule for the summer show, to be held June 15, will be out in a few days, and a most successful affair is anticipated. Messrs. Eccles, Gaut and Johnston acted as judges, with the following decisions: Monthly prizes—Best three heads of lettuce, S. T. Trepass; twelve gardenias, G. Wilson, who also captured first for twelve mushrooms. Cultural certificates were awarded to S. T. Trepass for tomatoes, T. Evert for a grand box of mushrooms, and H. McDonald for cucumbers. Honorable mention was given to H. Matz, Glen Cove, for a promising sweet pea seedling; V. Cleres, for a fine plant of Canterbury bells, also for three heads of lettuce; Paul Reul, for a collection of vegetables; F. Petroccia, for beans; T. Reidenbach, for lettuce, citrus and a fine vase of sweet peas; H. McDonald, for a grand vase of antirrhinums; H. Fleishauer, for pink and red Darwin tulips, also for a bunch of fine rhubarb. G. Wilson received the thanks of the society for a fine deutzia and for asparagus; H. Matz, for vase of sweet peas; F. Petroccia for lettuce, and Paul Reul, for sweet peas.

The next meeting will be fern night and prizes will be awarded for best pteris, nephrolepis and adiantum. In the report of the last meeting, I omitted to mention a cultural certificate awarded to V. Cleres for a vase of American Beauty roses. Mr. Cleres knows how to grow them, for they were exceptionally fine.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1909-10: Pres., F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; Vice-pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.: Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-fifth annual meeting, Denver, June 8 to 10, 1910.

REPORTS are practically unanimous as to the specially heavy call for apple and peach this spring.

THE Hollanders cannot grow boxwoods nearly so fast as Americans consume them; therefore the sharp rise in prices, especially for the larger sizes.

THE C. S. Harrison Nursery Co. has been incorporated in York, Neb. The members of the company are C. S. Harrison, H. S. King and Fred G. Yule. Mr. Harrison is familiarly known as Father Harrison. He has also been called the Burbank of Nebraska and is well known as a writer on horticultural subjects.

THE Sherman Nursery Co, of Charles City, Ia., has had an unusually prosperous season. The demand for stock, it is said, has been far in excess of the supply on hand, and many orders have necessarily been rejected. Within the last few months 320 acres of land have been added by purchase to the company's holdings, and large tracts of the new ground are being prepared for use.

COMMERCE IN NURSERY STOCK.

According to the U. S. Department of Agriculture the value of the nursery stock imported in the last five years reaches the quite respectable sum of $8,935,014. The figures by years are as follows:

1909	$1,946,907
1908	2,005,885
1907	1,852,534
1906	1,617,622
1905	1,512,066

How poorly our exports compare is shown by the total for the same period, which reaches only $1,252,289. The figures by years are as follows:

1907	225,339
1906	242,056

IN THE SOUTHWEST.

Concerning nursery conditions through eastern Texas, following an eighteen months' drought during 1908-9, we started into the year under unfavorable conditions: our stand of grafts and buds, in the main, poor; cuttings and seeds of every description probably twenty-five per cent of an average for 1909. During the late winter months rain fell sufficient to germinate seeds and cuttings, and there was a good season for plantings. Our prospects for 1910 are satisfactory, while, as before stated, we go into the year with depleted stock. The cost of imported stock being high the past season, we figure a reduction of fifty per cent on all imported stocks for 1910, which, coupled with the drought of 1909, means high priced trees, wholesale, and especially is this true of the apple. High grade nursery stock, especially in peach and apple, is scarce over the entire southwest and will command high prices during the season of 1910-11. J. R. MAYHEW.

The Greatest Rose Novelty of the Century
It flowered with us this season and was greatly admired.

REAPPRAISEMENTS.

The Board of General Appraisers has made the following reappraisements of interest to the trade:

NURSERY STOCK.—From Jacs Smits & Co., Naarden, exported February 26 and April 1, 1910; entered at New York. File Nos. 54223 and 54562. Invoice Nos. 19742 and 12271. Findings of Hay, G. A.: Blue spruces, 2-years, 6 to 8 inches; entered at $8 per hundred. Rhododendrons, 1½ to 2 feet; entered at $12 per hundred. Advanced by addition to packing charges. Japan maples, 1-year, field grown; entered at $10, advanced to $15 per hundred. Rhododendrons, 2 to 3 feet; entered at $20, advanced to $28 per hundred. Further advanced by addition to packing charges.

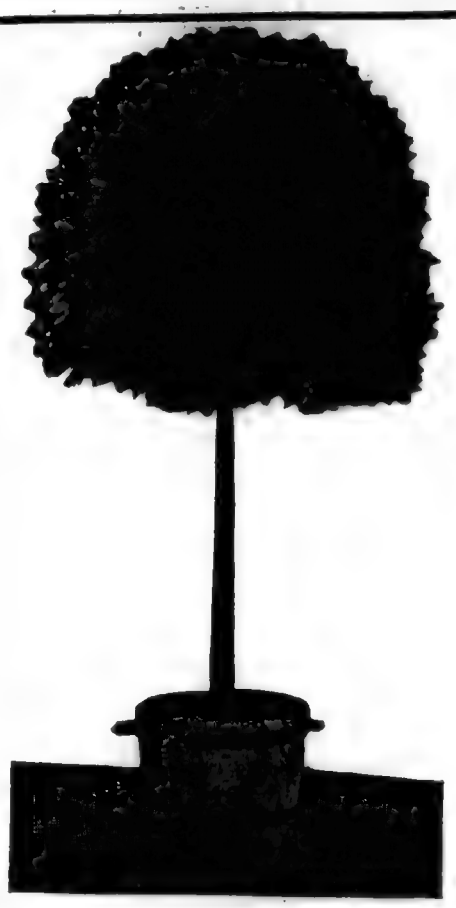
THE SPIRAEAS.

In the whole realm of deciduous flowering shrubs no single genus gives so long a succession of bloom as the spiræas. By planting a number of varieties, flowers may be had from April until October; in fact, this year S. Thunbergii was well open the last of March in a sheltered location, even in cold New England, and it is quite common with this same variety to find flowers on it in November, if we get a few days of average Indian summer warmth.

S. Thunbergii is a slender, graceful grower. During severe winters it kills back a good deal in exposed locations. This year the plants all flowered beautifully and were well open by the middle of April. Branches of this spiræa, cut and placed in water in a warm greenhouse, will open out finely in February and March in the same way as the forsythias and prunus. This spiræa should be planted with tall, coarse growing shrubs. It looks best in a bed or colony by itself.

S. Reevesiana fl. pl. is a tall and graceful grower. It has the advantage over some other kinds of holding its foliage well along into the fall. The leaves are bright and bluish green in color, and the double white flowers are produced in May and June.

S. opulifolia is a vigorous growing spiræa and suitable for screening purposes. It does not make a good single specimen and is better massed. The flat heads of pure white flowers open in southern New England early in June. There is also a golden-leaved form of S. opulifolia which is admired by some growers.



S. Van Houttei is undoubtedly the best of all the spiræas and is known to almost everyone. It is a popular shrub for supplying cut sprays for Memorial day in many sections and the pruning back it receives each year only seems to make the plants take on new vigor. As a single specimen this is undoubtedly the best of all spiræas, the pendulous, graceful branches being a veritable mass of snowy whiteness. We have heard objections to the effect that the plants carry too much flower in proportion to the small foliage, and there is some truth in this, but for an easily grown, ironclad spiræa people are likely to plant S. Van Houttei more than any other sort.

S. arguta, of which there are several forms, is in our estimation the most beautiful of the dwarf early blooming spiræas. It was this season in full flower in the Arnold Arboretum, Boston, as early as April 20. The flowers are pure white; the branches lack the graceful character of S. Thunbergii, but the flowers individually are larger and purer and the plant appears to be much hardier and in nearly every way more desirable than S. Thunbergii.

quite a sensation when first introduced. While it rarely exceeds eighteen inches in height, it blooms almost persistently from June until October. The crimson heads of flowers make this spiræa valuable, it being the deepest colored of the whole family. As a low, deciduous hedge plant, it is effective. It is also excellent for mass effects, or as a border for shrubbery. Cut away the early flower heads as they fade, to insure a constant crop of bloom the rest of the summer. The variety Bumalda is itself worthy of a place, its rose-colored flowers being produced from midsummer onwards.

S. prunifolia fl. pl., commonly known as the double-flowered, plum-leaved spiræa, is a beautiful Japanese variety of tall growth. The double white flowers, which are small and not unlike white daisies, are open in May and last remarkably well. Both this spiræa and S. Van Houttei are commonly known as the bridal wreath, owing to their remarkable wealth of bloom.

S. Billardii, a colored spiræa, is well worthy of a place. The plant is of vigorous habit and flowers during July and August, when there is some scarcity among shrubs, especially those carrying bright pink flowers.

S. callosa is a rather dwarf grower, with deep-rose flowers, which, appearing towards the end of June, are produced more or less all summer. There is a dwarf variety, S. callosa alba, with pure white, flat heads of flower, also a dwarf pinkish form, superba.

While the foregoing comprise the cream of the spiræas, there are many other varieties, including S. sorbifolia, with foliage like the mountain ash; S. tomentosa, with purplish pink flowers

NEW ROSE AMERICAN PILLAR

NO Climbing Rose is attracting the attention that "American Pillar" does, and most deservedly so. It is by far the best single-flowered climbing rose for outside purposes; and on account of the great durability of its flowers, it is the best single-flowered forcing rose.

July 12, 1909.

Gentlemen:

Let me tell you, too, that the American Pillar is a better Rose than you know, perhaps. The plant I had from you, which was planted this spring under unfavorable conditions, is now giving us a succession of most exquisite bloom.

Yours truly,

J. HORACE McFARLAND,
Pres. of American Civic Association,
Harrisburg, Pa.

COMMENT FROM THE LONDON GARDEN.

opening in late July; S. Regeliana, carrying dense pink panicles early in July; S. carpinifolia, a variety with white flowers opening in July. Among the numerous introductions by E. H. Wilson from western China are many spiræas. Nearly all of these are proving hardy in the vicinity of Boston, and we are likely to get some valuable additions to our already fairly long list of these most useful shrubs from them. W. N. Craig.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

There was a good supply of flowers of all kinds last week, although there was a shortage of white carnations and roses the first day or two, on account of the close cutting for Mothers' day, which was more generally observed here than ever before. Funeral work continues heavy, and a number of social functions, including the junior "prom." at Brown University, made a busy week.

The present indications are that flowers will be unusually scarce for Memorial day. Lilacs, which usually are at their height at that time, are well advanced now and will be gone by then. Early wild flowers are also in full bloom and in ten days or a fortnight will be on the decline. Dealers are rejecting all orders for that date, where a set price is asked for.

Various Notes.

G. C. Kelly furnished the large design sent by Governor Pothier and staff to the funeral of Brig. Gen. George Kenyon, surgeon general of the national guard of the state, May 11. It was a 6-foot piece of white roses in the shape of a shield of the state, with the anchor of the state coat of arms in red roses. It was a fine piece.

All the downtown and east side florists had their hands full supplying roses, lily of the valley and sweet peas for the junior "prom." on Thursday, May 12.

George Pailthorp, with Samuel Kinder & Bro., of Bristol, has just returned to his duties after a three months' siege of inflammatory rheumatism.

William Jurgens, of Newport, anticipates cutting an immense crop of roses for Memorial day. He was in the city May 12, soliciting special orders.

N. D. Pierce, of the Norwood Greenhouses, is bringing in some fine red peonies, which find ready sale at good prices.

Miss Florence Willard, of the Hope Greenhouses, Massachusetts avenue, is putting one of her large houses entirely to orchids.

Samuel Haire, for many years gardener for the late George McKay, is now gardener for Reginald Vanderbilt, at Sandy Point Farm, South Portsmouth.

Frank L. Budlong, of Auburn, has just secured a fifty-four horse-power Oldsmobile touring car, in which he contemplates making frequent cross country trips this summer.

A representative of the Climax Mfg. Co., of New York, was in the city May 11.

There was a smart hail shower about noon May 14. The icy pellets were of considerable size and came down with no little force. The hail was accompanied by rain, which continued for some time, though the hail fell but a few minutes. There was a sudden drop of temperature, too, the mercury falling eight points in forty minutes. W. H. M.

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

The bottom fell out of the carnation market the latter part of last week. The prices tumbled from $1 a dozen to 25 cents, and Saturday evening the street fakers were selling good stock at "bargain prices." Sweet peas are retailing at about 15 cents a bunch. Roses are coming in quantities sufficient to meet all demands, and prices range from $3 to $6, wholesale.

Quantities of bedding plants are coming in, and almost every little grocery store has a few baskets of pansies or a dozen pots of geraniums set beside a bunch of celery or a basket of potatoes. One problem the florists have yet to solve is how to hold prices on a profitable basis. The pupils of one of our public schools were furnished with geraniums from 3½-inch and 4-inch pots at 4 cents each, and plants from 3-inch pots can be bought at 50 cents a dozen any day. Aster plants are advertised as low as 5 cents a dozen.

Various Notes.

Charles H. Vick made a "hurry trip" to New York on Thursday, May 12, on business connected with the S. A. F. trade exhibit. New Yorkers will use a large amount of space, for plants, cut flowers and florists' supplies. Philadelphia will be a close second—maybe the Quaker City will be first, too, unless the New Yorkers hurry up.

S. A. Anderson, of Buffalo, is planning for an extensive exhibit of begonias.

About thirty of the members of the Florists' Association availed themselves of the opportunity to inspect the collection of lilacs at Highland park on Friday afternoon, May 13. The party was personally conducted by W. C. Barry, vice-president of the city park commission, and John Dunbar, assistant superintendent of parks, and two busy hours were spent in examining some of the specimens in a collection of 213 varieties. The lilacs are now in their prime, and on Sunday thousands of Rochesterians and visitors from nearby towns thronged the park, the lilac collection being the great attraction. E. F. R.

ORANGE, N. J.

Dr. J. M. W. Kitchen, of East Orange, read a paper on "The Question of Heating for Orchid Culture" before the New Jersey Floricultural Society, in Lindsley hall, 240 Main street, May 13. He recommended hot water as the best medium for heating and advised having plenty of radiating surface, so as to have the pipes only moderately hot, which makes it more congenial for the orchids.

An interesting discussion followed in regard to the time of shading. Dr. Kitchen said he shaded in the latter part of January and used white lead and kerosene for that purpose. J. A. Manda considered that time too early, and said the latter part of March was time enough. He recommended crude oil and whiting as being the best material for shading, as well as the cheapest.

John J. Dervan asked Dr. Kitchen what was the best thing to do to get rid of the cattleya fly. He replied that he had tried all the different kinds of insecticides, but found he got the best results from strong fumigation with tobacco stems when the plants were not in flower.

The monthly exhibit for points was exceptionally fine and the competition was keen. Those who lead in the various classes at present are: Roses, A. B. Jenkins, Albert F. Larson gardener; carnations, Chas. A. Hathaway, Max Schneider gardener; vegetables, A. C. Von Gaasbeck, John J. Dervan gardener; foliage and flowering plants, S. M. & A. Colgate, William Reid gardener.

The following are the awards of the judges: Roses—Albert F. Larson, 90 points; John J. Dervan, 90; Frank Drew, 85; William Reid, 70. Carnations—Max Schneider, 80 points; John J. Dervan, 75; William Reid, 70. Flowering plants—John J. Dervan, 85 points; William Reid, 75. Foliage plants—William Reid, 90 points. Collection of vegetables, John J. Dervan, 90 points. Lager & Hurrell, cattleya Mossiæ, 80 points.

Certificates were awarded for the following exhibits, not in competition for points: Max Schneider, cineraria, Victory carnation, rhubarb and lettuce, cultural certificate; John J. Dervan, calceolarias, cultural certificate; Albert F. Larson, roses, cultural certificate.

Fritz Berglund, gardener for the Essex County Country Club, showed a nice vase of Canterbury bells. Albert F. Larson received a first-class certificate for a scarlet seedling carnation.

John J. Dervan will read an essay on "Growing Roses Under Glass," at the next meeting.

William Reid, Sec'y.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Although stock receipts were on the increase last week, there was enough doing, especially in funeral work, to keep the market in a fine condition. There was no surplus of anything. Carnations, for once, were about equal to the demand and brought a good price. The quality of roses, especially Beauties, is still good and they found ready sale. Smilax continues scarce, but a good supply of Asparagus Sprengeri helped out nicely.

Various Notes.

As was anticipated, the annual May ball given by the Milwaukee Florists' Club, May 14, was in every respect a grand success. Florists and their friends turned out in good numbers and made merry till the small hours of the night. The hall was prettily decorated with palms, ferns and wild smilax. The palms were donated by the following firms: Aug. F. Kellner Co., Chas. Menger, Edlefsen-Leidiger Co. and Emil Welke. The smilax was donated by the Holton & Hunkel Co. All in all, it again proved to be an ideal time for promoting that feeling of good fellowship which is so essential in order to obtain the best results in all societies or clubs.

It has been some time since any funeral called for so many large flower pieces as that of the late William C. Brumder. There were no less than two dozen good-sized designs, and these, with the numerous bouquets, both large and small, presented a grand effect at the cemetery.

The Edlefsen-Leidiger Co. says that it was compelled to work all of Tuesday night to get out orders for the Brumder funeral last week.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. is now receiving daily shipments of carnations from its greenhouse plant, and they are of a fine quality.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. reports shipping trade as brisk as ever. This firm's Beauties are holding out well, both in quality and quantity.

John C. Arnold, who is nicely settled in the new store at 603 East Water street, now has one of the neatest places in town. E. O.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

There is a good market for flowers, with fairly good prices. Carnations are in good demand; 50 cents and 60 cents per dozen, retail, is the general price. Roses are of good quality. These retail at $1.50 per dozen; sweet peas at $1 per hundred blooms; lilies at $2 per dozen; snapdragons at 75 cents and $1 per dozen. A few tulips are seen; these sell at 60 cents per dozen, retail. Daffodils are about all gone. Funeral work is plentiful, using immense lots of stock. Pansies sell well.

Geraniums are being called for now; they retail for 12 cents and 15 cents each, in 3½-inch and 4-inch pots. There are large quantities, also, of other bedding stock. Lilac will be about all gone by Memorial day, as well as nearly all outdoor tulips. Some of the florists have commenced to fill their cemetery vases and urns.

The weather during the last week has been cloudy, and, judging from reports, carnations will be scarce for Memorial day. Greens are scarce just now. Snowballs will probably be in bloom for Decoration day.

Various Notes.

Wm. P. Peirce had some good funeral orders last week. Julius Rosetzsky, his manager, was in Boston last week, as a witness in a case heard by the governor's council, as also was J. H. Cleary, who was one of the most important witnesses in the case. Mr. Cleary is showing some new kind of a flower, which will keep two or three months after being prepared.

Peter Murray has a big batch of forget-me-nots in three different colors, which find a ready sale.

S. S. Peckham and Peckham Bros., of Little Compton, R. I., have an enormous number of geraniums and bedding plants ready for Memorial day. They report a big call for them.

H. V. Sowle will have plenty of geraniums and lilies for Memorial day.

R. H. Woodhouse will be strong on geraniums and vincas for Memorial day.

M. B. Sylvia reports a good business in shrubs, trees and general nursery stock.

PALMS THAT BRING "REPEAT" ORDERS

THAT'S the test of quality—not the FIRST order, but the SECOND, and the THIRD! We're glad for new business—and we're getting a lot of it—but we value most of all the patronage of those who have been with us steadily for years. Such orders prove beyond question the superiority of our Palms—prove the advantage of buying home-grown stock, produced under the care of Palm experts.

All of our Palms are propagated from the seed, right here in our own houses. Ours are clean, strong and vigorous—vastly better than any imported Palms you could buy—yet they cost no more.

These Palms not only bring "repeats" to us, but to you, too—your customers will appreciate their excellence and will order again. It's little trouble to dispose of such "quality stock" and there's profit in it. Use Heacock's Palms for straight sales, for store display, decorating contracts, or renting; you can, in this way, build up a department showing a good income—florists everywhere are doing it.

We offer a very choice collection this spring and advise placing orders early before the stock is picked over. Shipments are made by fast freight, assuring quick deliveries at low carriage rates.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Trade has been somewhat irregular the last week. The cold and rain shortened up stock, however, and the supply just about equaled the demand, so things were easy with the wholesalers and they were not complaining.

The retailers, however, seemed to find cause for complaint, not only from the fact that trade was unusually quiet, but the fact that the first warm days they looked for a grand rush among their plant customers, each one wanting their orders for bedding plants and window and porch boxes filled at once. Plantsmen are getting impatient about the continued cold, which is holding everything back. The first of April vegetation was at least one month ahead, and now the middle of May finds it about a week later than usual, with no better weather in sight, and the weather man predicting frost every night.

Various Notes.

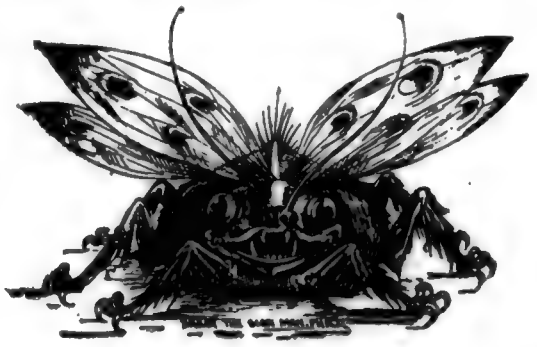
H. L. Blind & Bros. have their new car on the street and, as they have good streets and roads between their east end store and the greenhouses, they expect to make good use of it for the next couple of months.

A couple of inebriates on the evening of Friday, May 13, took a header through the big plate glass window of Breitenstein's store. One was reported in jail, the other in the hospital.

E. C. Reineman writes from Antwerp that they had a delightful voyage, the ocean being as smooth as a mill pond and none of the party being seasick.

The Pittsburg Credit Men's Association has established a credit exchange bureau, which will be invaluable to our local people if they will all get in. Those who have already joined are: W. C. Beckert, A. W. Smith Co. and the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. It is hoped all others in the trade will come in, as "in unity there is strength."

E. C. Ludwig, Julius Ludwig and Charles Erhardt took part Thursday night, May 2, in initiating the sheriff into the B. P. O. E. at Ambridge, Pa. They had a delightful time and got home the following morning.



Fred Burki, who went to Mt. Clemens a week ago, is reported improving and it is expected he will have entirely recovered in a short time.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade was only fair last week, but stock continues good and there is enough to go around.

The season for planting flower beds and veranda boxes opened up early last week with a rush. A cold wave struck us the middle of the week, followed by three nights of frost, which did not help this end of the business. Bedding stock, as a whole, is good, and this is surprising, as we have had one of the worst springs in years for growing good stock.

The outlook for outdoor nowers for Decoration day is not promising, but indoor stock should be plentiful.

Various Notes.

Harry Pahud is back on the old stand after a nine months' stay in Chicago.

Baur & Smith have been sending in some exceptionally good carnations for this time of the year. This firm has been booking a number of large orders for geraniums, and their stock is fine this year.

A. Wiegand & Sons have the exclusive privilege for selling flowers at the Indianapolis motor speedway this year. This firm has been quite busy putting out veranda boxes and flower beds.

Fred Hukreide is looking for a big spring trade this year. He says his bedding plants are the best ever.

L. F. Benson got in a large shipment of bay trees and boxwoods last week.

Irwin Bertermann has charge of the planting for the Bertermann Bros. Co. this year.

F. W. Brandt is contemplating building a conservatory at his residence and stocking it with palms for decorative purposes.

Chas. Volrath, with the Roepke-Rieman Co., is still on the sick list. He has been having a severe time of it as he has been on the shelf for about two months.

WESTBORO, MASS.—It is said that Wm. M. Gardner, the High street florist, has been so fortunate as to fall heir to three legacies within a year. He has just received word from his old home in Dumfries, Scotland, that he is one of four heirs to $25,000 left by the death of an uncle. Only a short time ago he was named as heir to an $18,000 estate in New Haven, and a little later he received $300 from a Scotch bank, which was placed on deposit for him by a relative when he was a child.

Greenhouse Heating.

DOWN in the Pocahontas coal district, whence comes so large a part of florists' fuel, the mines are closed to permit of the consumption of surplus stocks. It is said that present prices for such shipments as go to the open market are not profitable and that for the time being no coal will go forward from this district, except contract shipments.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of the Heating Department, describing their troubles or asking any questions regarding the heating of greenhouses, the piping or boiler-room. But please do not ask us to make a choice of apparatus for you. Each boiler advertised in the REVIEW is a good boiler, and the advertisers sell them on their merits.

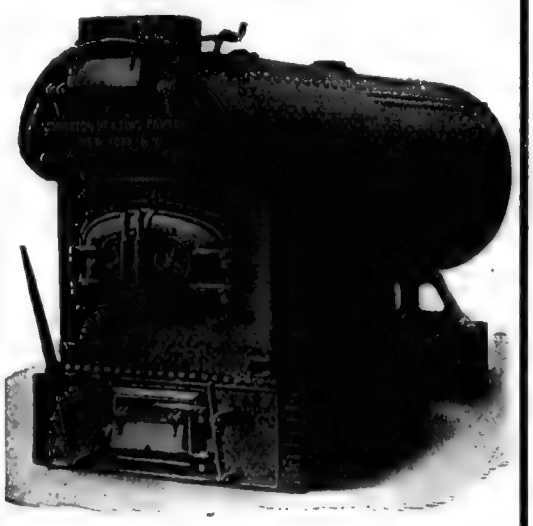
AN ALABAMA HOUSE.

As I intend to build an addition to my greenhouse, I should like to know if it is necessary to install another flow. The house I now have is 17x100 and is heated by hot water. I now have a 3-inch main and eleven 1¼-inch returns. I know that the boiler is capable of heating the new addition, which will be 22x100 feet. In this part of the country it never gets colder than 15 degrees above zero, and that is but a few nights during the winter. A. B. A.

I do not believe it will be wise or satisfactory to attempt to heat the two houses by means of a common flow. Much better satisfaction will be secured if independent flow pipes are carried from the boiler to each house. F. R.

TWIN BOILERS.

I have two fire-box boilers, which will be bricked in, and I wish to connect them and run them together as a battery. I want to arrange them so I can run either one independently of the other. How can I make proper connections? Will I need more than one steam and water gauge? In connecting two boilers to one smokestack, which is the better way—to run two separate smoke pipes to the stack or connect the two pipes with a "Y" and enter the stack with one pipe?
K. W.



It is not always an easy matter to connect boilers so they will work well. The common way of arranging the smokestack when one is used for two boilers is to set the chimney or stack to one side of the boilers and connect the two by a breeching, i. e., a pipe placed horizontally, into which the gases from both boilers enter, and this is then connected with the chimney. Besides this, each boiler should be provided with both steam and water gauges. Yoke the two together at the top, with properly valved connections with the main, to allow either to be used independently, and connect them with the common return, using a swing check between the boiler and the main return in each case, besides a gate valve. Lower the boilers just as far as possible below the pipes in the houses. The greater this distance, the less trouble will be experienced by water backing up in the heating pipes. F. R.

PIPING IN PORTLAND, ORE.

I am going to build two connected greenhouses, each 30x150 feet. They will be built on ground that slopes to the east. There is about four feet of a fall in 150 feet. The boiler will be at the east end of the houses. The walls of the houses are six feet high and the ridges thirteen feet from the ground. These houses are for tomatoes and cucumbers. I want a temperature of 65 degrees at night and 70 to 80 degrees in the daytime, at 4 degrees below zero, Portland, Ore., climate. There are four beds on the floor, the full length of the house. How many 2-inch flows and returns will I need and where would you place them to get the best results? Where would you place the expansion tank? I want to use the gravity system, to help the flow of water. The supply tank will be above the houses, on the higher ground. What size of feed pipe will I need? What size of boiler? H. S.

Each of your houses 30x150 requires sixteen lines of 2-inch pipe to supply sufficient radiation to maintain the temperature desired. It will be advisable to use three lines in each house as risers, and the thirteen returns in as many coils as there are risers for each house; that is, two coils of four pipes each and one with five. Such a plant will require a boiler with about 400 square feet of heating surface. You can place the expansion tank in any convenient location, provided it is fifteen or twenty feet above the heating pipes and connected with the main return near the boiler. F. R.

RESIDENCE AND GREENHOUSES.

For the sake of convenience and economy, we should like to heat our residence and greenhouses with the same plant. The residence is 30x45 and two stories high. The first story measures ten feet to the ceiling, and the second story nine feet. Twenty feet to the north of the residence is a greenhouse, 20x35 and five feet to the eaves. At the southwest corner of the residence is a conservatory, 16x16, which we will replace with a greenhouse 18x35, extending to the walk. The smokestack is forty-five feet in height and the flue is about 10x14 inches. We shall use water heat. We are located in northern Kansas and want ordinary greenhouse temperature. A. J. K.

To heat the two floors of the dwelling will require about 675 square feet of radiation. For a temperature of 60 degrees in the greenhouses, it will be desirable to use 280 square feet of radiation in the house 20x35 feet, and 250 feet in the house 18x35 feet. In order to obtain economical coal consumption, a boiler with a rating of 1,500 square feet should be used.

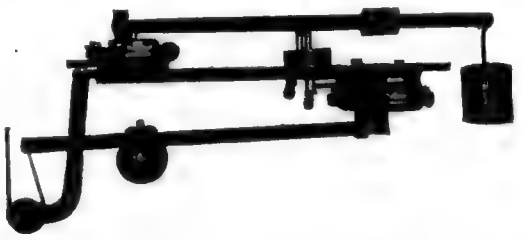
For heating the house 20x35 feet, use one 2½-inch flow pipe and twelve 2-inch returns; or, if it is preferred to have flow pipes on the side walls, use three 2½-inch flows and nine 2-inch returns. In the other house, three flows and eight returns will be needed.

The flue is of ample size and height for the amount of radiation required.

Attica, N. Y.—A. J. Pauly is building another greenhouse, making four altogether.

Would You Save One-Quarter of Your Coal Bill?

INSTALL



A Kitts Improved Hydraulic Damper Regulator.

Florist Peter Crowe, Rose Place, Utica, N. Y., voluntarily writes:—

"I am very much pleased to let you know that the Damper Regulator I bought from you last fall is by far the best apparatus for greenhouse purposes. I had my book-keeper compare my coal bill of last with that of this year and I find a saving of one quarter the amount of this year's coal over last year's; also the past winter was a great deal colder and longer than the winter before.

"There is another very good feature about the Damper Regulator, as it keeps a uniform heat in all the houses at all times by putting on and shutting off pipes. And I find that my Roses and Ferns did far better this winter than any winter so far, as the temperature was so uniform at all times.

"My reason for writing you is to let you know, and also to thank you for bringing my attention to the Regulator, and I assure you I cannot speak too highly of this machine."

EVANSVILLE.

The Market.

Business last week was a little slow, but seems to be much better at present. Roses and carnations have been affected considerably by thrips for some time, but are somewhat improved. Peonies and gladioli are quite plentiful.

Mothers' day was a great day for the florists here. White carnations were not the only flower worn, but flowers of every color were seen and were in great demand. There were not enough carnations to go around and the next best seller was the white rose. Mothers' day seems to have taken a great hold and should be pushed by everyone in the trade.

Various Notes.

Julius Niednagel & Sons had a large cut of carnations for Mothers' day; they sold all and could have sold a great many more.

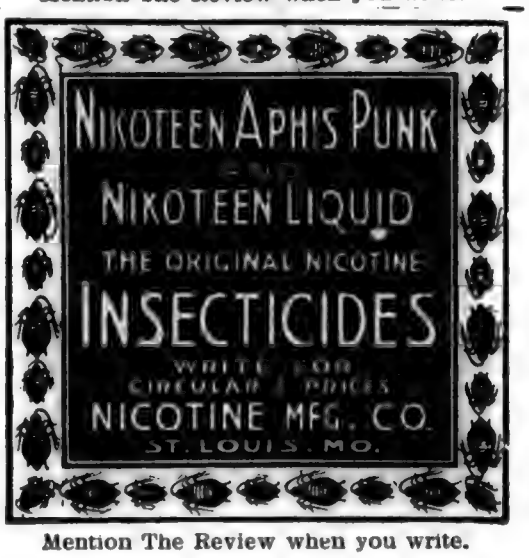
The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. had a big demand for carnations for Mothers' day. Roses sold well, also. This firm has a large variety of spring plants. They are cutting lots of peonies.

Karl Zeidler has several large jobs of planting out in parks and his stock of geraniums is fine. He is quite busy and uses lots of cut flowers.

Nellie Goodge is extremely busy doing cemetery work. She is not in the best of health, but manages to oversee all work done. Her stock of bedding plants is large and extra good.

J. C. Elsperman has been busy right along. He has a large plant trade, and this, along with the funeral work, keeps him hustling.

Otto Kuebler, of Newburg, is sending in a good many roses. E. L. F.



KENDALLVILLE, IND.—Henry Johnson, formerly a florist at Angola, Ind., finds that he is cramped for room, and will erect a new iron frame greenhouse, 28x30, during the coming summer. Cement will be used for the benches. Mr. Johnson already has ten houses.

If you want to save your crops.

In the first hot days of spring—with a good south wind blowing—you open the ventilators, and then the fight with Thrips begins, the hardest battle of the year. You'll lose the fight if you are not prepared. Don't wait until the pests come—get ready to give them a warm reception. Every spring we receive mail rush orders, telegraph and telephone messages from growers who must fight Thrips and have neglected to keep on hand. Don't wait—have your To-Bak-Ine ready. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." Keep the Thrips in control and save money, time, labor and worry. Paint the heating pipes with To-Bak-Ine Fumigating Compound. After fires are out, vaporize it over alcohol lamps. Spray To-Bak-Ine Liquid. Any of these methods will control Thrips and other greenhouse pests—but it's easier to keep them out than to get them out. Fumigate regularly before you see the pests—especially just before you open the ventilators, and just after closing them, in the warm spring days. Don't fail to have a can of To-Bak-Ine on hand—and use it.

DAYTON, OHIO.

The Market.

In these busy days of May everyone seems to be in a hurry. The pot plant trade is an addition to the regular run of business, and at the present time it is really a business of itself, as the demand steadily increases day by day and plants of all descriptions are commencing to move rapidly.

Orders for Decoration day bouquets are coming in by the wholesale, and the awful rush makes one almost wish that it was all over. The demand for funeral work was brisk last week, and, as is usual, light colored flowers were scarce, making it impossible to fill all orders. This was especially true with Enchantress and white carnations, which were cut so closely for Mothers' day that one was hardly able to catch up on them.

The general demand was also good; so, taking all into consideration, last week's business was most satisfactory in every respect.

Various Notes.

The Dayton florists were apprised of the importance of Mothers' day two years ago, but at that time few knew of the idea, although a fair demand for white flowers resulted. The second year, however, it was quite generally known, and a heavier demand ensued, but this season it was known by nearly everyone. The newspapers took the matter up and announced the idea, the mayor issued a proclamation, and churches, societies and schools took to the observance of the day in honor of Mother. The supply was quite inadequate, the only complaint being that the people demanded all white, while, to our way of thinking, all colors are just as appropriate.

A senator's wife recently visited the floral establishment of Mrs. B. Haschke; her attention was attracted by an unusually elaborate bed of S. A. Nutt geraniums, and while gazing at them with intense admiration she remarked: "How I do love to see a nice, large pot filled with red geraniums and spaghetti!"

John Kuhlen, of Jackson, Tenn., has recently accepted a position with the Miami Floral Co.

The Heiss Co. is tearing down two of the old greenhouses, and in their place will build one large house, with all modern equipments. This firm reports business to be most encouraging.

W. W. Horlacker reports that business with him has been exceptionally good.

Visitors last week were: George Bird, of Sidney, O.; D. Rusconi, Cincinnati, O.; A. Leedle, of Leedle Rosary, Springfield, O., and Mr. Hudson, representing Benjamin Hammond, Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

The Market.

Preparations are under way for a heavy Memorial day trade. As our weather conditions are such that planting outside is not safe until a week before Memorial day, the last few days are crowded to the limit. Orders are coming in steadily and the local florists are well pleased with the prospects.

Light pink gladioli are attracting much attention in the display windows at present.

Various Notes.

Robert Birnie, formerly with the Erie Floral Co., is now growing roses for William McCarthy.

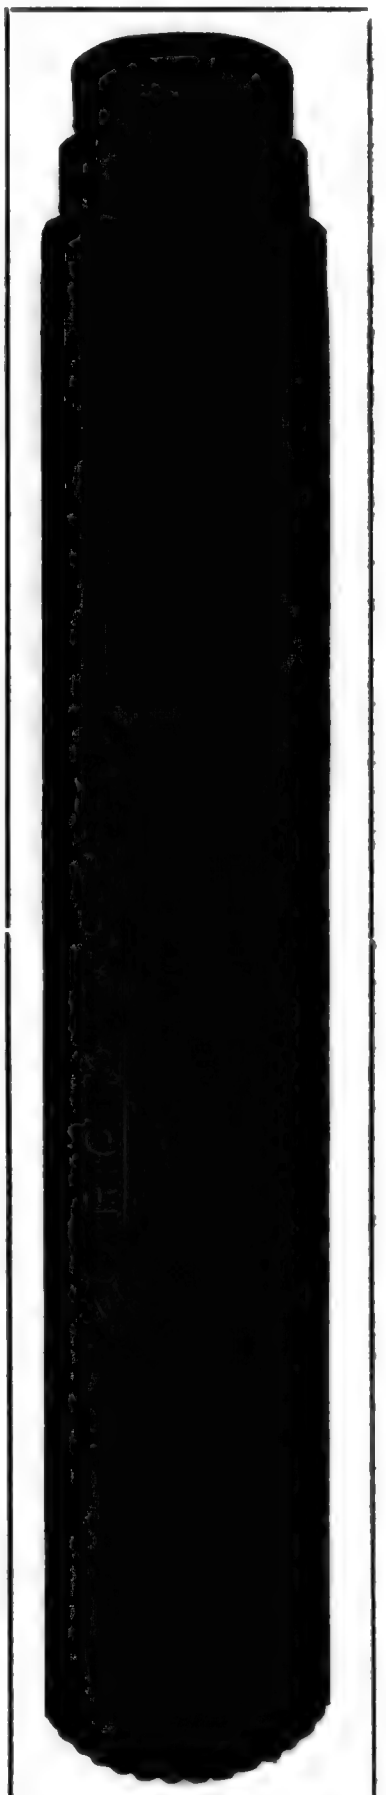
THE FLORISTS' BEST HOSE IS

"ELECTRIC"

WILL NOT CRACK, SPLIT, BURST OR KINK

THERE is not—and cannot be any other Greenhouse Hose like "Electric" All important processes of its manufacture are protected by basic patents.



A jacket of heavy cotton seine twine is braided—braided, mind you, not wrapped—over a tube of pure rubber. Next, a second tube of rubber—same quality—is put on over the cotton jacket. Another mantle of seine twine is braided around the second tube. A third tube—corrugated lengthwise—is put on over the second cotton jacket.

Each of the five alternating sections of rubber and of cotton is a complete hose in itself.

The hose is then encased in metal tubes, or moulds, 500 feet long. Liquid under high pressure is put inside the hose and locked in. The whole is then placed in a sealed oven and live steam turned on. This steam heats the liquid, causing it to expand and force the hose against the metal tube. A pressure of 500 pounds to the square inch is applied.

The rubber tubes and the braided cotton jackets are amalgamated or vulcanized by the pressure; converted into a single or unified fabric of mingled rubber and cotton.

Before it leaves our factory, every foot of Electric Hose is tested by a water pressure of 400 pounds to the inch. Ordinary pressure used by Florists for syringing is 40 to 60 pounds—and frequently bursts ordinary hose.

This is why you should ALWAYS USE "ELECTRIC" HOSE

Not the cheapest, but THE LEAST EXPENSIVE for Florists.

FACTORY VERSUS GREENHOUSE.

The Pierce Arrow Motor Car Co., of Buffalo, N. Y., is building new shops in that city, and are installing window-opening machinery throughout. The interesting part of this to most growers is the comparison of the number of ventilator machines, fittings, etc., that go into this job and in the average size of greenhouse. There are 1,490 sashes that ventilate in this new automobile plant, and it requires 2,980 arms and rods, and 135 machines to operate them. It is necessary to use 1-inch and 1¼-inch shafting throughout, and to support this shafting 1,940 hangers are required.

A special gear box and driving device were designed for this job, but with a view toward greenhouse needs, however, and the King Construction Co., who are doing the work, will probably use this new ventilating machinery in some of the larger greenhouses that are to be erected by them.

RULE FOR PLANTING CANNAS.

From a foot to a foot and a half each way is the proper distance apart for canna plants, according to the vigor of the plant. If you have a round bed, start with one plant in the center, put six in the first circle surrounding this center plant, and for each subsequent row increase the number of plants by six. If the rows and the plants in the rows are equal distances apart, this rule is a never failing one for circular beds, whether the planting distance be six inches or two feet.

After the plants begin to make rapid growth they should never be allowed to become dry. They are great lovers of moisture, but the National Council of Horticulture says the supply of water should be in accordance with the heat. De not be lavish in watering when the temperature is below 60 degrees, or before the plants have reached a stage of active growth.

New Bedford, Mass.—The eighth annual exhibition of the New Bedford Horticultural Society will be held September 15 to 17. A schedule is ready for distribution.

ALBANY, N. Y.

Preparations for the second annual flower show of the Albany Florists' Club are well under way. At the last monthly meeting of the club President Frederick Goldring appointed the committee which had charge last year to take up the details for the show to be held this fall. Fred A. Danker, who was chairman of last year's committee, will continue in the position.

Edward Griffin, one of the members, complained that out-of-town people were planting trees in front of house-owners' properties without securing a permit from the department of public works. He said that all local nurserymen and florists must secure a permit before they are allowed to plant a tree on any of the streets of the city. President Goldring appointed Edward Griffin, Patrick Hyde and E. P. Meaney a committee to wait upon the proper authorities and to call their attention to this violation.

Last year the club contributed a wreath to be placed Memorial day on the soldiers' monument in the Rural cemetery. It was decided to continue this custom and also to place a wreath upon the grave of M. Hulbert, a charter member and G. A. R. veteran, who died during the year.

Kansas City, Mo.—One of the neighbors of W. A. Bastian, of the Alpha Floral Co., has special reason to be thankful to him—thankful also for the fact that Mr. Bastian, probably on account of the Mothers' day rush, was compelled to work overtime and was wide-awake during the dark hours of night. When Mr. Bastian chanced to look out of his Walnut street store, where he was working about 3:30 o'clock in the morning, he saw a man stealing shoes from the show window of a neighboring store, after cutting a hole in the glass. Mr. Bastian summoned the police and the burglar was caught, along with his booty of sixty-nine pairs of boots.

Copy of Letter Received From Mr. Witthuhn.

KING CONSTRUCTION CO.,
North Tonawanda, N. Y.

Gentlemen:—I have been intending to write you for some time, relative to the boiler explosion which I had on January 16th.

When I reached the place I found the store front and one side blown out into the street. The partition between the store and room over boiler pit was also a wreck. I fully expected to find my greenhouse entirely flat. Imagine my surprise on seeing the iron framework and roof bars still in place and apparently unharmed. Both side walls for about half the length of the house were blown out away from the sill and only held by the eaves. In places even the cement walls were cracked and broken. All the roof vent sash were blown up and in the first three sections the force was so great that the sash were raised straight up. The vent shafting was twisted completely out of the clamp couplings. The force of the explosion was down through the greenhouse; parts of the boiler were forced through the coal bunker and retaining wall.

The damage to the greenhouse aside from that mentioned above, and of course the glass breakage, was small. The lower struts are slightly bent and the rafters a trifle bowed in the first three sections, but this does not affect the strength or utility of the house in the least. When I replaced the roof glass I did not have to line up or readjust a single bar.

When I think what might have been the result of the explosion had the houses been of wood construction or any other type not designed as yours are, I feel that your Iron Frame House is by far the safest investment.

You may rest assured that my future building will be the King Houses and will recommend them most strongly.

Wishing you success, I am,

Yours very truly,

FRED C. WITTHUHN.

THE KEWANEE SYSTEM OF WATER SUPPLY

These Greenhouses are Equipped with The Kewanee System of Water Supply

This illustration shows the Riverside Greenhouses at Wichita, Kas. Though not connected with any city mains, they are provided with service equal to that of the best city water works system.

Mr. F. Kuechenmeister, proprietor of the Riverside Greenhouses, says: "The Kewanee Water Supply System I bought of you, gives entire satisfaction. The outfit works fine—no cost for repairs."

Good water service is appreciated everywhere. But nowhere is this service so essential, as it is for greenhouses, nurseries, truck gardens, etc. The water supply problem for these places has been successfully solved by

The Kewanee System of Water Supply

In the Kewanee System, there is no elevated tank to leak, freeze, overflow or collapse. Instead, the water is stored in a Kewanee Pneumatic Tank, and it is delivered by air pressure.

The Kewanee Tank may be located in the cellar or buried in the ground. It is completely protected from all extremes in weather. You will be sure of water of the right temperature during all seasons. This water will have strong pressure behind it—40 to 60 pounds is easily possible. 40 pounds is equal to the pressure from an elevated tank 93 feet high.

And you can have all the water you want, because Kewanee Tanks are made in sizes to suit any requirements.

There are nearly ten thousand Kewanee Systems in successful operation. They are being used for country and suburban homes, farms, green houses, truck gardens, public institutions, schools, etc.

Wherever city water service is not available or is unsatisfactory, the Kewanee System is the logical choice.

Let our engineering department solve your water supply problem. No charge for preliminary specifications and estimates. Satisfactory results guaranteed.

Write for our 64-page illustrated catalog which tells all about the Kewanee System. This book is free. Ask for catalog No. 55

FLOWER STORE FOR CHARITY.

Philip Breitmeyer did a thing unique in the annals of the trade when he offered a Detroit charity the use of his flower store for an afternoon's sale.

Tag days have become common, it is quite the ordinary thing for the women to run the street cars for a day, and occasionally a newspaper surrenders its office for an issue for a local charity. At Detroit the interest at present is in the suppression of tuberculosis, and when the mayor of the city offered to give the use of his store for an afternoon the Society for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis gladly accepted. The date for the sale was set as Thursday, May 19, and from 1 o'clock to 5 o'clock the society ladies of Detroit acted as shop girls. The event had been widely advertised, with the assurance that only ordinary prices would be charged for stock, but many customers did not accept their change. An extremely large stock had been provided, many of the florists of Detroit joining with Mr. Breitmeyer in donating flowers for the sale, but at the close of the afternoon scarcely anything remained and the charity had gained an excellent profit. The store was handsomely decorated for the event and an orchestra was ensconced in one of the corners. The regular flower store employees, while they did no selling, were on hand to keep the stock in order and to wrap for the salespeople.

It is not to be presumed that Mayor Breitmeyer was actuated by any other than a charitable motive, but he found that he had obtained probably the best advertisement his flower store ever had, except the one coincident with his election as mayor of Detroit. The sale brought in hundreds of people who were not regular customers, and the newspaper talk brought Breitmeyer's flower store to the attention of everyone in Detroit.

IN A NEW YORK CHURCH.

One of the most elaborate wedding decorations of the season in New York was that put up last week at the Church of the Incarnation for the Borland-Pell nuptials. M. A. Bowe, who did the work, supplies the following description:

"The church background was banked with palms to the height of thirty feet, covering the entire blank wall, extending to both sides of the church, thus giving a setting for the floral decoration, which consisted entirely of spring blossoms of pink and white.

"The railing was banked with pink snapdragon, with graceful vines. On the altar was placed a standing cross of white roses, banked with snapdragon and Farleyense ferns.

"The foreground of the palms was entirely of spring flowers, weigelia, apple and cherry blossoms, with pink peonies and hydrangeas interspersed. The pulpit was of plants and white deutzia, with garlands of pink roses under the drum, making a pretty flowering effect.

"On the choir stalls large bunches of peonies and spring flowers were looped with asparagus strings.

"On every other pew bunches of pink peonies and bridal wreath were tied with white ribbon.

"Half way up on the columns baskets were arranged around them, filled with apple blossoms, with vines falling from them.

"A large plaque of weigelia, deutzia and roses over the front of the organ stall, with vines falling from them, gave a graceful effect."

WEDDING BOUQUETS.

Some people think the bride must carry a bouquet of valley, or, possibly, there wouldn't be any wedding. But it isn't so. The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph of a wedding bouquet of daisies—and everything passed off smoothly.

Such a bunch is a relief from the monotony of valley bouquets and no less reflects the skill of the florist. Those who make their valley bouquets to resemble a head of cauliflower can achieve an equally "bunchy" effect with daisies. Also, with daisies it is just as difficult to get a light and airy effect without permitting the bouquet to become loose and straggly. There is no work of the retail florist that taxes the ingenuity more severely than the making of wedding bouquets.

If your brides insist on valley, the bridesmaids will carry the daisies and sweet peas and rosebuds.

EVERYBODY WANTS

What Everybody Has.

One of the surest ways to cause people to want a thing is to make them believe that everybody else who is anybody at all has that thing.

In this wide world there is no other way of creating an impression so sure in its results as newspaper advertising.

A strong advertisement in your leading local paper will go into the majority of the best homes in your city, and the right suggestion will bring you business in spite of any ukase by school managements, prohibiting the sending of flowers to commencements. If the school prohibits the use of flowers on graduation day, what stronger argument could there be for sending flowers to the graduates at their homes? The graduate of such a school is doubly to be congratulated.

Reproduced herewith is an advertisement employed last June by F. H. Kramer at Washington, D. C., that will serve as a model for other advertising along this line. Get something of the kind into your best local daily just before your local school commencements. Don't feel disappointment if you find your competitors also advertising for the same occasion. Remember that the greater publicity given the use of flowers, the more flowers there will be used.

FLOWERS AT A BRIDGE PARTY.

One of the largest affairs of the season at San Francisco was the luncheon and bridge party given by Mrs. Rosenfelt to 122 guests May 16, in the white and gold room of the Hotel St. Francis. The decorations, for originality and effectiveness, would be well worth describing. The guests were seated at one table, 114 feet long by twelve feet wide, which had been skillfully transformed into a miniature garden by Julius Eppstein, the florist of the hotel.

In the center of the garden, surmounting a mossy slope, an electric fountain played myriad-colored jets of water into a large pool, in which goldfish disported themselves, while around the fountain, and scattered through the trees and foliage, cranes, doves, pheasants and birds of many hues and varieties were to be seen. Cunningly-hidden cages, with warbling canaries, added to the scene. Paths wound through the garden, over bridges, through beds of electrically lighted pink tulips and past rustic houses, where automatic dolls, seated at tables on the lawn and strolling through shady dells, were most realistic.

The general scheme was delicate pink and was carried out with potted hydrangeas, Begonia Lorraine, beds of daisies, sweet peas, shaded nooks of maidenhair, pteris and other ferns, Japanese cedars in rocky slopes, rolling lawns and statuary. Each guest was the recipient of a corsage of Cattleya Mendellii.

After luncheon, the guests assembled in the colonial ballroom, which had been converted into a delightful woodland scene, where tall kentia palms gracefully towered over baskets of Woodwardia ferns and odd-shaped vases of hawthorn. Twenty-seven bridge tables were arranged throughout and the winners received parasols as prizes. F.

MOTHERS' DAY AT CALGARY.

Your suggestion through the columns of The Review in regard to getting local papers to give a write-up about Mothers' day certainly had the proper effect. I sent a letter to each of our local papers, which I found were only too glad to devote a part of their paper to. The results the florists of our city had were great—every cut bloom to be had was sold. First the white, then the colored sold; light pink, dark pink, then red. I think it would be a good idea to try to convince the public that a light colored flower would do as well as pure white. Trade in this part of world very good. T. W. Campbell.

A DUPLICATED MOTHERS' DAY.

That the idea embodied in the observance of Mothers' day makes a strong appeal to the general public and wins a quick response, is well illustrated by the experience of Annie E. Newell, a florist at 78 Main street, Houlton, Me. The idea, when proclaimed by her in the community, obtained such swift popularity as to be highly profitable to her. In fact, she celebrated this year's Mothers' day twice, at two different dates, and each time successfully—"thanks to The Review," she says. She advertised colored flowers for mothers still living, white flowers in memory of departed mothers, and as a consequence she disposed of every flower on hand, even selling geranium blooms for boutonnieres.

Then the people of two neighboring towns heard of the "new day," and instantly resolved that they, not to be outdone in well-doing, would observe Mothers' day on the following Sunday. The thought of Mothers' day had captivated them and they were not to be baffled by the mere fact that the appointed day had passed; nor would they wait twelve months for the return of the occasion. So May 15 was Mothers' day in those two towns, and a second opportunity was thus supplied for extra sales. Besides the cut blooms, many nice potted plants were also bought as gifts for mothers.

FATHERS' DAY.

One of the interesting, though perhaps to be expected, results of the way Mothers' day has grasped the sentiment of the people is the proposal that we now have Fathers' day. The suggestion comes from the mothers or daughters. Here is one from Miss Anna L. Sherwood, daughter of John M. Sherwood, of the Neosho Florist Co., Neosho, Mo.:

"Attention being drawn to mothers' day, this thought came to mind: We

PORE OLE DAD.

Ye can scarce pick up a paper
An' its "Poets' Corner" greet,
'Cept ye'll see a pretty poem
'Bout the mother, saintly, sweet;
But you'll have a time a-searchin',
Eyes will be er-achin' bad,
Ere ye'll overtake a poem
At this time for pore ole dad.

No, it isn't willful in 'em,
Them that write of mother dear,
That there's never notice taken
Of her old man settin' near.
No, it's never meant to slight him,
But it looks a little sad—
All the bouquets made for mother,
Not a bloom for pore ole dad.

True, our mother watched above us,
Till her dear old eyes would ache,
But old dad he humped to feed us
Till his back would nearly break;
Mother crooned above the cradle,
Gave devotion, all she had,
Still that wasn't any circus
At this time for pore ole dad!

Do not take one line from mother
When ye write the soul-sweet song,
But if there's a word for father
Now and then it won't be wrong.
Pore old soul! He's bent and wrinkled,
An' I know 'twould make him glad,
If while you are praisin' mother
Somethin's said for pore ole dad.

The Review is pleased with the wonderful success of Mothers' day and proud of the fact that many florists who profited by it give credit—perhaps even more than is due—to this paper for having awakened the trade to its possibilities; but as to Fathers' day—well, the compiler of the Mothers' day column is a father, not a mother; that may account for an inability to enthuse over this latest suggestion while entering whole-heartedly into the one "in honor of the best mother who ever lived—our own.''

PALMER'S COMET.

The Main street store of W. J. Palmer & Sons, Buffalo, has been the scene of many an attractive and novel window decoration, but none ever has achieved the success of the display which has been on the last few days. The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a remarkably good photograph, considering that the picture was made through the glass. It gives a quite fair idea of how successful the attempt has been to take advantage of the wide popular interest in Halley's comet. The world is shown as a globe of moss, with the western hemisphere worked out in flowers, changed each day. On the day the picture was taken North and South America were in Killarney roses, but the next day they were in pansies and a different flower has been used each morning. The comet was represented by a ball of carnations, and those who say they have been unable to see the tail of the real comet have had no such complaint to make of Palmer's—for stretching behind it is a big streamer of chiffon. It will be recalled that on Wednesday, May 18, the comet passed the earth. Prior to that time the globe was on the west side of the window and the comet in the east. As the real comet progressed, so did its representation in the window, moving gradually until in the evening it had passed the earth and was streaming away to the west, leaving the earth behind. The window was the work of W. H. Grever, who has charge of the window displays in the Palmer stores.

MRS. E. M. GILL.

A life of remarkable activity and still in active business as a florist at the age of 80 years—still wide-awake and progressive! Such is the record of Mrs. E. M. Gill, of Medford, Mass. Some idea of the extent of her activities may be gathered from the fact that she is an earnest member of these various societies: Massachusetts Horticultural Society, New England Dahlia Society, Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, Floral Emblem Society, Women's Relief Corps of Medford, Sarah Bradlee Fulton chapter of D. A. R., S. C. Lawrence Relief Corps No. 5, Medford Visiting Nurses' Association, Ladies' Aid Association of the Soldiers' Home in Chelsea, and Medford Historical Society. She has been chosen several times as delegate for the W. R. C. to the national encampments of the G. A. R.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston fittingly celebrated her long connection with that organization March 22 of this year by electing her an honorary member. Her association with the Massachusetts Horticultural Society has continued for forty-five years—since 1865. During that long period she has been a regular exhibitor of flowers and fruits in the society's shows, and an unfailing prize winner in the classes requiring the greatest artistic skill. And yet, with all this activity, she has been so modest and retiring in disposition that she has yielded only once to the numerous requests that she deliver talks, or series of talks, before various societies. On this one occasion her address, at Worcester, was a notably good one.

When to these traits of her character—her combined energy and diffidence—is added this other quality, that she is particularly helpful, in a quiet way, to her fellow members in the societies, it is easy to perceive that her personality is unusually interesting and lovable. In the Massachusetts Horticultural Society the advice of "Mother" Gill, as she is affectionately called by its members, is sought on all matters, and, owing alike to her wide popularity and her rare wisdom, she has often been invited by the flower committee (always composed of men) to accompany them on their rounds of garden inspection.

Mrs. Gill was born on Essex street, Boston, June 28, 1830. She is a daughter of Atherton and Maria Keith Bowditch. She is a descendant of John and Priscilla Alden and of Richard Warren, who came over in the Mayflower. Another colonial ancestor is Joseph Hills, who compiled the first general laws established in New England, for which he was voted 500 acres of land in Dunstable. He was first speaker of the colonial house of deputies of Massachusetts Bay. Her family was also related to Benjamin Vinton French, whose portrait hangs on the walls of Horticultural hall, Boston, and who was a founder of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and its vice-president from 1840 to 1857.

She was married in 1849 to George Gill, of Watertown, Mass. In 1854 they moved to Medford from Melrose. Mr. Gill died in 1898.

She built her first greenhouse in 1873, and used it for the culture of choice roses, carnations, lilies and violets. Two more houses have been added since then. She has engaged in the business for both pleasure and profit. In earlier years her exhibits at the horticultural shows were composed of flowers selected from her beautiful old-fashioned garden, the only one of its kind and size in the vicinity. It is said that today, at her advanced age, none of the younger exhibitors can surpass the graceful and artistic arrangement of her flowers. Along this special line the sweet-voiced, silvery-haired woman is every inch an artist.

SMILAX AND ASPARAGUS.

Will you give me some information regarding the modern methods of growing smilax and asparagus, mentioning the kinds of benches, the depth of soil and drainage, the temperature, etc.?

L. C. S.

Smilax is usually planted in a solid bed, containing about two inches of drainage material (or more if cinders or broken stone are plentiful), and from five to six inches of good, rich soil. Such a bed is good for two seasons, provided the plants are given food enough.

The bed should be wired crosswise, with the wires about ten inches apart, and the plants should be eight inches apart in the row. Corresponding cross wires are placed overhead, and from these the strings are run to carry the plants, using green twine for the purpose.

The young plants should be planted in May or June and carefully trained to the strings. A light shading is beneficial during the hot weather and may be readily applied with a syringe, using either one of the mixtures of whiting and oil or even whitewash. After the plants are nicely established the growth will be helped by giving them a mulching of short manure to a depth of about an inch, and this may be repeated for each crop that is cut from the bed, the usual course being to cut three crops per year from a bed.

Syringe daily in bright weather and keep a night temperature of 60 degrees through the winter. Water freely while the crop is in growth, but give less water for a few weeks after the crop is cut, until the new growth starts.

If a permanent bed of asparagus is wanted, for the production of strings, it should have a good layer of drainage in the bottom, and then be filled to a depth of at least one foot with rich compost, giving the plants rather more room than has been suggested for smilax, say 12x12 inches. After the plants get to growing they will take heavier mulching than the smilax, for Asparagus plumosus is a gross feeder and will also take plenty of water, both overhead and at the root. In regard to temperature and shading, it may be treated the same as the smilax.

If the asparagus plants are to be grown for sprays only, they may be planted out on a bench containing five to six inches of soil. If given a mulching from time to time, as the manure is washed in and exhausted, they will stand thus for two seasons, but the deep bed, if well watered, will stand without replanting for six to eight years.

Red spiders and thrips are the most troublesome insects on these plants. The spiders are kept down by vigorous syringing, and the thrips by spraying with nicotine solution. W. H. T.

ROOSEVELT VISITS HAARLEM.

Jubilee Exhibition.

Mr. Roosevelt, on his European tour, visited the Haarlem Jubilee Exhibition May 1. President Krelage welcomed Mr. Roosevelt as the hundred thousandth visitor and presented him with a silver model of an ancient ship, which he remarked might pass for the Half-Moon or the Mayflower, for nobody knew exactly how they looked and therefore the reproduction might be taken as a most accurate imitation of either. Neither the Half-Moon nor the Mayflower had tulips aboard and Mr. Krelage suggested the total abolition of the duty on bulbs, insisting that the abolition of the duty would be to the profit of all American citizens, since they would be able to have cheap flowers in every garden. Flowers were the symbols of love and faith and peace, and the more the flowers of Holland were spread over the world, the more they would be mighty coöperators, eloquent interpreters and active propagandists of Mr. Roosevelt's noble ideas, to benefit humanity.

Mr. Roosevelt, in his reply, kept clear of the duty question and paid a tribute to Dutch ability to combine hard work with appreciation of the beautiful, and added that Americans, working so hard in the past, felt that in case of necessity enjoyment must be sacrificed to work.

Speech-making over, Mr. Roosevelt enjoyed himself in the exhibition grounds, Mr. Krelage explaining the objects of the exhibition and directing attention to the main features.

At the time of my last report, the principal attractions were in the buildings, but May 1 the outdoor exhibits were probably at their best, notably the narcissi from De Graaff Bros., Leiden, which included a number of new varieties, such as Golden Jubilee, a splendid giant yellow; Uncle Robert, a remarkably large white, and Princess Juliana, a refined deep yellow.

The Heemstede Association of Bulb Growers produced a lovely effect with beds of hyacinths, as did also the Lisse Association with hyacinths and tulips. N. Dames, of Lisse, was a most successful exhibitor with beds of hyacinths, including a bed of a new deep rose-colored variety, Le Victoire, edged with another novelty, Arentine H. Arendsen, a pretty dwarf-growing white.

Creditable displays of beds of bulbs in variety were also in full bloom from M. Van Waveren & Son, Hillegom; J. J. Grullemans & Sons, Lisse; Warnaar & Co., Sassenheim; S. A. Van Konijnenberg & Co., Noordwijk, and Ant. Roosen & Son, Haarlem.

The most notable exhibits of shrubs and conifers were from C. B. Van Nes & Sons, Boskoop, especially their new rhododendron, Princess Juliana; Kersbergen Bros., Boskoop, a choice collection of seedling azaleas; Wezelenburg & Co., Hazerswoude, forced flowering shrubs in variety, and J. Hardizer, Boskoop, rhododendrons and conifers.

C. G. Van Tubergen, Jr., Haarlem, received the highest gold medal awarded at the second temporary show, for a pretty flower garden with beds of Darwin tulips, colored freesias, anemones, liliums, etc. Other notable features were the rhododendrons from Koster & Son, Boskoop; amaryllis from Van Velsen Bros. and A. W. Ingenhoes Van Schaik; superb hydrangeas from D. Baardze, Aalsmeer, and lilies from D. & J. Keesen, Aalsmeer.

Kersbergen Bros. made a grand display with the polyantha rose, Boskoop Baby, as did also A. Van Deyl with Azalea Indica. Oosthoek & Co.'s hollies from Boskoop, in various sizes, were remarkable for the profusion of berries which they carried.

The foregoing are only a few of the exhibits to be seen at this remarkable exhibition, which for variety, extent and duration has probably never been equaled by any exhibition solely devoted to horticulture. No one can form an idea of its extent and beauty without actually visiting it, and, once seen, Haarlem's Jubilee Show will remain in one's memory forever.

NAMES OF PLANTS.

I am sending you a bloom of an orchid which grows wild in this section and also a frond of a fern that grows about four feet high. Can you tell us their names?

The flower is of an epidendrum, but was so shriveled that exact identity is impossible. The fern was dried up and falling to pieces and cannot be named. If you can, send new specimens packed in a tin box and tie damp moss or cotton batting around the bottom of the stems.

Sharon Hill, Pa.—Robert Scott & Son have placed their order with the King Construction Co. for two new iron frame houses, one 25x100, the other 30x142.

CATTLEYA FLY.

This arch enemy of cattleyas causes more trouble and anxiety to growers each year than all other causes combined. The season of incubation is now over, and little trouble need be feared until another spring. Remedies innumerable have been tried against this pest, which lays its eggs in the base of the young growths, as indicated by their having a much swollen appearance. Persistent fumigations will kill some flies on the wing. Fly papers stood here and there arrest a few. Hypodermic injections have been tried, but avail little. The most radical but at the same time the best remedy is cutting out the infested growths as they appear. It seems a cruel, murderous procedure and may seriously cripple many plants, but if the pest is to be controlled, it must be done. It is a sorrowful task each day to cut away quarts of promising growths, but stern necessity demands it, unless an entire house or collection is to be ruined. The pest usually comes on C. labiata. This and C. Trianæ suffer the most, but C. Mossiæ, Mendellii, gigas and some other varieties are also attacked. Lælias, such as elegans, purpurata and anceps, and such cattleyas as Skinneri, Bowringeana and Harrisoniæ are rarely attacked. It pays to have an eagle eye on young growths, and whenever one appears extra thick at the base, cut it off, and on cutting open you will probably find the larvæ or occasionally flies themselves enclosed.

FEEDING ORCHIDS.

No two growers will be found whose opinions on feeding orchids agree. Some condemn it entirely; others go to the opposite extreme and overdo it, producing nice plants which elicit temporary applause for the grower, but disappear in a comparatively short time.

All terrestrial orchids, such as are found growing in mother earth, will be benefited by the judicious use of liquid stimulants. Included among these are: Calanthes, phaius—each of these likes doses of cow or sheep manure water when growing; thunias, cœlogynes, especially the varieties cristata, Massangeana, barbata and Dayana; cypripediums, practically all varieties: sobralias, cymbidiums, zygopetalums, lycastes and brassias. Dendrobiums, when growing, especially the more robust sorts, like an occasional weak dose of manure water. Odontoglossums are better without it, as are most of the oncidiums, but all the vandas, aërides, saccolabiums and other robust, so-called East Indian orchids are benefited by feeding, provided they have plenty of good roots to take it up. Phalænopsis are better supplied with clear water, although one or two growers have found manure water beneficial.

Coming to cattleyas, opinions are as wide apart as the poles. Some splendid growers never feed at all; others believe that good growths are impossible without it. In England and on the European continent the feeding of cattleyas, lælias, odontoglossums, etc., is generally condemned, although the late Norman C. Cookson found that ammonium phosphate and potassium nitrate in water, forming what is commonly known as the Cookson Formula, greatly improved his plants. Some American growers have had good success with the Cookson Formula on a variety of orchids; others are afraid to try it, or have tried and abandoned it. American and European conditions are quite different. Our summers are much hotter, necessitating much more frequent waterings, and practically all plants will benefit by more feeding here than there, especially under glass.

Our experience has been that all cattleyas, lælias, lælio-cattleyas and other bigeneric hybrids of a similar nature are improved by occasional weak applications of salts or cow manure at intervals of eight to ten days during the growing season, when such plants are well rooted and in a condition to utilize the food supplied; especially is this the case with the most robust growing varieties. Feeding must be done with due care or a lot of harm will result. Do not entrust the work to anybody, but either do it yourself or see that it is properly done. One heavy dose, carelessly applied, may easily upset a whole year's painstaking labors.

CYPRIPEDIUMS.

Cypripedium insigne does best in a cool house. One with a north aspect is suitable, but where this is not at command, coldframes are excellent. The growth made here is much stockier than when the plants are kept in a house a considerable distance from the glass. In addition to the insigne varieties, that useful variety, Leeanum, villosum, Spicerianum, Sallieri, and the one-time lost variety, Fairieanum, do well under frame culture. The advantage of getting all the plants close to the light, abundant ventilation and ease in syringing or watering should commend this mode of summer culture to many.

CARNATIONS IN OLD SOIL.

I have two benches which I filled last fall with two inches of cow manure and four inches of new soil. These benches were planted with sweet peas and were dried off after the first crop of flowers was picked. Can I grow carnations successfully in this soil this season?

H. J. H.

One can not tell a great deal about the condition of soil without seeing it. I would say that if the soil in question appears to be in a live, mellow condition, it will likely do to grow carnations in. If you find that it lacks in fertility you can add later whatever it seems to need.

I would not allow this soil to become powder-dry. Sprinkle a light coat of good ashes or slaked lime on it and spade it over every three or four weeks. Water enough to keep it just moist, but do not flood it at any time after it has been broken up.

A good plan would be to break it up well and then cover it thinly with old stable litter, to prevent rapid evaporation. But do not put this on heavily enough to exclude all air. What you want to do is to thoroughly aërate it to get it into good mechanical condition, and this is done best by frequent handling.

A. F. J. B.

HOG MANURE IN COMPOST.

Will there be any risk in using manure from a feed yard that was used for both cattle and hogs? The cattle manure seems pretty well rotted, but the hog manure is till rank enough to give the characteristic odor, and quite strongly; so I judge there is a considerable proportion of it. I had intended to use this in mixing our carnation soil. Our soil is naturally rather sandy, but is fine-grained and smooth soil. I am not sure whether hog manure is a safe proposition and should like expert advice. W. H. C.

There is no risk in using this manure, provided the compost is made in good season, chopped up after lying for two weeks and turned over every ten days until placed on the bench. This will thoroughly incorporate the constituents and give ample time and opportunity for the escape of any deleterious elements.

Ribes.

JOKE.

To the newcomer or green workman the florist said, as he laid down a bunch of 36-inch Beauties: "Make these stems twenty-four inches." He did, just as carefully as possible, measuring them with a yardstick—from the stem toward the flower!

Rockville, Conn. — William Moran, formerly with Thomas F. Galvin, in Boston, has taken a position with the Rockville Floral Co.

GERANIUMS FOR STOCK.

If not already done, you should spare help to plant out your own geranium stock for future propagation. There are many things of which a few small plants will suffice, even if not put out until the Fourth of July, but with the most important of all summer bedding plants, the geranium, this will not do. If you expect a big lot of healthy cuttings in September or October you must plant out healthy, vigorous plants now and give them plenty of room. Geraniums are usually planted about one foot apart. At this distance they make a mass of leaf and bloom, but the growth is too much drawn up to be strong, and on your own place for stock they are better at least eighteen inches apart, and get them growing well.

More than once we have seen some excellent variety sell entirely out. This is bad management. If they had been in the ground, with flowers and buds picked off, you would have been all right for the future.

PLANTING LAWN BEDS.

Just a word about the operation of planting our flower beds. If it is a bed of geraniums or cannas with some edging and it amounts to enough to be worth while, we would rather one of our experienced men should do it for our customers, as results will be better, both for immediate appearance and future welfare.

We sometimes find that the planting is not the only thing to do, for the bed is still as it was left last fall. The digging should never be done without charge.

With small plants like echeverias, santolinas and alternantheras it is a simple thing to squeeze the plants into the soft ground. A good sprinkling with the hose will start them going and a slight stirring of the soil before it is quite dry will prevent the soil from baking. This method, however, is not always satisfactory with larger plants, such as fine flowering geraniums. It is time and labor well spent to make a hole of ample size, put in the plant and enough soil to surround the ball and give it a good firming, but do not fill up the little excavation. Water each plant thoroughly. You know then that the ball of roots and the ground immediately around the ball are well saturated. In a few minutes the water has soaked away and then fill in with the dry earth you took out with the trowel. That will act as a mulch and be worth five waterings on the surface. Many flower beds are foolishly rounded up and in that case it is difficult to water on the surface and get it to penetrate. A soaking would wash the loose soil onto the grass and not thoroughly wet all the roots. This plan may and does take a little longer, but it is work well done.

THE REVIEW can supply any horticultural books at publishers' prices.

THE COMPOST HEAP.

The last half of May is a strenuous one for all florists, and it is difficult to adequately keep abreast of all work demanding attention. It is a far too common practice to see compost heaps prepared in late fall or early spring hidden from view by masses of rank weeds, and many a time have we seen a scythe used to mow them down so that an opening could be made in the pile. Common sense must tell us that when we allow weeds to thus overgrow valuable bench compost much of its value must be exhausted. There are no doubt many other duties pressing, but a boy will clean off a big compost pile in a few hours, and it will be labor well expended. See that it is not neglected.

We will soon be filling the benches for chrysanthemums, for roses and for carnations, where they are grown under glass in summer, and the compost, in addition to being freed from weeds, should be chopped down and turned over. Presuming that a goodly proportion of cow or horse manure was added to the sod in the late fall, it will need no addition now, unless it be some fine bone. This is excellent for chrysanthemums, but some growers of roses and carnations are not so sure of its benefits in the soil; in fact, some well-known carnationists are doubting if bone pays for itself. Our own opinion is that if added some time before using the compost it is helpful. We disapprove, however, of mixing it in at planting time.

REPAIRING BENCHES.

The passing of Memorial day and the steadily decreasing numbers of bedding plants now gives us considerable bench room. Unless we are fortunate enough to have cement benches, now being recognized as the bench of the future, and costing no more than wood, especially when their imperishable character is considered, there will always be some repairing to be done when the benches have been emptied. Use the old carnation or rose soil for top-dressing the grass land, or spread it where it can be plowed under. After doing all needful repairing and thoroughly cleaning out the benches as well as all collected dirt below them, give them a good whitewashing, using hot, freshly slaked lime. On new benches a coating of crude oil will act as a preservative and is not injurious to plant growth in any way, but avoid using any of the tar mixtures. None of them is fit to use on the inside of the benches. While cleaning the benches, do not forget the roofs of the houses. If you have no time to paint them, use the hose on them freely and let them have a good scrubbing. This will insure a lot more light. Speaking of benches and bench material, if you have not tried pecky cypress yet, do so. Its appearance may not enthuse you, but of its lasting qualities many a big grower will testify.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Hardy Roses.

Remove all sucker growths of Manetti or briars from hybrid perpetuals or hybrid teas, or they will speedily weaken and eventually kill out the roses themselves. As buds are now appearing, the rose slug or leaf-roller will be getting in its work, and it is surprising how much damage it can do in a day or two. Hellebore dusted on the foliage while damp will clean out the leaf-roller. If rain washes it off, a second application may be needed. For aphis nothing is better than kerosene emulsion. Where the hose can be used with plenty of pressure, this in itself will keep the plants clean. To secure good flowers, commence disbudding as soon as the buds are of sufficient size to handle. Hardy roses can hardly be overwatered and in dry weather an occasional soaking will wonderfully improve them.

Peonies.

While peonies bloom at Memorial day in some sections, they are a June flower in many states, and without them we would lose one of our most valuable June decorative flowers. Like roses, they enjoy lots of moisture and, now that the buds on the herbaceous sorts are showing, a scattering of some quick working chemical like nitrate of soda among them will be of benefit. Attend to disbudding before the flower buds get too large. If you are anxious for some late flowers on any particular varieties, pinch out the central and leave one of the side buds. The latter will bloom some days later.

Outdoor Flower Crops.

While May has been a little more generous than the two preceding months with its rainfall, in important parts of the country it is not equal to normal, and it behooves us to assist in every possible way in conserving such moisture as falls from the heavens. After each rain, before the ground gets a chance to dry out too much, far less bake, get out the cultivator and stir the soil about all growing crops. You cannot overdo the tickling of the surface soil. If at any time out of a job, go to cultivating. Half the success in growing crops is to keep a mulch of fine soil on the surface all the time. The plants show almost immediate benefit, as anyone can readily see by comparing patches of cultivated and surface baked crops.

Canterbury Bells.

If Canterbury bells were not sown in late spring when advised, the present is a good time to get in a batch of seed. The double varieties have heavy, clumsy flowers, but the single and hose-in-hose, or calycanthema types are fine, either for pot or garden culture. By the way, what beautiful subjects these are for Memorial day in pots! They are so easily grown and bloom so profusely that the wonder is they are seen so little. At Easter, if late, they can be flowered nicely, but to see them in all their glory hold them cool and flower for Memorial day. In 8-inch to 10-inch pots they make magnificent specimens, carrying a wealth of flowers.

Sow the seeds in a coldframe. Cover with sashes and keep shaded until the seedlings appear. Remove the sashes as soon as the second leaves appear. Transplant to open ground during cool, damp weather, allowing nine inches between each seedling.

Sowing Perennials.

When the frames are cleared of bedding plants, we have a good opportunity to get in a batch of perennial seeds, if their sowing has not yet been done. More and more perennials are wanted every year, and every country florist should prepare to meet this demand. if you for any reason neglect transplanting them for a week or two after they are ready, they will become almost useless. Some of these perennials will flower the first season. All will flower the following year. There are some specially good and easily raised varieties which should now be sown. Aquilegias, digitalis, Pyrethrum roseum, Shasta daisies, delphiniums in variety, Alyssum saxatile, asters, Coreopsis grandiflora, Campanula persicifolia, hibiscus, physostegia, sweet william, lychnis, gypsophila, Papaver orientale, Gaillardia grandiflora and many other varieties are among them. It is rather too early yet to make any sowings of such subjects as hollyhocks, pansies, myosotis and double daisies.

Rambler Roses in Pots.

Field plants of the rambler roses, potted some weeks ago, are now growing quite strongly. As the number of shoots after four exceeds what is necessary, it is better to disbud them, leaving three or four of the strongest to each pot. Keep the plants under glass for some time yet, and as the growths advance, give them supports. This pot culture may entail more labor, but such plants, being fit to force at any time after January, respond much more readily than such as are dug up and potted late in the fall.

Left-Over Azaleas.

Any left-over azaleas should now be planted outdoors. They do not need shade. They will make far more flower buds in the full sun. Plant firmly and endeavor to locate them so that they

Euonymus Radicans.

Of course, plants can be bought from big specialists at moderate rates, but it is possible to raise hundreds of thousands of seedlings at so low a cost that the wonder is that more are not sown. Any light soil is suitable for perennial seed, and after sowing they should be kept moist and shaded until they are well started. Avoid sowing thickly, for can be hosed over every day, and in hot weather twice a day is better. While ground containing a good proportion of leaf-mold, sand and old decayed manure is fine for azaleas, they will grow all right in any good garden soil. Be sure all seeds are removed before planting out.

Ericas, such as melanthera, Caffra, densa, gracilis, hyemalis and others, are better planted out like the azaleas, and similar treatment answers well for camellias, Daphne Indica, Diosma ericoides and other hard-wooded plants. All enjoy frequent syringings.

EUONYMUS RADICANS.

Among climbing plants, one not as largely used as its merits seem to justify is Euonymus radicans, a low, procumbent shrub, with often trailing and rooting or climbing branches, which sometimes grow twenty or more feet high. It is evergreen and fairly hardy, giving excellent satisfaction as a cover for walls, rocks or trunks of trees. Good soil is a great advantage. It is rather slow growing, but once established is excellent for many purposes. The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of a New England residence on which Euonymus radicans is climbing.

THE WORK AT CORNELL.

[An abstract of an address before the New York Florists' Club, May 10, 1910, by John Craig, Professor of Horticulture at Cornell University.]

In his opening remarks, Professor Craig drew a contrast between the floricultural conditions which prevail in Europe and in this country. In Europe these interests are largely fostered by the amateur. In America the commercial florist dominates. In the nature of things, and as time goes on, it is inevitable that interest in floriculture will spread among the masses and that the number of amateurs, therefore, will largely increase. On the other hand, commercial interests are bound to extend also, for the reason that the ability of the American people to satisfy their desires for the luxuries of life is unsurpassed by any other nation. By taste and ability they are purchasers of high class products. The florist caters to the æsthetic side of human nature, and his market will increase as culture and purchasing ability become a part of the make-up of the American people.

New York, said the speaker, stands preeminent in her horticultural position in the United States. In floriculture she occupies first place. In the production of nursery-grown plants, she leads all other states. In the production of fruit products other than citrus fruits, she also holds first place. This is most gratifying and gives the horticulturists of the Empire State a feeling of responsibility and pride.

Problems Arising.

As any industry depending upon soil and climatic conditions becomes specialized, it takes on, of necessity, artificial phases. As these become pronounced, difficulties are likely to arise. Intensive culture is always likely to be followed by troubles which do not appear under normal conditions; but the game always is worth the candle, for the returns are great in proportion to the effort put forth.

The commercial florist is the most intensive farmer in the world. He often has more capital invested in an acre of land under glass than the farmer may have in his 160 acres of outdoors. The commercial florist is an exceedingly busy man, and has no time to spend in experimenting or testing methods. If a method does not bring him success, or a variety is beset by parasitical enemies, he changes his method or drops this variety. What the florist of New York needs at the present time is an equipment conducted for the purpose of solving these difficulties which meet him from time to time.

Experiments in floriculture at Cornell have, by force of circumstances, been largely confined to field work. This is due to lack of greenhouse equipment. Important results have been obtained in connection with the study and growth of certain of the important florists' crops.

Peony Studies.

As an example, the speaker cited the coöperative peony study now going on between the American Peony Society and the Department of Horticulture. The peony plots comprise some 1,200 or more varieties of this plant. The study, which was commenced in 1904, is being steadily continued and its progress has been marked by the publication, first, of a peony check-list containing all names and citations of peony varieties; and, second, by a bulletin giving the history, botany and classification of varieties, together with an authentic description of a number of kinds best known to the trade. At the present time a third publication is going through the press. This will be available to peony growers in two or three weeks, and it will contain accurate and popular descriptions of over 200 varieties which have been studied on the Cornell Experiment Station grounds and on the grounds of two of the more prominent peony specialists of the country.

In dahlias and chrysanthemums, exhaustive studies have been made and reports published, which the floricultural public have appreciated.

Sweet Pea Studies.

Some ten years ago, sweet pea studies were commenced at Cornell and as a result of these two bulletins were published. Last year marked the organization of a National Sweet Pea Society, and the Cornell Department of Horticulture was glad to coöperate with this society to the extent of taking charge of its trial grounds. At the present time these grounds contain some 600 varieties of sweet peas gathered from the four corners of the horticultural world. A thorough monographic study will be made of this group of plants, and it is hoped that a publication of large value will be available at the close of the season.

Forcing Plants.

In the line of indoor work, or work under glass, experiments have been conducted having for their object the discovery of the influence of artificial light on florists' forced crops and of the influence of etherization. These lines of work have been in progress for some years and are being prosecuted further at the present time. In the etherization of bulbs this year the work commenced by the speaker is being continued by Professor Judson, on narcissi, hyacinths, tulips, Spanish iris, lilies, gladioli and lily of the valley. In the case of narcissi the greatest maximum gain of sixteen days was secured. With hyacinths, the greatest gain was four days. With fifteen varieties of tulips the greatest gain was five days, while with lily of the valley the greatest gain of etherized over unetherized pips was four days. In addition to the hastening of the flowering period, a considerable gain in height in etherized over unetherized was also secured.

Former experiments with artificial light have shown that acetylene, which closely approximates in spectrum analysis the rays of the sun, has important values in the forcing of crops during the dark months. The investigations have been suspended, owing to insufficient glass house equipment, but will be resumed this year, and the Tungsten light will be compared with acetylene for the forcing of crops.

The speaker cited many other experiments which should be conducted by way of emphasizing the necessity of investigation on behalf of the florists. Among these were fertilizers in the growing of greenhouse crops, special methods in the forcing of flowering shrubs, as, for instance, the use of carbonic dioxide gas. methods of sterilizing greenhouse soils, methods of fumigating greenhouses with poisonous gases, the breeding of florists' crops for special purposes, the use and application of flower dyes and the monographic study of important, but little known, groups of plants. These lines would be inaugurated as soon as warranted by the extension of present glass house equipment.

Professor Craig pointed out that all bulletins of the Experiment Station at Cornell, whether bearing upon horticultural matters or other studies, were free and available to New York florists and usually to florists of any part of the country.

Begonia Incarnata, Sander's Improved Form.

BEGONIA INCARNATA.

Begonia incarnata is an old and valuable winter-flowering plant. The variety grandiflora, known also as Sander's improved incarnata, has flowers double the size of the older form and is a better thing in every respect. When first shown before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, the improved variety was awarded a well deserved first-class certificate. It was raised by Charles Sander, for many years in charge of Prof. C. S. Sargent's beautiful estate at Holm Lea, Brookline, Mass., and one of the most skilful all-round gardeners we have in America. Mr. Sander is particularly successful in the raising, by various methods, of plants generally regarded as difficult subjects.

B. incarnata comes in season a little later than B. Gloire de Lorraine and is not at its best until January and February. It is of much more vigorous habit than Gloire de Lorraine and of comparatively easy propagation. Plants done blooming, if headed back, will soon give an abundant supply of succulent shoots, which are easily rooted, and, if taken in April or May, will make nice plants in 5-inch or 6-inch pots the following winter. Old plants, cut back, can also be planted outdoors in rich soil about the end of May and lifted about the middle of September. A cool house grows this begonia best, 48 to 50 degrees at night being sufficient. For compost, soil which will grow good mums or carnations suits this begonia.

As a house plant B. incarnata is far preferable to B. Gloire de Lorraine, holding its flowers much longer. Personally, I consider it much the most useful begonia on a private estate, and have often wondered why one with such sterling merits has so far been practically ignored commercially.

The illustration shows one plant of a large batch of this begonia grown by Daniel Whyte, head gardener to Winthrop Ames, of North Easton, Mass., who is a successful grower of fibrous-rooted begonias in general.

Kansas City, Kan.—J. F. Ephraimson has purchased the business of James Brough, at the old Holmes stand, 812 Minnesota avenue. Mr. Ephraimson himself is an experienced florist, and he also retains as his assistant Miss Maude Ferguson, whose skill in design and decoration work has been known in this store for years.

Worcester, Mass.—At the last exhibition of the Worcester County Horticultural Society, held in Horticultural hall, May 19, pansies and lilies of the valley were the principal features, and the showing of pansies was considered the best for several seasons. Secretary Adin A. Hixon acted as superintendent, as usual. The next exhibition will be held on Thursday, June 9.

Mount Clemens, Mich.—August Von Boeselager is putting in more of the tile benches this year.

Newville, Pa.—D. E. Leckey is now the owner and manager of the greenhouses formerly conducted by David Nailor.

Newburgh, N. Y.—The carnations in the greenhouses of Caldwell & Jesperson are in fine shape, and the firm says good prices are being realized for them in the New York market. The young stock was all planted out before May 10, the weather having been favorable for the work.

San Antonio, Tex.—George Holts has purchased two acres of ground in the outskirts of this city and will grow roses and carnations, principally for cut flowers. He also expects to grow some eggplant, tomato and pepper plants, for which there is a good market here, provided they are extra early. Besides these, he will have a good stock of tuberoses, narcissi and hyacinths.

Coming as it does during the busiest months of the year makes it doubly hard for Mr. Darnell.

Sandusky, O.—The Central Greenhouses, on Columbus avenue, formerly conducted by D. J. Mackey and later by D. R. White, have now been reopened by Leo E. Wagner. For the last three years Mr. Wagner has been acting as deputy city auditor, but he will resign that position. GLADIOLUS BULBLETS.

Please tell me the best way to grow gladiolus bulblets. I have planted them in flats in the greenhouse to get them started. I have several kinds and find that some kinds sprout and come up in a few days, but America bulblets have not sprouted and have been in about three weeks. They have a harder shell than some other kinds. Is there a way to make them sprout quickly? Should they be soaked in hot water, or should the shell be cut or cracked before planting? I. N. K.

In sowing seeds of gladioli a well-drained piece of land, well enriched and preferably of a sandy nature, should be chosen. Keep the seed bed well watered. The little bulblets at the end of the first season will be the size of ordinary garden peas. The next season sow them in drills like peas. While a few will flower the second year, the bulk will not do so until a year later.

Increasing stock from the numerous small bulblets is more satisfactory than by the seed plan. We would prefer to sow these in drills in the open ground, rather than plant in flats in the greenhouse, as they will make much finer bulbs outdoors. Some bulblets are a little slower in starting than others, but it would be no advantage to soak them. When lifting in the fall, store the little bulblets in bags and hang them where they are not subjected to drying from fire heat. C. W.

AWAY DOWN SOUTH.

News with regard to the advancement of the trade in the extreme southeast corner of the United States, beyond the Everglades of Florida, ought to be welcomed by all florists. Pioneer work is always admirable, and such information is a pleasant token of the progress and prosperity of the business throughout the length and breadth of the land.

Miami, Fla., where the Miami Floral Co. is located, is 370 miles directly south of Jacksonville, on the Atlantic coast, near the southern point of the state and in one of the most beautiful and wonderful sections of the country. J. W. Warner, formerly of Atlanta, Ga., is the organizer and manager of the company. He began the business in a small way about three years ago, and has steadily increased its capacity, making a specialty of choice roses and decorative plants for the winter season, when thousands of northern visitors tour the east coast of Florida. Special attention is paid to artistic design and bouquet work and floral decorating, this feature of the business being in charge of Mrs. S. E. Warner, an artist in that line. They propagate quantities of crotons and palms for the trade, and do a general greenhouse business locally, supplying flowers and plants to points all along the east coast.

The two photographs here reproduced show the two sections of the exhibit staged by the Miami Floral Co. at the South Florida Midwinter Fair, held recently at Miami. The two sections were placed so as to face each other at the main entrance, with the aisle between. J. W. Warner and his two sons, James and William, appear in one of the pictures.

This season's business, Mr. Warner says, has been by far the best in the history of the company, and Mr. Warner feels a pardonable degree of pride in the fine showing they are making in their far southern home.

OBITUARY.

Joseph F. Lang.

Joseph F. Lang, who had been a florist in Chicago for over thirty years, died May 15 at his residence, 2010 Melrose street, of inflammation of the bowels. He was born in Germany in 1854 and came to Chicago when 14 years of age. The widow, three sons and a daughter survive him and will continue the business, largely the production of bedding plants.

Thomas Gowanloch.

The sad news of the death of Thomas Gowanloch, of Highland Park, Mich., has just been received. On Sunday afternoon, May 15, Mr. Gowanloch, accompanied by his brother-in-law, delivered a load of plants on Fort street, west. On the return trip his wagon was demolished by a street car. He was removed to Grace hospital, fatally injured, and died Monday afternoon, May 23. Mr. Peters, Mr. Gowanloch's brother-in-law, was also seriously injured and is still at Red Cross hospital. Mr. Gowanloch was a most active member of the Detroit Florists' Club, and it is with deepest regret that we hear of his death. H. S.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS, MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.

Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August 16 to 19, 1910.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

WHAT would YOU think of a business man who didn't have any business stationery?

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two copies.

SUPPOSING a firm wanted to SELL you goods and wrote on a plain piece of paper—what would YOU think of THEM? Well, then, why not get a letter-head that shows who YOU are, to use when you BUY.

IT often happens that good geraniums in 4-inch pots are scarce in the beginning of June and overabundant later, when stock comes into bloom. Good geraniums now are in first-class demand and realizing rather better prices than a year ago.

HAVE you filled out the blanks for the census of floriculture? If neglected in this busy time, do it as soon as possible, and with care. If you have a greenhouse you should have received the blank. If you did not receive it, drop The Review a line on your printed letter-head and you will be supplied.

THE Massachusetts Horticultural Society has issued a schedule of prizes for the peony exhibition, to be held jointly by itself and the American Peony Society, at Horticultural hall, Boston, June 9 and 10. Copies of the list may be obtained by addressing W. P. Rich, secretary, Boston.

A POWDER PASTE.

In looking over The Review of May 19, I noticed on page 30 an inquiry about a "powder paste" called Paste Substitute. Now, though I can not give any information about that particular sort of paste, there is another brand of powder paste which I can recommend. It is used by my firm, by the Henry A. Dreer corporation and other florists, and also by the Adams Express Co. It is called Dextrine and is manufactured by the Steele & Atwood Co., of Chicago. I think it is the best paste that can be had for attaching labels. A. W. L.

A LEGAL QUESTION.

I have a question that I should like to ask, though I do not know whether it is in your line to answer such questions in the columns of The Review. The question is this: Is it legal for a cemetery company to grow plants within the cemetery grounds and sell them to people for planting outside the cemetery? You will understand that the cemetery is exempt from taxation in this state, the state of Pennsylvania.

G. H. P.

The Review will be pleased to hear from any reader who has positive knowledge on this point, or who has had experience in any case of a similar character.

WARNING!

Don't Pay Money to Strangers.

Within the last few days the REVIEW has received several complaints from eastern Pennsylvania that "a smooth-talking young fellow" has been falsely representing himself as working for the REVIEW and soliciting new subscriptions or renewals in its name. If a receipt is given it never is on printed blanks, sometimes bears no name or address, but in one case was signed "H. Hunter."

A victim of "H. Hunter" describes him as follows: About 24 years old, clean shaven, fluent talker, about five feet six inches tall, fair, dark suit, not new.

Don't be duped by this petty swindler. If "H. Hunter" shows up, call the police and wire the REVIEW.

Never pay money to strangers, for the REVIEW or on any other account. REVIEW representatives all are well known members of the trade in their respective localities.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Department of Registration.

Public notice is hereby given that the American Rose & Plant Co., of Springfield, O., offers for registration the fern described below. Any person objecting to the registration, or to the use of the proposed name, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date. Raiser's description: A sport from Nephrolepis Bostoniensis that is a great improvement over that variety, being of the same habit, but of somewhat more vigorous growth, with fronds six to eight inches in width. The edges of each of the pinnæ are decidedly ruffled in wavelike undulation that is very distinctive. As the fronds mature the undulations become more pronounced, giving the individual fronds and the plant as a whole a marked wavy effect. Does not run back, the type being fixed. Name: Nephrolepis Roosevelt.

As no objections have been filed, public notice is hereby given that the registration of the violet, Marie Elise, by Thomas De Voy's Son, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., becomes complete.

The Great Central Market.

The gyrations of Halley's comet have been no more erratic than the changes in the weather and in the Chicago market during the last week.

The weather always is the most important factor in regulating supply and demand in this market. Sometimes it is possible to count with some slight degree of certainty upon what the weather will do to the supply, but this year conditions are so abnormal that strange tricks are played. Unseasonably cool conditions had prevailed for some time up to the latter part of last week. Then came three days of midsummer. Growers who had been letting the stock hang on the plants just a bit longer than was necessary, in order to accumulate a reserve for Memorial day, found their blooms ripening so fast they were compelled to cut at once. The result was a deluge of carnations which sent prices tumbling. The effect upon the supply of roses was less marked, though there was a considerable increase in this department, as in practically all others. The effect upon the quality of roses was much more pronounced than upon the quality of carnations, greatly as the latter suffered. It not only opened the roses quickly, but the way the thrips multiplied and the voraciousness with which they attacked the flowers was something entirely unprecedented. Rose growers are accustomed to an annual spring battle with thrips, but this year it has been more fiercely contested than usually. In addition, following the warm days came cold rain, and not a few growers who had seen their Killarney blooms devastated by the thrips found the foliage in a like stage because of mildew.

Where the wholesalers a week ago had been congratulating themselves and their customers on the superior quality of the stock available for Memorial day, they now find themselves with quality little, if any, better than it usually is at this date. A few growers can congratulate themselves that their stock is holding up well, but the deterioration in the majority of the stock has been as rapid as anything this market ever experienced within the short period of one week.

The principal exception to the rule is the Butterfly sweet peas. This market never saw so many fine sweet peas as are coming in this week. It is demonstrated that success does not depend so much upon the variety as upon the grower, for the same variety in the hands of different men hardly is recognizable as the same article. But many are picking superb peas. They are easily the finest flowers of the season. In retail stores they sell almost on sight, and whenever the weather is good an enormous business is done with them.

Following the cold rain of Sunday and Monday came bright, cold weather again, hastening production in all lines and doing something to improve quality. An immense amount of business is on the books for Memorial day. The wholesalers are practically unanimous in saying that they have more business booked than ever before. One or two are inclined to question the adequacy of the supply, but the majority anticipate that the latter part of the week will see tremendous receipts, and it is expected that all orders will be taken care of. The bulk of the advance orders are for carnations, and it is possible that the supply of strictly first-class stock may be short in this line. Everyone expects enough Beauties and roses. There is some question as to the supply of peonies. The southern crops have been cut and present receipts are from fields nearer home. The number of consignors is increased, but the quantity of flowers coming in is not heavy. It is considered that the total number of peonies available for Memorial day is not as large this year as last. Easter lilies are in heavy supply and a good many will be used.

The greater part of the shipping orders are booked to go out Saturday. This will be one of the heaviest business days in the history of the market.

"The Aphine you sold me I have used on orchard trees and ornamental plants infested with the scale, green and white fly, thrips, mealy bug, etc., and found, in every case, that it completely destroyed the pests in question, with not the slightest harm to the subjects treated. It is without doubt the finest insecticide I have ever used." (S'gd) William Munro, Supt. to C. T. Crocker, Esq.

Miami, Biscayne Bay, Fla., April 26, 1910
"The sample of Aphine you kindly sent me was used on a lot of palms which were infested with mealy bugs and I am glad to say it entirely destroyed them without injury to plants. I shall include Aphine in my next order for supplies." (S'gd) E. J. Andrews, Gardener Hotel Royal Palm.

Hill Crest, Purchase, N. Y., May 14, 1910.
"Replying to your letter of March 31st, I wish to say that we have given your Aphine a thorough test, and have come to the conclusion that it is one of the best insecticides ever sent out." (S'gd) A. Underwood, Supt.

Morristown, N. J., April, 25, 1910.
"It gives me great satisfaction to tell you that Aphine has entirely cleaned my gardenias of mealy bug. I used it one part to 35 water. I have tried many things with more or less success, but this was the first complete success. There was no injury to buds or foliage." (S'gd) Edward Reagan.

Concord, N. H., May 8, 1910.
"Received the Aphine and gave it a good test. As I wrote you before, my 'mums' were literally covered with lice, but that is a thing of the past. I regard Aphine practically as an insurance against insects and I shall not be without it in the future." (S'gd) H. D. Whitney, Prop. Fern-Croft Farm.

Pasadena, Cal., April 11, 1910.
"It may interest you to know that of the three fluid insecticides which I have tested, Aphine proved to be the best. First—It did not disfigure foliage or flower. Second—It mixed with water perfectly, and last, but not least of its merits, it is less expensive than any of the others considering the work accomplished." (S'gd) P. D. Barnhart, Editor of Pacific Garden.

Louis Wittbold, of the Geo. Wittbold Co., says that boxwoods, bay trees and other decorative plants are selling rapidly now.

Chicago has a florist who is also president of a bank. John Fuhrmann, of 3164-6 North Clark street, is the man. The bank is the new one known as the North Shore Exchange Bank, and occupies modern, well-equipped quarters immediately south of Mr. Fuhrmann's store. The entire building, occupied by both concerns and containing some twenty flats in addition, was erected by Mr. Fuhrmann last year.

Out at Maywood the greenhouse building contractors, Winandy Bros., of Rogers' Park, have ten men busy to finish up the establishments of the A. F. Amling Co., Wm. H. Amling and Walter Burhop.

O. P. Bassett and wife sail today from New York to spend six months on an automobile tour through Europe.

One of the sights at Zech & Mann's early this week was a stalk of Formosa lily, carrying eleven enormous flowers. The grower plants the bulbs among the carnations and they come on slowly, with a texture far heavier than where heat is applied.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. has been showing a bloom of a yellow sport of My Maryland. They think the color is hardly deep enough to make the variety valuable.

As an instance of how heavy crops were last week, Peter Reinberg sent in 13,000 carnations on one of his Saturday shipments.

W. E. Lynch, at E. H. Hunt's, paid a visit to Frank Oechslin on Sunday. He found everything going full blast and says the volume of business done in bedding plants would surprise a good many people who think all the activity in the trade centers in the wholesale cut flower market.

John Golland, of Downers Grove, sticks to Maid and Bride, though he also grows some Killarney. He figures that the old favorites will come back into popularity.

A cable from Berlin to the Record-Herald of last Sunday described the latest musical triumphs of Daphne Hillmers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hillmers, of the Kenwood Floral Co.

John Poehlmann and family are now occupying their new residence on Beacon street.

C. M. Dickinson says last week's invasion by thrips resulted in the usual spurt in sales of To-bak-ine.

E. B. Washburn is expected home from California Thursday or Friday.

The Chicago Rose Co. is now in its new quarters in the basement at the northeast corner of Wabash avenue and Randolph street. The concern will not have become entirely settled until after the remodeling of the building is completed, being now crowded into less than the space which will eventually be occupied.

Frank Johnson, of the A. L. Randall Co., returned May 23 from a successful trip of three weeks through the south, going as far as New Orleans. He was at Little Rock, Ark., the day of the automobile parade recently held there, and says that by all odds the finest car was that of P. M. Palez, manager of the retail store of J. W. Vestal & Son. Mr. Palez decorated his car with American Beauties and it was the hit of the parade.

The Northwestern Elevated Railroad Co., which runs through the alleys the greater part of its route, is endeavoring to improve the appearance of the property abutting upon its right of way, and has offered $85 in prizes for the best-kept backyard and garden and $50 for the best window boxes or porch displays in each of three sections into which it has divided the line. Entries must be made by June 15.

The father of E. C. Amling, Albert F. Amling and William Amling, was 78 years of age May 20, and there was a family gathering at the old gentleman's home at Oak Park. All the children were present except a daughter, who lives in California.

Vaughan & Sperry say this week will almost surely break all records in their sales.

At J. A. Budlong's the sweet peas are said to have been about the best selling item on the list for the last week. Everybody uses peas.

Kyle & Foerster report peonies now are arriving in full crop from Alton, Ill. Few local peonies will be in before June.

John Kruchten says that a really first-class article in ferns is good property in spite of the abundant supply of both southern and old crop ferns this year. The buyers are willing to pay the price for the best.

Among the recent visitors was F. A. Thompson, Detroit. Martin Reukauf, of Bayersdorfer's, is still here, making Chicago headquarters for trips to nearby cities.

Deep River, Conn.—Howard Southworth recently visited his home here, having given up his position as a florist in the Bellevue-Stratford hotel in Philadelphia. He was considering an offer to go to Washington, D. C., as a florist in a leading hotel.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Trade has ruled quiet for a week, but the near approach of Memorial day is now galvanizing new life into it. A feature has been the comparative scarcity of carnations. Prices on these are now soaring, as much as $6 to $8 being asked for fancy colored varieties for delivery at the end of the week. A general sentiment seems to be that there will be a scarcity of carnations, but plenty of all other flowers. A large home trade always causes a heavy holding back of carnations each year. Roses, as yet, have not made much advance, and as there is a good supply, rates on them will be moderate. In American Beauties the call is more for the medium and short-stemmed flowers; long-stemmed ones remain about the same. In pinks, Killarney and My Maryland are both good, while the old Bridesmaid will hold up its head at least temporarily. White Killarney, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Safrano, Bon Silene, Beacon Hill, Kaiserin, Richmond and Carnot are all of good quality for the last of May, thanks to the comparatively cool weather we have had.

Sweet peas are less abundant. The winter blooming varieties are about over and houses of the Spencer types are just coming in. These continue to sell well. Some good Darwin and other late tulips are seen. Some of these will last until the end of the week. Narcissus poeticus is still good, also plentiful. Outdoor lily of the valley is now at its best and its quality is much ahead of the forced article. Some of the pink colored sport is seen, but this is a slow seller. Lilies now include both auratum and speciosum, in addition to longiflorum. There is a good supply of gladioli, many of the large-flowered varieties now coming in. Spanish iris are less plentiful. Marguerites continue to sell well. Callas continue of good quality. Lilac bloom is abundant, but much of this will be gone for Memorial day. Ten weeks' stocks, double feverfew, candytuft, spiræas and other miscellaneous flowers promise to be in good supply. There is a good demand for Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri, as well as adiantum, hardy dagger ferns and galax leaves.

new life and growers are now kept on the jump. Geraniums are still leaders and promise to be none too plentiful. There is also a splendid trade being done in cannas, verbenas, pansies, myosotis, vincas, petunias, heliotropes and other popular Memorial day plants. In the way of larger plants for vases, Dracæna Australis, phœnix, hydrangeas, Boston ferns, geraniums, variegated vinca and acalyphas are selling well, but geraniums continue to be easily the leaders. Vases of one solid color are growing in popularity, while the mixtures are less in demand.

The Orchid Exhibition.

Some of the largest exhibitors were already on the ground at the opening of the week, preparing to set up their groups for the show opening May 26, and everything now points to a superb show, as well as a big attendance of the public. In class 1, calling for a 400-foot group, there are five entries, viz.: Julius Roehrs Co., J. T. Butterworth, Lager & Hurrell, Charles G. Roebling and W. A. Manda. There is a sum aggregating $1,750 in money, besides medals, in this class alone, and a battle royal is assured. Other large orchid exhibitors include Mrs. B. B. Tuttle, M. J. Pope, gardener; Walter Hunnewell, T. D. Hatfield, gardener; Joseph A. Manda; E. B. Dane, Donald McKenzie, gardener, and Lars Anderson, Duncan Finlayson, gardener. R. & J. Farquhar's large group of new Chinese plants, introduced by E. H. Wilson, will be an attraction, also the collections of big specimen wistarias and azaleas from Prof. C. S. Sargent, Charles Sander, gardener, and huge rhododendrons from Walter Hunnewell. Cattleya gigas alba from Lager & Hurrell will be one of the many unique orchids shown.

The orchid judges are: Oakes Ames, J. E. Rothwell, T. D. Hatfield, A. Herrington and A. J. Loveless. The regular plant and flower committee will pass on all plants, other than orchids. Next week's issue of The Review will contain a full illustrated report of the show.

Various Notes.

The annual exhibition and convention of the American Peony Society will be held at Horticultural hall, Boston, June 9 and 10. Present indications are that these dates will be right for herbaceous peonies in this section, of which there will be a great outpouring. There are thirteen classes in which prizes are offered by the Peony Society, and seventeen others offered by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. In the latter are classes for thirty or more varieties double; twelve varieties double, three flowers of each; specimen bloom, double; twelve or more varieties Japanese single; vase of blooms in society's large china vases, with long stems; six each named varieties of white, rose-pink, salmon pink, red or crimson and any other color; twenty-five blooms white or blush, pink or rose, red or crimson and any other color; twelve varieties double new, commercial growers; display covering 100 feet, arranged for decorative effect, and best new variety.

Much interest is being taken in the coming club field day to William Sim's establishment at Cliftondale, Saturday, June 4, and a large attendance is certain. Mr. Sim has a big new 500-foot house largely planted with Spencer varieties of sweet peas just coming in. Some of these he will probably exhibit at the orchid show this week. He picked his first bushel of tomatoes May 20. Of these latter he has numerous houses, following violets, which are in grand condition and will soon give fruit by the ton daily.

Edgar Bros. received the material for their new Lord & Burnham house this week. It will run at right angles to the older houses. The dimensions will be 43x200, with sides eight feet in height to allow of ample headroom for sweet peas. A fine crop of Spencer sweet peas is now being picked from one house, and mums in thousands will be planted early in June.

Thomas F. Galvin, during the early part of last week, had a delightful window display at his Tremont street store, consisting of bouquets of all types as made since 1860 down to the present day shower bouquet. Thousands of visitors stopped to examine the bouquets, some of them bringing back pleasant memories to many. All were artistically made.

The Waban Rose Conservatories have an immense crop of roses right for Memorial day. Killarney and White Killarney with them are still remarkably fine, also Richmond. My Maryland is promising as a summer variety, but will not compete with Killarney in winter.

Edward MacMulkin has some fine specimen cattleyas he hopes to show at the orchid exhibition this week, grown at his Norfolk Downs greenhouses. He is preparing for a heavy Memorial day trade and is in the meantime busy with landscape gardening and farming.

Thomas Pegler is selling quantities of fine Jack Rose dahlias, grown by William C. Ward, the pansy specialist. He has some fine pink larkspur grown by S. J. Goddard, which should prove a useful Memorial day flower.

William H. Elliott continues to have a great demand for Rose Mrs. Aaron Ward. He has some extra fine Bon Silene and Safrano with 24-inch to 30-inch stems. Rhea Reid and Beacon Hill are holding up well, while Killarney and White Killarney are extra fine for the season.

The Newtonville Greenhouses are cutting an extra fine lot of Killarney, Bridesmaid and other roses, which are handled at C Park street by Thomas Pegler.

The baseball team at C Park street has already secured several matches. May 21 one with a Brookline team was spoiled by damp weather.

Henry M. Robinson & Co. are busy this week and are more than satisfied with the volume of business they are handling.

The prominent retailers note a better sale than ever before for summer orchids, largely due to the interest being created by the coming big exhibition. From Seth Borden, J. T. Butterworth, Wheeler & Co., Paul De Nave and other specialists good supplies are now being received.

In the Boston park system the loniceras now are beautiful. Cratægus in many varieties are masses of white flowers. Viburnum plicatum and V. tomentosum, Spiræa Van Houttei, many azaleas, rhododendrons and a host of other beautiful subjects are also in bloom.

Visitors in town the first of the week include I. Rosnosky, representing H. F. Michell Co., of Philadelphia; H. A. Barnard, of Stuart Low & Co., Enfield, England, and Edouard Roehrs, of Rutherford, N. J. Later visitors were F. R. Pierson, Robert Craig, W. A. Manda, Julius Roehrs and Geo. L. Freeman.

J. Newman & Sons, in addition to a large and varied line of natural flowers, are featuring artificial wreaths quite prominently this week.

William E. Doyle is making a feature of English gathering baskets for cut flowers, of which he carries a large and varied line.

Alfred P. Meredith, the genial superintendent gardener on the Nathaniel Thayer estate, South Lancaster, Mass., who has been quite seriously ill, is much improved.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

There is much more life in the demand for geraniums in bloom than for the blooms to be found in the cut flower market. The advent of warm weather, the genuine thing, has increased the supply of all kinds of flowers and diminished the demand. The result is a decidedly dull market. Carnations are one of the stronger flowers on the list. The demand for really good stock has been excellent on most days, but the warm weather has a demoralizing effect on carnations, causing the buyers to be extremely critical. New crop sweet peas, magnificent stock, some from the frames outdoors, some from late planting indoors, have completely pushed aside the worn-out denizens of the greenhouses that have done such yeoman service during the season. There is no comparison between these bright, long-stemmed flowers and the dull, rather watery, short-stemmed stock that marks the last efforts of the tired vines.

Roses are extremely plentiful. The authorities generally agree that the medium grade, where the flowers are fine, fare best. Valley has been in excellent demand at prices that average well for the season. Cattleyas are easier, the demand being anticipatory rather than present. Cornflowers are fine and plentiful. There is nothing doing in gardenias. Some excellent lilies are in the market. The quality stimulates the demand.

Last, but by no means least, come peonies. They are in full crop now. The red of officinalis is most sought; pink and white drag. Although Saturday was an excellent day, peonies were seldom asked for. The wholesalers, realizing that the crop is at its height, are having peonies cut for Memorial day. The few days retarding are a simple matter, rather of benefit than of injury to them.

Indications point to a brisk demand during the next week or ten days.

The Question of Profit.

Five years ago one of our brightest business men said that he felt sure flowers would be lower in price in a few years. To prepare for this decrease in price he put all his energy to reducing the cost of production, believing in that way a fair profit on his investment could be maintained.

Today the wisdom of this course is apparent. The growers who are able to produce their stock at a reduced cost are doing as well as they were then, while the growers whose expenses are as large as they were five years ago find their receipts are smaller than formerly, owing to the lower average prices. Really fine stock brings as much now as it ever did, occasionally more; but the ordinary grades do not bring as much. The market has become so critical that ordinary stock is rarely accepted at prices better than ordinary.

The question of increasing profit by a reduction of expenses is one of the most important business problems of the day. Cheap houses, cheap plants, cheap labor are often enormously expensive. Judgment in the kind of houses to build, the kind of plants to grow, the kind of men to grow them, is vital. What matter how hard you work yourself if the houses are unsuitable, the plants inferior, the workers' cost less? The results from such an enterprise must be disappointing.

Consider, on the other hand, the possibilities of a well-run business, large or small, laying stress on the fact that quality must not be sacrificed for economy.

Founder's Day.

The birthday of Stephen Girard, May 20, was celebrated with fitting honor at Girard College. The horticultural chief, Charles W. Cox, centered his efforts in the chapel and on the tomb of Stephen Girard, in the Corinthian Library and in the grounds lying between that and the south entrance, also in the dining and reception rooms. The ample green-

The plant combinations showed the college colors, besides many striking effects in solid colored pansies, daisies, coleus, cannas, geraniums, etc. The idea of planting a single variety of pansies in masses, as with daffodils, tulips or geraniums, is growing in popular favor.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Business has held up well during the last week. There has been considerable activity in connection with funeral work, receptions, school exhibitions, a few weddings and other social functions, while in plants there has been a considerable demand. Small bedding plants are especially called for, and potted stock for Memorial day is handled almost as fast as it is brought in. There has been an average supply of everything except carnations, these being off crop. Prices have ranged about normal, but for next week there will be a stiffening of from thirty-three to fifty per cent.

Club Meeting.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island was held at the rooms of the club, 98 Westminster street, on Monday evening, May 16, with a good attendance. President Robert Johnston was in the chair. It was voted to make a visit to Kingston College in June, the date to be decided upon later, and a committee was appointed to make the necessary arrangements.

The entertainment committee had no regular program for the evening, so a general discussion followed, concerning spring work and landscape gardening. The extermination of insect pests on trees and shrubs was also discussed at length. At the close of the business the members were served with fruit through the courtesy of the former president, James Hockey.

Various Notes.

Joseph Kopelman is cutting fine sweet peas from his farm at Oaklawn, in all the light colors. He is cutting several thousand daily and expects to have about 50,000 for Memorial day.

William Appleton & Son are busy on landscape work. They report a big increase in this line of work this year. Funeral work with them has also been brisk.

The Evening Bulletin, of this city, has started a campaign to plant young trees about all the public school buildings and other barren places throughout the city, and business firms have subscribed nearly 500 trees. Alexander Johnson, of George Johnson & Son, who is the city forester, has been made a member of the Bulletin's committee in charge of this work.

The will of the late George Williams, treasurer of the W. E. Barrett Co., has been probated, and his sons, George F. and E. B. Williams, have been appointed administrators.

Daniel A. Clarke, of the Red Oak Nurseries, Fiskeville, has taken several hundred orders for potted plants for Memorial day.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The week opens with rain and chill. It is and has been a remarkable season, abnormal and unsolvable. The craft has suffered from the unseasonableness more than any other business. The last few weeks have approached the dullness of midsummer. An abundance of everything floods the market, while the demand is disappointing. Doubtless the end of this week will see a temporary change for the better, and Memorial day should materialize a thorough clean-up of the cut flower market. June wedding bookings are a hopeful sign. Every retailer of prominence has his share. Improvement, when it begins, should therefore last until July. With the New York market so stocked with the choicest productions of the expert growers of this section, there should be again materialized a good shipping trade, but so dependent are the growers on this market as an outlet, that great quantities of their surplus are reaching us daily from Philadelphia and other cities, until we are fast becoming the clearing house of the East, growers realizing that some price for their products may be depended on, no matter how great the congestion here. Outdoor shrubs and roses have begun to furnish their quota for digestion, and it seems as if the stomach of this market was being crowded to the limit.

Tremendous shipments of roses are arriving and prices are on rock bottom; 12 cents to 15 cents is high for Beauties, and 4 cents will buy the best of the other varieties. Carnations seldom get above 2 cents, and large lots go at the independent buyer's offer. Southern gardenias have broken the average of the local product and outdoor valley keeps the price of the other down. Some grand peonies and sweet peas come daily, with much that is inferior and hard to dispose of. Lilies are up, as was expected, for Memorial needs, and will rule strong until after next Tuesday.

The day of the orchid is here, and the week will continue to emphasize its place as king. Notwithstanding the enormous quantity of flowers that have been held by our local growers for the great Boston exhibition, the market has an abundance of grand flowers to offer daily and prices have not advanced. All the seasonable varieties are now in evidence and orders from all over the country, for the June weddings, have been booked by the wholesale men.

Various Notes.

June 13 will be the final meeting of the New York Florists' Club for the season. A horseback trip through Hayti will be described by George V. Nash. There will be some special exhibits of peonies and roses, and the dispenser of refreshments will close the canteen's record with special ceremonies. The outing takes place this year June 28. H. A. Bunyard is hard at work on the souvenir.

The latest windfall for the florists is a scheme of the Rev. Dr. Reisner, formerly of Denver, now of Grace church, New York. To everyone who attends the services he advertises the gift of a rose. His first order for May 22 was for 1,200, and his church was crowded to the doors. Last Sunday the roses were supplied by one of the wealthy members in memory of his father. In their season and for variety, carnations, dahlias, peonies, etc., will be used, and it is a scheme that is likely to be popular and to spread.

The Wilson-Hoyt Co. already is at work on an interesting exhibit for the Rochester convention, demonstrating how its concrete benches are constructed. Among the prominent growers of the east now using them are Henry Hentz, Jr., Lager & Hurrell, Messrs. Weber, Marquardt, Lum, Kneipp, Condon and Robert Wilson.

Another week will see the waning of the public demand at the seed houses and the auctions. It is remarkable how the call has been sustained. Even yet the displays of bedding stock are as attractive as ever. Great expectations and preparations are evident for Memorial day.

The Aphine Co. reports a rapid growth in the volume of its trade.

SMILAX TURNING YELLOW.

Under separate cover I am sending a diseased smilax plant. The leaves turn yellow. This started first on the long strings and the plant still remained healthy, but now it starts at the bottom of the plant. I noticed this right after New Year, and up to that time I always had good smilax. Can you tell me what the trouble is?

H. F. W. A.

The yellowing of the foliage indicates that the plants are getting either too little or too much water. Provided the drainage is good, there can be little fear of their getting too much water, but dryness will cause the leaves to fall quickly. Water your beds or benches carefully. Avoid letting them become in any way soggy. Let them dry out pretty well between waterings. A good temperature for smilax is 55 to 60 degrees at night, but it will grow in a considerably cooler house. When you apply water let it be in sufficient quantities to soak the soil well. C. W.

FIGHTING APHIS.

With the arrival of warmer weather, green and black aphis will appear in vast numbers on many trees and shrubs, and lots of customers will be asking you how to get rid of them. Whale oil soap, one pound to six or eight gallons of water, is a good remedy. Nicotine extracts are reliable, but more costly. The best, least expensive and most easily prepared insecticide is kerosene emulsion. Shave down a pound of any hard soap fine; add two gallons of water; boil until soap is dissolved; add four gallons of kerosene; keep agitated for ten minutes, and then pour the emulsion into any tight cask. Before using, first melt the emulsion and use at the rate of fifteen parts water to one of the emulsion. In addition to hardy trees and shrubs, this is excellent for chrysanthemums, roses outdoors, or any other plants which have smooth leaves. Do not, however, use it on show pelargoniums, cucumbers, melons or any plants with soft or woolly foliage. Kerosene emulsion is also useful when fighting oyster shell or scurfy scale and for the pupæ of elm beetles as they descend the trees. For these use at the rate of five to one.

SPANISH IRIS.

Kindly advise me if Spanish iris can be grown in a coldframe. If so, when should they be planted, how thick and about what time would they bloom? If planted outside will they bloom about Memorial day? Are the mixtures satisfactory, or is it better to plant the named varieties? I live in Michigan.

H. H. G.

Spanish iris does well grown either in flats or planted directly in coldframes. The bulbs usually arrive in October and can be planted at once. As they are slender growing, they can go fairly close together, three inches apart each way, or plant in rows four inches apart and allow two inches between the bulbs. In coldframes they will easily bloom for Memorial day.

Plant bulbs outdoors on any well-drained ground about the end of October. They are perfectly hardy. In Massachusetts the usual flowering time is June 15 to 30. With you they would be rather earlier. The named varieties are inexpensive and decidedly preferable to the mixtures. The following are excellent sorts: Louise, pale blue; chrysolora, golden yellow; Midley, pale blue; Thunderbolt, deep bronze; Cajanus, yellow; British Queen, pure white, large. Immediately following the Spanish iris come the English iris, which are also splendid for cutting and quite hardy. Allow the English iris six to eight inches apart each way, and the Spanish iris four to five inches each way. The former variety has heavier foliage. W. N. C.

The Market.

The condition of the market has changed little since last week. The demand has been somewhat better for first-class stock, but the wholesalers have plenty of everything that is seasonable. The approach of Memorial day should clean up a great deal of the surplus stock of the wholesalers by the end of the week, when a great deal of shipping trade is looked for by the local retailers, though locally not a great deal of extra work is looked for. At the wholesale houses last week all were loaded down with stock of extra good quality, and also in the lower grades, at prices within the reach of all in small and large lots. This week there are prospects of an abundance of stock in roses and carnations, with plenty of lilies, peonies and cape jasmines. Extra fine valley is selling fairly well. Common ferns have been scarce of late. A great deal of rain last week has kept the plantsmen back in their work.

Various Notes.

Pierre Schneider returned last week from Springfield, Ill., and is now in full charge of the plant of the Oakland Floral Co., at Kirkwood, Mo. This company is going heavily into growing stock for the local market, which will be handled by C. A. Kuehn.

Fred Ostertag, who has been on the sick list during the last week, is again at his post with Ostertag Bros. Henry Ostertag, the head of the firm, reports the firm as being busy and they are working overtime in the decorating line.

John Barnard, until recently with Miss Newman, at Spring and Olive streets, is in the wholesale district each morning. He is contemplating a trip west, if nothing turns up in his line.

Julius Koenig, who is in the office of City Forester Meyer, has moved and is now living near his old home, next door to the Koenig Floral Co., on Florissant avenue. He says the forester's departments have all been busy of late, looking after the sidewalk trees.

The local seedsmen say that they expect a large delegation this year from here to the twenty-eighth annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association, which meets at Atlantic City next month. All say they are having the best season in years.

Miss Mattie Schnell, the east side florist, who is a daily caller in the wholesale district, says she has had a splendid business season. The flower business on the east side is growing rapidly.

Miss Tillie Meinhardt has made a call for all the lady members of the Home Circle to meet at the Union station at 6:45 p. m., at the C. P. & St. L. gate, Wednesday, June 8, for their trip to Chautauqua, where they will spend the night and Thursday and leave that night at 5:18 for home. This will be one of the best meetings the circle has had, and all members are expected to be on hand.

The Paris Floral Co. will be open for business next week at 507 Olive street. Fred Foster will be in charge and Fred Foster, Jr., will have charge of the old stand in the Century building, at Ninth avenue and Olive street.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers' Grand avenue store showed some extra fine gladioli spikes last week and some fine specimen plants in hydrangeas. Dinners and wedding receptions kept them busy all last week.

Miss Teresa Badaracco had a big run of funeral work last week. Her sister, Mrs. George Ostertag, is now with her and is a great help to her in making up artistic work of all kinds.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Twenty-eighth annual meeting, Atlantic City, N. J., June 21 to 23, 1910.

Too much rain in the Chicago onion set section.

IT is quite apparent that the 1910 seed crop in England will be short so far as it concerns plants that have had to pass through the winter.

E. J. DEAL, manager of W. W. Johnson & Son, Boston, England, is planning to visit the seed trade in the United States again this year, probably in August.

THE old crop of turnip is practically exhausted, both in England and Holland, and in the former country there are few offers of new crop seed, owing to the loss in all biennials.

HUGH M. TAYLOR, of Lloyd, Fla., has perfected a method of cleaning the seed of Desmodium molle, the beggar weed, or Florida clover, which gives the necessary germinating quality to make the seed a commercial article. Mr. Taylor considers this the most valuable legume for the south, especially on plantations of oranges and on truck lands.

EDWIN LONSDALE writes The Review from Lompoc, Cal., as follows: "Sweet peas are a grand sight on Purpee's Floradale seed farm at the present time (May 19) and will continue so for many weeks. The valley of Lompoc is well suited to the culture of sweet peas; cool nights and rich land are what the sweet peas enjoy, and they have both here."

THE most serious phase of the situation on the other side of the Atlantic is the inability of many English houses to offer beet seed.

ALL the news of the general crops continues encouraging. Good crops are all that are needed to make another year of prosperity and a big seed season in 1911.

IT is reported that R. M. Stephenson & Son, farmers near Quinn, S. D., have contracted to grow 125 acres of peas for seed purposes this year. They have grown peas on a smaller scale for several seasons.

THE prospect, taking the world-wide view, is not for any great increase in seed production this year. Peas, beans, brassicas, beets, turnips, radishes are none of them likely to produce surplus quantities.

NOT so many seedsmen as were expected are making California trips this season.

IN spite of the need, it is the estimate that the world's acreage under seed crops this season is less than in 1909.

THE new store of the N. L. Willett Seed Co., 849 Broad street, Augusta, Ga., recently occupied, is said to be a model.

CALIFORNIA appears to be having as favorable a season as any other seed growing section anywhere in the world.

W. T. FONDA, treasurer of James Vick's Sons, Rochester, has just returned from a two weeks' fishing trip in the Adirondack regions.

THE fourth annual meeting of the Iowa Seed Dealers' Association is to be held at the Chamberlain hotel, in Des Moines, on Thursday, June 9. C. N. Page is president and W. C. Adams secretary.

SEED TRADE CONVENTION.

Hotel Strand, at the foot of Pennsylvania avenue and overlooking the ocean, has been selected for the twenty-eighth annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association at Atlantic City, N. J., June 21 to 23.

The secretary announces the following program of papers:

"Recent Science in Plant and Animal Breeding," by W. M. Hays, assistant secretary of agriculture, Washington, D. C.

"Methods and Apparatus for Seed Testing by Seed Merchants," by George H. Clark, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, Can.

"The Spencer Type of Sweet Peas," by W. Atlee Burpee, Philadelphia.

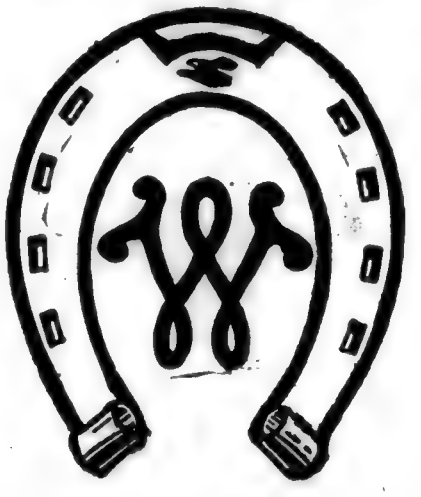
"State Legislation, Present and Future," by Prof. Charles D. Woods, Orono, Me.

"The Advancement and Protection of the Interests of the Seed Trade," by Curtis Nye Smith, counsel for the American Seed Trade Association, Boston.

"Past, Present and Prospective of the Seed Trade in America," by Francis Brill, Hempstead, N. Y.

An amendment to the by-laws is proposed increasing the dues to $20 per year.

The convention will open at 10 a. m. Tuesday, June 21, with the address of President J. C. Robinson and the report of the secretary-treasurer, and will conclude Thursday with the election and installation of officers. On Wednesday evening the annual banquet will be held. On Friday all members and their families are invited to be the guests of W. Atlee Burpee & Co. at Fordhook Farm, Doylestown, Pa. Special trains will stop at the entrance and luncheon will be served at 1 o'clock. Mr. Burpee and Howard M. Earl, who left May 23 for California, will be back in time to welcome their guests.



The hotel will make the following special rates:

Single room, without bath, for one	$3.50
Double room, without bath, for two	7.00
Single room, with bath, for one	5.00
Double room, with bath, for two	9.00

Including all meals.

The hotel states that "these rates will be given to members of the Seed Trade Association regardless of locations. In other words, rooms facing Pennsylvania avenue and ocean front will be the same price as land side

SEEDSMEN RECLAIMING SWAMP.

That Schilder Bros., Chillicothe, O., do not confine their activities to onion seeds and onion sets is shown by a report that comes from Norfolk, Va., as follows:

"Announcement is made of the awarding of a contract to the American Steel Dredge Co., of Ft. Wayne, Ind., for the digging of fifty miles of drainage canals for the reclamation of 12,000 acres of land in the Dismal Swamp, near Moyock, N. C., under the new drainage laws of that state. The project is one of $150,000, headed by John Seip and other capitalists of Chillicothe, O. The reclaimed land is to be developed into rich truck fields for the production of horse-tooth corn, celery, onions and Irish potatoes. Messrs. Seip and Schilder Bros., of Chillicothe, are owners of large sawmills and cooperage plants at Wallacetown, in Norfolk county, and Moyock, across the North Carolina border. The product being used in their mills is timber which they are cutting from the Dismal Swamp property preparatory to the reclamation of the land for trucking purposes. It is estimated that the revenue from crops grown upon rich reclaimed land will in four years defray all cost of reclamation."

SEED TESTING IN MISSOURI.

Edgar Brown, chief of the division of seed testing of the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., has been inspecting the seed-testing laboratory at the College of Agriculture of the University of Missouri, at Columbia. The United States government is supporting four coöperative laboratories, in Oregon, Nebraska, Missouri and Indiana. These are all branches of the laboratory at Washington. The laboratory in Columbia has already received 520 samples of seeds this year. Last year at this time only 196 had been received. At present fifty to 100 samples are received each week. This tripling of the work has made necessary the employment of another assistant. Miss Frances Burket, of Forest Glen, Md., an assistant in the Washington laboratory, will work in the Columbia laboratory for the next two or three months. Miss Norma Waddle, a graduate of the University of Nebraska in 1908, has charge of this laboratory. Miss Bertha Cunningham, of Columbia, is the assistant. During the last year ninety-four per cent of all seeds tested were from Missouri. Sixty-six per cent were sent in by farmers.

SEED GROWING AT HOLLISTER.

The Free Lance, published at Hollister, Cal., in a recent issue, published an interesting two-column illustrated write-up of the seed farms of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co. and elsewhere in the paper said: "Within the past two years the industry of seed farming has developed greatly and promises to become of great importance. In the San Juan valley 600 acres are devoted successfully to the raising of seeds that are shipped to all parts of the world. In the San Felipe section, where artesian flowing wells abound, large areas are being devoted to flower and vegetable seed raising. More than 1,000 acres are now devoted to seed farming in San Benito county, and there still is plenty of good land awaiting this profitable industry."

EXPORTS OF GRASS SEEDS.

Vice-consul George B. Stephenson, of Liverpool, in reply to an American exporter of grass and clover seeds, writes concerning the British market as follows: "The imports into the United Kingdom of grass and clover seed from the United States during the last five years for which statistics are available are as follows, in hundredweights (of 112 pounds each): 1904, 111,869; 1905, 101,101; 1906, 90,505; 1907, 88,204; 1908, 101,339. The bulk of the clover seed finding an English market comes from Chile, the quotation at the close of 1909 for seed of that origin having been about $17 a hundredweight. Firms consulted state that the demand for American clover and grass seed on the Liverpool market is somewhat limited, owing to the large amount used in the United States and the high price given there, which, as a rule, makes it impracticable for the seed to be shipped to England, where it must compete with seeds grown where the home demand is not so great and prices therefore lower."

Consul George Heimrod, of Berne, in answering an American inquiry, gives the following information in reference to imports of grass and clover seed into the republic: "Switzerland imported grass and clover seed in 1908 to the extent of 2,273,000 pounds, from the following countries: Germany, 703,000; France, 500,000; Italy, 412,000; England, 395,000; Austria, 136,000; United States, 116,000; Belgium, 10,000, and Denmark, 1,000 pounds. The German and French seed was valued at $17.50, and that from the United States at $9.55 per hundred pounds. The statistics do not give details as to what amount was grass and what amount clover seed. There is no customs duty on these articles. Much of the seed imported from the United States is timothy, as little American clover is used."

POTATO BLACKLEG.

The Maine Agricultural Experiment Station is now mailing Bulletin 174, which discusses a bacterial disease of the stem and tuber of the potato that has only recently been recognized in America. A similar disease, called blackleg, has been known in Europe for some time, and it is thought to have been introduced into this country by means of infected seed tubers. As yet blackleg has not caused much damage in Maine potato fields, but it is thought to be on the increase. The chief danger from this disease lies in the fact that it causes much more serious losses in states farther south, where Maine potatoes are largely sold for seed purposes. If this trade is to be held, growers and shippers of seed potatoes should learn to recognize the disease and as far as possible ship for seed purposes from fields upon which it does not occur.

Mansfield, O.—Ed. Berno recently sent nine dozen carnations to the children of the county children's home.

AMMONIATED
LAWN LIME
Kills Weeds—Makes Grass Grow

Applied as a light top dressing to lawns, it kills all flat leaved weeds, such as Dandelion, Daisy, Plantain, Sorrel, Chickweed, Moss, etc., in 48 hours, and without other fertilizer produces a wonderful, luxuriant, rich green growth of lawn grasses, which is distinctly noticeable 50 feet away.

The use of Ammoniated Lawn Lime supersedes hand weeding of lawns, putting greens, etc. It saves the grass from being pulled up and in many cases ruined. Grasses take a new, vigorous growth, avoiding probable trouble in future.

Quantities: If very weedy, 1 lb. to 40 sq. ft.; 25 lbs. to 1000 sq. ft. (20x50). Half to one-quarter amount if moderately weedy.

ABSOLUTELY GUARANTEED
Money refunded if not satisfactory.

PRICES: 5 lbs., 50c; 25 lbs., $2.00; 50 lbs., $3.50; 100 lbs., $6.00.

We will ship a 100-lb. bag of Ammoniated Lawn Lime at $6.00 f. o. b. Louisville, to any Superintendent of a Cemetery, Park or Private Estate, where references are furnished. It is absolutely guaranteed as represented. If used as directed. If not satisfactory, we are to be notified within 30 days from date of invoice.

DAYTON, OHIO.

The Market.

Too good a report cannot be given on the condition of last week's business. An increasing demand for all varieties of flowers was evident, and the florist was busy with cut flower and pot plant orders. Memorial day orders are coming in rapidly, and no one engaged in the florists' business expects to get much rest until Memorial day is a thing of the past. Plants of all varieties are moving rapidly, and it is a certified fact that there will not be nearly enough stock on the market to supply the demand. The weather, though disagreeable, was just the thing for the peonies, as they will just about hit Memorial day.

Various Notes.

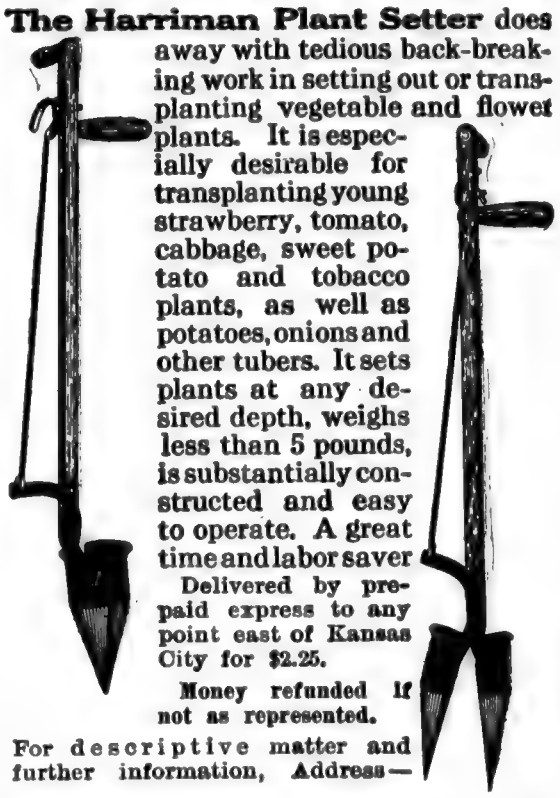
EGGPLANT DAMPING OFF.

What is the cause of eggplant damping off when from one to two inches high? I can find no insects or anything else on the plants. Everything else did finely in our hotbeds. H. J. R.

The eggplants are attacked by a fungus which causes the stalks to decay just above the ground, with the result that the plants fall over and die. There is no help for the plants attacked, but the fungus can be kept from spreading by transplanting the plants far enough apart so they are not crowded; then the air and sunlight can get in between them and kill off the fungus by keeping the foliage and the surface of the soil dry.

Where plants are overwatered or left wet at night the trouble is pretty sure to follow, especially if the plants are crowded. Give them only enough water to keep them from wilting, and do not water too late in the day. H. G.



APHIS ON LETTUCE.

I am sending some lettuce leaves that have a small green insect on them. What is it, and what is the remedy? It does not appear to trouble anything but cabbage and lettuce. I can keep it down by spraying with the water in which tobacco stems have been soaked, but this cannot be used on lettuce that is ready for market. E. P. M.

The insects are the common green-fly or green lice, aphis. The writer does not state whether they are in the greenhouse or outside. If inside, they are easily kept down by smoking with tobacco stems. A light smoke once or twice a week is better than a heavy one occasionally. If they are on plants outside, the only way to get rid of them is to spray with some of the tobacco solutions. Tobacco dust or tobacco stems kept on the ground around the plants will help to keep them down. H. G.

SAVES BACK ACHE

The Harriman Plant Setter does away with tedious back-breaking work in setting out or transplanting vegetable and flower plants. It is especially desirable for transplanting young strawberry, tomato, cabbage, sweet potato and tobacco plants, as well as potatoes, onions and other tubers. It sets plants at any desired depth, weighs less than 5 pounds, is substantially constructed and easy to operate. A great time and labor saver

DISEASES AND PREVENTION.

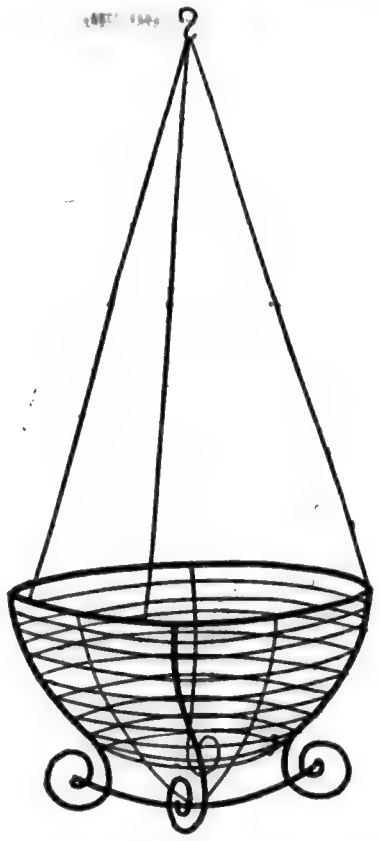
Cabbage, Cauliflower, Radishes and Turnips.



The cabbage, cauliflower, radish and turnip all belong to the mustard family and all have the common fault of being attacked by about three destructive diseases; namely, club-root, black rot and fusarium wilt.

The black rot is a bacterial disease infesting slime mold. It is easily destroyed by greenhouse methods of soil treatment.

The black-rot is a bacterial disease which survives in the cabbage refuse, as well as in the soil.

The fusarium wilt has recently proved destructive in northern Ohio cabbage growing districts. Both it and the black rot are commonly present where cabbage and cauliflower are largely grown.

Where these plants are grown for forcing, care must be taken to avoid plant bed infection, as well as the infection of the greenhouse soil.

Most of you will appreciate, from the resume just gone over, how large a factor the proper treatment of your greenhouse soils has come to be in controlling the diseases of greenhouse vegetables. Without effective methods for this soil disinfection to destroy soil-infesting organisms, the present development of the forcinghouse industry would scarcely seem possible.

However, while these methods are effective, success is only reached by continued care and close observation, as well as by the application of right practice in greenhouse control.

BOSTON NOTES.

W. Field, of Northampton, shows up in fine shape at C Park street at present.

A meeting of the national flower show committee was held at Horticultural hall, Boston, May 25, on the call of President Pierson. The important business to be considered was the selection of a hall for the exhibition. Other matters were also taken up and discussed.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co., of San Francisco, will have an exhibit of phalaenopsis at the big orchid show this week.

W. N. Craig.

The two brothers, Harry N. Kelley and Frank P. Kelley, whose headquarters are at 15 Pemberton Square, on the ground floor of Barristers' hall, opposite the courthouse, get a large amount of their business from Cambridge, where they reside. Their recent decorations for the inauguration exercises at the Cambridge city hall were notably excellent. The Messrs. Kelley have been in business for themselves for the last three years. Previous to that time Harry had been for ten years with J. Newman & Sons, and Frank had been for several years in the employ of Wm. E. Doyle.

Kendallville, Ind.—The Johnson Floral Co. will add one iron-frame house, 28x56 feet. The King Construction Co. will furnish the material.

Lestershire, N. Y.—W. R. Gray & Son, of this village, have begun work in the construction of a greenhouse on the property at Burbank avenue.

DAHLIAS—GLADIOLUS

400 varieties of Dahlias, selections from the best the country affords.

Saskatoon, Can.—J. C. Kirby is establishing a business here, under the name of the Riverside Nursery.

PACIFIC COAST.

Seattle, Wash.—E. C. Flohr, who formerly conducted the Benton Junction Nursery, near Georgetown, Wash., is now with F. S. Stimson, florist.

Tacoma, Wash.—Charles Halkier, of the Northwestern Floral Co., has purchased several lots at Starr street and Tacoma avenue, in order to have additional space for the erection of greenhouses.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

The market last week showed something of a glut, as the bright, warm weather brought everything into crop at once. It is a question with the florist whether to throw away the surplus or dispose of it through the street fakers, and the former course is frequently chosen.

Carnations are at their best, but their keeping qualities are badly impaired. Roses are plentiful and of fine quality; the better stock is disposed of without any effort. Peonies are in their prime and the indications are that there will be a shortage in these for Decoration day, as well as in other stock. Sweet peas are becoming more plentiful and are the best selling commodity.

The out-of-town call for graduation flowers has increased the sales considerably. The city schools will close several weeks later. The unusual demand for bedding stock has about cleaned out the market.

Various Notes.

Plans for the rose fiesta are being rapidly consummated. Greater efforts than formerly will be made this year to insure success. The floral parade will be the feature of the week. Many of the principal towns of the state will be represented by appropriate floats. The indications are that by that date, June 7, the outside roses will be in their prime. The yards and private parks are a grand sight at present, and a few weeks will effect a wonderful change.

D. L. Thomas, formerly of Salem, Ore., is now at Dallas, Ore., which is a better location, with a larger territory to contribute to his trade.

C. W. Skinner, representing the Skinner Irrigation Co., is interviewing the local trade.

John Oleson, of Cleone, Ore., has been favored with several large orders from the interior and middle west for dagger ferns, which are scarce at this season.

E. R. C.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather continues to be warm, with prospects of its remaining so for some time. Flowers are a positive drug in this market and it is impossible to give any quotations on them. There is, of course, a slight demand for extra stock. Roses, as well as all available flowers, show the results of the hot spell. Bride and Maid are weak in stem and poor in color and Beauties are only about half the size they should be. Spanish iris is almost out of season, and peonies will not last over a few days more. These have both been good sellers until the last few days, when they suffered the same as all other kinds of stock. Easter lilies have shown the greatest slump of anything in the flower line. They have sold as low as 75 cents per dozen stems. It is questionable if as many will be grown next season. Bride gladioli are now in full swing and are as popular as ever. They find great favor with the flower shipping public. They cost the stores from 75 cents to $1 per hundred, and at these figures a handsome profit can be made. Sweet peas are not of as good quality as we should like to see them, but this can be also charged to the excess of heat. Other kinds of outside stock are in large supply, and there is no doubt but that there will be plenty of flowers for Memorial day.

Various Notes.

Miss K. O. Sessions, the well known San Diego florist, was in town on a short trip.

The members of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society and invited guests were entertained by the E. Gill Nursery Co. on their West Berkeley grounds May 16. A pleasant and profitable time was enjoyed by all present and great interest was shown by the visitors in the many hundreds of new sorts of roses, of which over fifty acres are cultivated at this place.

Much damage was done on the evening of May 14 by a high wind which prevailed in this vicinity. Domoto Bros. are minus several thousands of panes of glass, and almost all the small growers in their vicinity are busy filling the empty spaces in their greenhouses.

H. H. Lilienthal, the landscape gardener of Berkeley, has addressed a letter to the California horticulturists in which he advises them to pay attention to the propagation and growth of the cork oak. The claim is made that many thousands of acres of land could profitably be devoted to this industry, which is yet in its infancy in California.

F. E. Ludwig, of Portland, Ore., was in town on a short visit.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co. has commenced the erection of its new range of glass near San Mateo, Cal.

A. H. Hills is cutting heavily of a fine lot of cattleyas at the present time.

G.

Rochester, N. H.—C. W. Bradley is building a greenhouse on his land near First street.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business remains good. There is plenty of good stock available. The weather has been quite warm the last few days, bringing out peas, gladioli, iris, etc., in large quantities.

Sweet peas were never better than just at present. Elegant, long-stemmed stock, in any color or shade desired, can be had.

Indications point toward a big Memorial day business, although this day is not as big a flower day in Detroit as in some other cities. Many flowers are shipped to the smaller towns about here. The local commission houses also do a big shipping business.

Boxwood trees have sold well so far this spring. Some florists go into the handling of these popular trees quite extensively, and reap a nice profit.

Various Notes.

Charles Warncke, Jr., is again able to be around, after a long illness.

Several dozen unusually fine Golden Glow mums attracted much attention at the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange last week. They were from the houses of Robert Klagge.

George E. Browne, of Greenfield, has been called upon to serve on the jury of the Wayne county circuit court.

Saturday, May 21, J. F. Sullivan had a rose sale, disposing of over 5,000 roses. The roses were all nicely arranged in boxes, with some green, and sold at 50 cents per box, each box containing ten short-stemmed roses. This sale netted a nice little profit.

Harry Breitmeyer has become the proud possessor of an Anhut Six touring car. The mayor's son is quite an auto enthusiast and knows a good car when he sees one.

William Hielscher, of the Hielscher Wire Works, has invested in an auto. All the members of the Florists' Club are looking forward to a ride. H. S.

THE SHRUBBY LONICERAS.

Of all the ornamental deciduous flowering shrubs, the loniceras are among the most beautiful. They grow rapidly and either as single specimens or in masses are extremely effective. Single specimens need considerable room, more especially Morrowi, and it spoils them to do any shearing. They are, however, striking either as solitary specimens or in groups on the lawn, while in mixed shrubberies, if allowed the needful space for proper development, they are among the most useful shrubs we have. Not only are they beautiful when in flower, but many of them are even more charming when in fruit, and their ease of culture, rapid growth, hardiness and freedom from attacks of practically all insect pests are great factors in their favor. Planting can be done in either spring or fall. Many prefer the latter period. Large sized plants start better if given a good heading back.

Of the large number of varieties of upright growing or bush honeysuckle, some of the Himalayan varieties are not reliably hardy in the north. Some of the best hardy sorts are the following:

L. Morrowi, Japanese bush honeysuckle, is a vigorous grower, with dark green foliage, gray colored underneath. The flowers are pure white and produced in wonderful profusion. These were at their best near Boston May 21. From August to October the bushes are a mass of bright red fruit. The foliage hangs on usually until December, making this a valuable variety for screening purposes. L. Morrowi wants plenty of room. Some beautiful specimens are in Franklin park, Boston. Single plants will grow as much as fifteen to eighteen feet across and to get their full beauty they should have no other plants crowding them.

L. fragrantissima, Chinese bush honeysuckle, is a robust variety and almost evergreen, holding its foliage until quite sharp frost. In the southern states this is an evergreen. It is of more straggly habit than some other varieties. It is so hardy and grows so vigorously on almost any soil, and the flowers of a pinkish white color are so fragrant, that it has become widely popular. Around many an old homestead, even when they have been abandoned, big bushes of this lonicera grow and thrive with practically no care at all.

L. Tatarica, Tartarian honeysuckle, is a robust growing variety. It was in excellent bloom this season May 20. This is probably more generally planted than any other species. There is both a pink and a white form. The pink one contrasts beautifully with the foliage. The creamy white form possesses more fragrance and a high bush of it presents a pretty picture. The fruit is usually red, but occasionally yellow, being carried in great profusion. The birds are fond of them. There are a host of other forms of L. Tatarica, with flowers of a crimson, pink or whitish color; quite a few of these have been named.

L. Ruprechtiana attains a height of twelve feet. Its flowers are pure white when first open. There are many hybrids from this species which are frequently sold for the original. It was in flower near Boston this year, May 20, or a week ahead of normal. The scarlet berries in summer are attractive.

L. Alberti, also called L. spinosa, is a dwarf growing variety and is a native of Turkestan. The rosy pink flowers, produced in May, are fragrant. This plant is useful for the front of shrubberies or rock gardens.

L. Ledebouri is a handsome Californian variety, not reliably hardy in the northern states. It attains a height of fifteen feet. The salver-shaped flowers are scarlet red outside. South of New Jersey this is a splendid variety to grow. It likes a shady location.

L. involucrata, while not one of the most desirable varieties to plant in quantity, is a native species which is to be found from Ontario to Alaska and south to Utah and California. It is peculiar owing to the black, shiny fruit it bears. The erect flowers have a long peduncle and are usually yellowish or reddish in color. This plant is useful only in mass effects.

As loniceras become old, a certain amount of dead wood will appear each year. This should be removed as soon as the plants start into growth. Large plants, which have grown too tall and are bare below, will stand hard pruning and will break away again vigorously. As, however, young plants are so inexpensive and grow so fast, it hardly pays to cut back old plants. Winter is a good time to do any pruning, which should consist in the removal of weak and sickly shoots and the heading back of any tall ones.

Among E. H. Wilson's new Chinese introductions are many loniceras. Some of these have ideal habits. Of these a number on trial without protection last winter stood 10 degrees below zero on several occasions without injury. From these we should get some desirable additions worthy to keep company with L. Morrowi or L. Tatarica.

COLUMBUS.

The Market.

Spring is here at last and everybody is busy on plant trade. The prospect is that this will be a record-breaking year in the line of bedding plants. The run on geraniums is heavier than ever before. There have been a great many more geraniums grown this season, but no doubt there will be a shortage long before the season is over. Salvias, coleus, cannas and all bedding plants find a ready sale. There also has been a good demand for pot roses for planting out, and a good number have been moved.

Cut flower trade has been quite heavy, especially for funeral work. Stock has been more plentiful. Carnations are coming in heavily at present and indications are we will be in much better shape here for Decoration day on carnations than we have ever been before. Roses are commencing to show the effects of the warm weather and quality is not what it should be. There will be few peonies here for Decoration day, as the growers complain about the frost nipping most of the buds; they are nearly all blighted. Outdoor flowers will be scarce, owing to the cold snap.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club held a meeting May 10, with a fairly good attendance. The report of the amusement committee on the series of dances was submitted and was satisfactory from a financial standpoint as well as amusement. Allen Gerling, of the Fifth Avenue Floral Co. store force, was elected to membership. The picnic question was brought up, and no doubt the event will take place about the middle of July.

Sherman Stephens reports a busy time at Greenlawn, with everybody working night and day.

E. Metzmaier reports heavy business and says it is hard to get stock out, as everybody wants plants at the same time.

The Franklin Park Floral Co. is busy with Hocking Valley bedding work.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. is cutting the heaviest crop of the season in carnations. The force also is extremely busy on some park work.

Mr. Courcey, of the Athens State Hospital, formerly of Columbus, was a visitor here May 21, looking up old friends. J. M.

Enid, Okla.—G. G. Tarr is now conducting the business which formerly bore the name of Kester & Tarr.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Considering that the weather all last week was rather unseasonable, business continues quite good. From every end we hear the report that there is something doing all the time, with an occasional rush. From a wholesaler's standpoint everything up to now was satisfactory. There was plenty of every kind of stock at all times, and the demand has been good. The retailers will experience a rather strenuous time, for the rather chilly weather has kept people from planting out their bedding stock up to this time, so it will mean to crowd a few weeks' work into the time allotted between now and Memorial day; it seems to be customary in this vicinity that on Memorial day everything should be in place. The wholesalers, too, find that the call for bedding plants is increasing more from day to day.

It is a rather difficult task to make a report at this time as to what the prospects are regarding receipts for the Memorial day trade. A good deal depends upon the weather, is the universal answer. Undoubtedly the long suit will be roses, peonies, lilies and carnations. The latter, which up to a short time ago were not equal to the demand, have been coming in heavier of late, and we are inclined to think that the supply will be satisfactory and, above all things, the quality will be the best ever seen in this market so close to the end of the season. In fact, the quality of all cut flowers at this time is of really good grade, which in turn will, considering the advance in prices, tend to help keep the buyers more good-natured. There will not, owing to the severe frost of April 23 and 24, be a great deal of outdoor stock to depend upon or to run competition against indoor grown cut flowers; consequently, the latter will have everything their own way.

Sweet peas, lily of the valley, snapdragons, daisies and a few gladioli will help out nicely. Orders are coming in thick and fast, with every mail, and everybody predicts that this year's Memorial day will put all previous years in the shade.

Various Notes.

At the regular monthly club meeting next week, Thursday, June 2, the timely topic of "How to Regulate the Prices of Spring Stock," will come up for discussion. Arthur Leidiger consented at the last meeting to open the discussion.

James Matthewson, of Sheboygan, Wis., called on the trade last week to select a supply of palms, ferns and other pot plants.

Martin Reukauf called on the trade for H. Bayersdorfer & Co., of Philadelphia. Other visitors were: P. A. Freeman, of Aurora, Ill.; Mrs. Lotz, of Watertown, Wis.; Otto Speidel, of Oconomowoc, Wis., and Mrs. C. B. Tremain, of Hartford, Wis. E. O.

NEW ORLEANS.

This is the time of the year to prepare for our most important crop of chrysanthemums, and the florists in this vicinity are planting what they call here the All Saints' day flower. The weather lately has been rather dry. After an abundance of longiflorum lilies and gladioli, few flowers are now to be had from the gardens.

At the last meeting of the Horticultural Society, R. Eichling called the attention of the members to the Iris Kæmpferi, a showy flower, having many good qualities and well worth cultivating. Paul Abele said that sweet peas in succession have given him an abundance of blooms. Sweet peas have been quite in demand for a long time. We cultivate them outside only.

A. Quinette and George Thomas have joined the Horticultural Society.

Nothing has been decided yet about our annual outing, which will soon take place, or the time of the election of officers for the next year.

Mrs. Joseph Muller is finishing a new greenhouse, to replace the old structure of ante-bellum time, heated with a brick flue and built by her late husband. It was entirely destroyed during the recent storm. The new one is up-to-date, with material received from the north.

R. Reinecke will make a trip to Europe next month.

The gardeners' picnic took place Sunday, May 15. The committee on arrangements consisted of F. Dermann, chairman; Valentine Zimmer, ex-officio; W. Orth, Edward Fechter, M. Schwartz, Joseph Faust, Frank Bertucci, John Pahr, D. Beche, George Roberts and John Bollinger. The wagons forming the parade were artistically decorated. A diminutive 4-wheeled wagon, drawn by the two smallest and finest mules ever seen and loaded with bags of seeds and gardeners' tools, attracted a good deal of attention. It was the advertisement of the J. Steckler Seed Co.

James Newsham has gone to Boston, stopping off at a few important points. J. Lagerbe, in charge of his place, reports a brisk business in orchids and general stock. M. M. L.

DENVER.

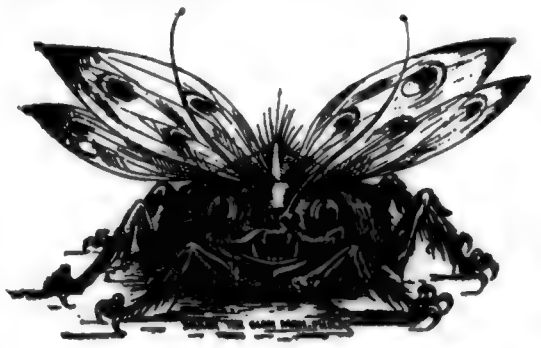
The Market.

The outlook for Memorial day is good. The only probable trouble will be a scarcity of flowers. Carnations appear to have shortened up considerably, although the quality is generally good. The price is as high as it frequently is at Christmas. While we all like to see high prices, yet Christmas prices around Memorial day are unusual, to say the least, especially after carnations have been selling around 50 cents to 75 cents a dozen, retail. The retailers will not be apt to force the sales too much, as they want the customers to come back again. The wholesale price, we understand, will be from $50 to $80 per thousand.

Roses are fairly plentiful and there is not likely to be a scarcity. Peonies are backward, on account of the weather. Locally the crop will be short, but the small flowers and plants, such as pansies, geraniums, heliotropes and marguerites, are all plentiful. On account of the high prices of cut flowers it is expected that large quantities of plants will be used for cemetery purposes. E. S. K.

ROCHESTER.

Rochester florists always plan for a good Memorial day business and seldom are disappointed. The demand for flowers this year bids fair to be larger than ever. Growers have been holding back their stock as far as possible, and indications point to a good supply of cut flowers and blooming plants. Prices run about as last year, with American Beauty roses in the lead at $25 for specials, wholesale. Bride and Maid, Killarney, Richmond and Maryland will bring from $3 to $5 a hundred. Carnations are quoted at from $2.50 to $5.



Saturday, May 21, roses were retailing for 50 cents a dozen, carnations 25 cents and 35 cents, and sweet peas at 15 cents a bunch. E. F. R.

Atlanta, Ga.—The Atlanta Floral Co. had a most effective window display recently in honor of the Music Festival and of Madame Fremstad in particular. Pictures of the great Swedish singer and of her birthplace, draped with Swedish and American flags, were conspicuous in the design. Madame Fremstad visited the store to view the decorations in her honor.

GARDEN WORK.

Leading retail florists are finding it decidedly to their advantage to do garden work in spring and autumn. A department of garden work not only makes a profit in itself, but it serves to draw trade and to hold it.

The firm of Randolph & McClements, Pittsburg, sends out a neatly printed little folder calling attention to its garden work department as follows:

The residential section of Pittsburg is noted for its fine houses and beautiful gardens.

Every year adds to the number of people who spend the summer in the city in their own lovely homes.

Naturally more and more attention is being given to making yards and porches attractive.

In doing this, it is wise economy to have our expert advice and assistance.

The proper setting of vines, porch boxes and flower beds and the planting of ornamental shrubbery and shade trees is something that we have been doing for years.

We know how it should be done, and, when you engage our services, you really save money because we do not experiment—we know.

We will be glad to submit estimates for any work of this kind.

'Phone us and our representative will call promptly.

Our prices are always reasonable.

ENCLOSED find check to cover bill for our adv. in The Review. It is a pleasure to deal with those who give results.—E. T. Flanagan & Sons, Belleville, Ill.

WE are pleased to advise that we have had the best results from our adv. in The Review, and have sold an immense lot of stock during the past winter and spring. We will certainly need your services again in the near future.—Shepard's Garden Carnation Co., Lowell, Mass.

MY advertisement in The Review has kept me in trouble right along. The first insertion brought so many orders that I was sold out in a short time. I had the advertisement omitted a week to catch up, then started again, and the first insertion once more cleaned me out, one mail bringing orders for over 3,300 and every day more orders. I was more than pleased; I was surprised; I did not expect anything like such prompt answers. I had orders from Georgia, North Carolina, Illinois, New York, Massachusetts and other states besides my own. I returned checks for at least $70 because I could not fill the orders brought by the advertisement.—E. Bushyager, Jeannette, Pa.

HARDY PLANT FOR BORDERS.

Arabis and Bocconias.

Among the many low growing plants suitable for clothing the edge of the border there is nothing of greater merit than the double form of Arabis alpina, which is a very old plant, but was lost for many years to cultivation. It grows and blooms freely from spring until fall, and the pure white flowers are produced on spikes similar to a stock.

Bocconias, or plume poppies, make extremely effective masses of glaucous coloring in the garden if ample space can be afforded them, but unless this is possible I do not advise planting them where they are likely to interfere with their weaker neighbors. B. microcarpa will grow eight feet high and produce ample foliage, which is uninjured by strong sunlight.

A Hardy Calceolaria.

We do not usually associate calceolarias with hardy plants, but the introduction of a new variety has enabled us to have at least one representative which will thrive in the open ground. This is a hybrid named Golden Queen, with large golden-yellow flowers, and it is valuable, among other reasons, for its persistent flowering.

Everyone admires the companulas, whether it be the miniature gems from the Alps, the beautiful harebell of Scotland or the giant pyramidalis, but I think the most desirable for the border are the persicifolia section. These flower early in the summer, but if the stems are removed as soon as the blossoms have faded they continue to produce new growths for some time. Moerheimi and Newry Giant are two extremely fine double white varieties, and marginata, which has a band of pale blue on the edge of the petals, is attractive. Alba fl. pl. and grandiflora should also be included.

Improved Chrysanthemum Maximum.

Many new varieties of Chrysanthemum maximum have recently been produced, and though mere size is not always a desideratum I think in this case it has improved this useful plant. They are capable of making good masses of white and the long, stiff flower stems render them serviceable for cut purposes. The Speaker and Mrs. Lothian Bell are the largest, and a variety named Robinsoni, with fimbriated florets, is one of the most pleasing.

For midsummer flowering, the herbaceous clematis are a useful and beautiful family, worthy of inclusion in all gardens. C. erecta makes a fine bush, four feet high, covered with a multitude of white blossoms, but the variety mandschurica, which is larger in all its parts, is even superior, and erecta flore pleno, with very double flowers, is of great merit. C. integrifolia Durandi has large blue flowers on robust stems, and C. coccinea, which is seen to the best advantage if grown on sticks in the same way as sweet peas, has scarlet and yellow flowers.

Everyone is probably familiar with the American snakeroot, Cimicifuga racemosa, and a beautiful plant it is, but those who need a more graceful species should plant C. simplex, which is, as yet, rare in gardens. It is smaller, generally, than its American congenor, but the flowers are much whiter and the foliage more elegant.

Some Good Delphiniums.

Delphiniums, in their multitudinous variety, hardly need any recommendation, but there are some varieties which may not have come under your notice. D. Belladonna is one of the few plants with sky-blue flowers, and though it will not withstand a severe winter, it should always be grown, even if one has to pot it up. It has the desirable quality of sending up new flower stems for a long period, and the beautiful coloring is appreciated by all. Several varieties are now obtainable, the best of them being Belladonna grandiflora, which is larger generally than the type; B. semi-plena, sky-blue flushed lavender, and Moerheimi, an excellent white form. For many years nurserymen have been endeavoring to evolve a pure white, tall-growing delphinium, and they have at last succeeded in producing a variety appropriately named Nulli Secundus, which is certainly second to none, being very robust and of the finest white.

Two excellent plants, especially for dry positions, are Euphorbia polychroma and E. corollata, the latter a North American species seldom seen in cultivation. E. polychroma forms a symmetrical bush, completely covered with conspicuous yellow bracts, and E. corollata bears white flowers in the greatest profusion.

Greenhouse Heating.

If "C," at Colorado Springs, will send his full name, The Review will, with pleasure, reply to his heating query. Names are necessary, though not for publication.

This is the time to plan the changes to be made in your heating apparatus for next season. Figure it out now, before the fires go out; then you will be ready to go ahead during the summer. The Review will be glad to answer in this column all inquiries regarding heating. Give all the details of your problem and sign full name and address, though the latter will not be used.

ILLINOIS COAL SITUATION.

With sixty days of idleness and with the prospect of a prolonged strike, the coal situation in Illinois has reached a serious point. The mountains of coal which were on hand before the strike are diminishing rapidly. Seventy-five thousand miners have been out of work two months. The strike fund is said to be about $750,000, or $10 a man. This is not a strong equipment for a prolonged strike, notwithstanding the ten per cent assessment of men who are employed. President Moorehead of the operators predicts that the strike will be of short duration, but President Walker of the miners says they will be out "until the snow flies."

FIVE IOWA HOUSES.

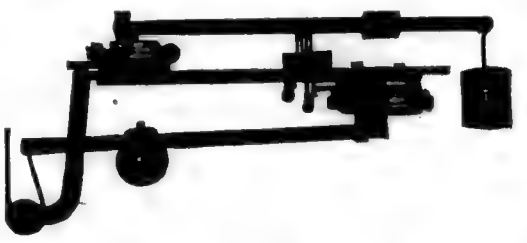
I have a range of five houses, each 24x63 feet, even-span, running north and south. There is a lean-to, 8x63, on the east side and an exposed concrete wall on the west, with one row of 20-inch glass below the gutter. The south end is concrete, with a glass gable, while the north is protected to the gutters and part of the gables are protected by closed buildings. The east side has a bank of earth to the gutter. The houses measure six feet to the gutter plates and fourteen feet to the ridge. I wish to use 2-inch pipe, for hot water, placing both flow and returns under the benches, of which there are three in each house and two in the lean-to, with 1¼-inch pipe. I wish to install another boiler, as the one on hand is not large enough since building recent additions. I prefer hot water heating, and should be pleased to have advice as to the amount of piping and size of boiler to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees in zero weather.

O. B. S.

To heat the houses that are 24x63 feet, it will be well to use five 2-inch flows and ten 2-inch returns, except in the west house, in which an extra return will be desirable. This will provide two returns under each bench and upon each wall, with one flow for each of the coils. In the lean-to, use two 2-inch flows and five 1¼-inch returns.

To supply steam for this amount of radiation, a boiler rated for 4,000 square feet will be desirable.

PIPING IN LOUISIANA.



I wrote you some time ago that I intended building a greenhouse and growing a general assortment of plants for local trade. Since then I have been in correspondence with one or two firms that furnish materials, and it seems to me that their prices might be a little more reasonable if they fully appreciated the fact that the outside temperature here seldom if ever goes below 20 degrees.

I will start with one house, 20x40, and some hotbeds. By allowing for 2½-foot walks I will have fifteen feet for bench space. How many and what size of pipes will be required for heating with hot water? What capacity of boiler will be needed? Would the old-time flues and pipes be practical, and if so, where could I obtain information regarding them? Would natural gas, used for heating the water, be injurious to the plants? L. A. H.

Where the minimum temperature is 20 degrees, a comparatively small

A Kitts Improved Hydraulic Damper Regulator.

Florist Peter Crowe, Rose Place, Utica, N. Y., voluntarily writes:—
"I am very much pleased to let you know that the Damper Regulator I bought from you last fall is by far the best apparatus for greenhouse purposes. I had my book-keeper compare my coal bill of last with that of this year and I find a saving of one quarter the amount of this year's coal over last year's; also the past winter was a great deal colder and longer than the winter before.
"There is another very good feature about the Damper Regulator, as it keeps a uniform heat in all the houses at all times by putting on and shutting off pipes. And I find that my Roses and Ferns did far better this winter than any winter so far, as the temperature was so uniform at all times.
"My reason for writing you is to let you know, and also to thank you for bringing my attention to the Regulator, and I assure you I cannot speak too highly of this machine."

amount of radiation will be required, and for a house 20x40 feet, without glass in the side walls, from 200 to 300 square feet of radiation will suffice, according to the temperature desired. By putting in two 2-inch flow pipes and six 2-inch returns, it will be possible to obtain a temperature of 60 degrees, and by adding one or two more returns higher temperatures can be obtained if desired.

To heat the house 20x40 feet, a heater rated for 250 to 300 square feet of radiation will suffice, but if other houses will be added soon the boiler should be of sufficient capacity to take care of the increased area.

While flues could be used, they would not be as satisfactory as hot water. Natural gas makes an excellent fuel for hot water heating, but could not be used with hot air flues. Even with hot water, the boiler room should be cut off from the greenhouse proper.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

There is a sufficiency of stock to meet all demands; in fact, the last few days the stock tended to accumulate. The receipts in general brought only fair prices; carnations and valley alone held a steady price. The volume of business was, nevertheless, large and the gross receipts satisfying.

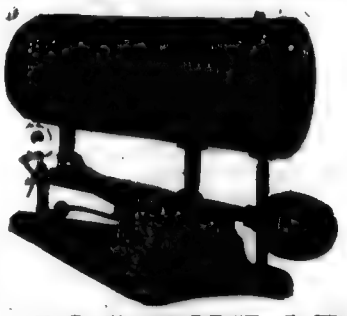
In roses, Beauties are meeting with a fair request. The two Killarneys and Kaiserin find ready purchasers. Bride and Maid, especially the latter, are a second choice.

A large supply of carnations of good quality has been on hand. They sold, but were not eagerly picked up by the buyers. White carnations are an exception. Compared to the numbers of the other colors offered they were relatively scarce and met a good request.

Peonies from many local growers are offered in every wholesale house. Their quality is good. Plenty of lilies, double white narcissi, jasmine and sweet peas are offered. Valley and cattleyas meet with a ready sale. The quality of the new southern ferns is exceptional and many are shipped. The supply of other greens is easily sufficient.

All indications point to a good business on Memorial day. Many large orders from local and out-of-town buyers have been booked. The wholesalers expect plenty of stock of all kinds to meet the demand.

Various Notes.



C. E. Critchell is receiving large quantities of double white narcissi. These flowers are splendid keepers. He is also offering valley from George & Allan's, and cattleyas, which he expects throughout June. Mr. Critchell says he expects to have plenty of stock to fill his orders for Memorial day.

William Murphy is receiving shipments of splendid giganteum lilies from A. S. Burns, of Spring Valley, N. Y. The good condition of the blooms upon arrival commends especially the consignor's careful packing. Mr. Murphy also is handling exceptionally large lots of good carnations and sweet peas.

Peter Weiland, quite well again, is back at the greenhouses after his sojourn at Hot Springs. Weiland & Olinger are cutting excellent Kaiserin and White Killarney.

On Saturday, May 22, there was offered at the flower market the finest lot of geraniums in both quantity and quality that was ever put on sale there. The other bedding stock was also above the average. But, unfortunately, owing to the inclement weather the demand was not what was expected, and a large amount of stock was left over.

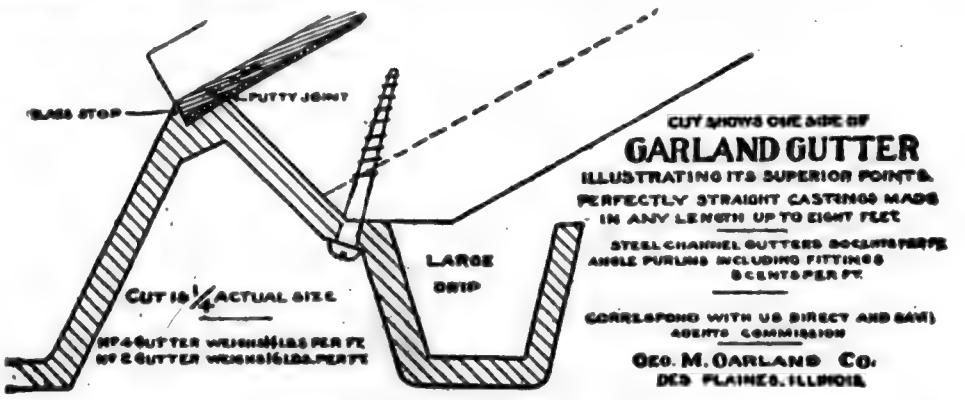
NEW BEDFORD, MASS.



Trade was good during the last week. Carnations are in good demand, with the supply none too plentiful. They retail at 50 cents and 60 cents per dozen. Roses of good variety retail at $1.50 per dozen; sweet peas at $1 per hundred blooms; callas and Easter lilies at $2 per dozen; snapdragons at 75 cents and $1 per dozen. Candytuft and other fine flowers help out greatly. Funeral work has been good lately. Bulbous stock is getting scarce. Gladioli are now coming in. These are fine and $1 per dozen is the general price. Bedding plants, such as pansies, daisies, forget-me-nots, geraniums, verbenas, etc., are now in great demand for cemetery work. There is a good call for nice ferns in pots, which seem to be scarce. The weather of late has been cloudy, but it looks as if the ten weeks' stocks will be in on time for Memorial day. Lilac will be pretty far gone. We have had some heavy rains of late and everything outdoors is looking nice and green. Bedding out has commenced in earnest. Nearly all the young carnation stock in this section has been planted out in the fields.

E. H. Chamberlain was in Boston last week, looking up stock. He bought some fine hydrangeas in pots.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

The Market.

The weather conditions do not seem to favor the cut flower business to any great extent. There are quantities of all kinds of flowers coming in and the demand does not seem to keep up with the supply.

The plantsmen, however, are in the midst of the rush. Stock of all kinds is good and the prices are fair; there are no more fancy prices for bedding stock in this market. For some reason there seems to be more experienced help to be had than is usually the case at this season, and this will help those who are, as a rule, overcrowded with work and will enable them to finish their planting before Memorial day.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The cut flower market has been quiet since last report. There was a change in the last two days of the week to real summer weather. On Saturday, May 21, the temperature rose to 89 degrees, which was more seasonable here than the kind of weather we have been having for the last few weeks. The effect on cut flowers is marked, the quantity being largely increased and the quality decidedly lowered.

Killarney is holding up well, being easily the best pink rose on the market today. Its chief drawback is the shortness of the stems on most of the flowers. Brides and Maids are still in heavy supply and are moving slowly. Carnations have suffered more than roses. The fancy stock is far from plentiful, but the cheaper grades can be had for a song. Quite a number of the growers have cleaned their houses out.

Inside sweet peas are extremely poor. The arrival of some outdoor stock is welcomed with joy. Peonies of superb quality are increasing in number, a moderate supply of southern stock being quite overshadowed by the home-grown product. All the colors can now be had and finer stock would be hard to find. So far the supply has not been ahead of the demand, but any day may cause a change in the situation. Dagger ferns are plentiful, with the prices irregular.

Decoration day prospects are quite promising for almost any kind of cut flowers, and as potted plants are being used extensively, it looks as though we will have a heavy demand.

Various Notes.

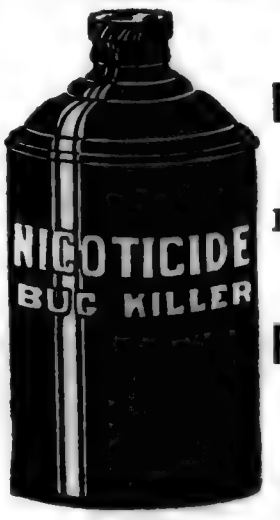
Fergus Falls, Minn.—August Anderson, of Mehlin's Greenhouses, has invented a machine which will wash pots while the plants are growing in them.

West De Pere, Wis.—A. Van Gemert has found it necessary to seek other quarters, owing to increasing business and lack of space at his present location. He will therefore remove to Grant street, between Third and Fourth streets. The buildings which he will occupy will be thoroughly remodeled and renovated.

Campbell's Patent Sulphur Vaporizer



Best remedy extant for destroying Rose, Vine, Carnation and all other mildews and diseases of plants in greenhouses; also kills Red Spider.

Extract from paper read by John H. Dunlop before a convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association: "Campbell's Sulphur Vaporizer is an English patent and a trifle expensive, but very effective, and eliminates almost all of the danger of ignition. We are using eight of them at present with excellent results."

HERE IS WHAT THE MAN WHO HAS ONE SAYS

Here is a letter written by Mr. Alfred Holm, Corsicana, Texas, that will interest you, copy of which was forwarded to us by courtesy.

"The Lord & Burnham Company Semi-Iron Greenhouse Structure which I purchased in 1908 is one of the best, if not the best, in Texas. Has many new features, being very light in material, which prevents shadows, at the same time very strong and durable.

"Splendid glass, which has stood pretty good size hails without breaking.

"Splendid cypress material, good ventilating apparatus, simple and strong, in short, everything A No. 1.

"The Burnham Sectional Boilers are undoubtedly the best on the market in both heating and economy. Too much cannot be said towards recommending them. By all means buy a Burnham Sectional Heater."

The Permanent Indestructible Concrete Bench

There is no longer a doubt that the Wilson-Hoyt Co. Cement Bench is the only one to use, and the more you realize that you will have to do something about the benches very soon, and your own good judgment tells you that you should never build wood benches again, for the concrete ones can be built as cheaply, and when once installed that ends the expense.

We furnish you with our complete moulds, enough for one or two benches the entire length of your house, with the steel reinforcements already cut, bent and ready to place, cheaper than you can buy material for a good wooden bench.

To the following growers who are now using "Wilson-Hoyt" benches we are able to refer you:

THE GREENHOUSE QUESTION IS AN IMPORTANT ONE

You can't possibly get away from the fact that it is absolutely essential to best results in growing—the best grower in the world could not make a hotbed answer as a greenhouse and get a first-class crop. It is true that the greenhouse is not as important as a good grower, but it is necessary to have both of them first-class if you expect to make a profit. The question as to the style of house, the kind of materials to be used, the location, etc., are questions that must be settled by every man that builds a greenhouse. If you are puzzled on anything relating to greenhouse construction we will be glad to help you in any way we can. Why not get one of our catalogues? ON PEONIES?

If you did, you won, for all stock cleaned up at about double the price we booked your advance order at.

When we announced on this page of The Review of May 12, that, up to May 21, we would accept, and agree to fill, orders for Peonies for Decoration Day, good average stock at 5 cents, a good many buyers took advantage of the offer.

We are glad you won. We intended you should. We aimed to show the buyers' advantage in placing advance orders—for without advance orders, many and large, we never could merchandise, at fair average prices, the enormous quantities of Peonies we handle every Decoration Day.

We are glad you won. Will you be with us next Decoration Day? Early?

GREAT BOSTON ORCHID SHOW

THE FIRST IN AMERICA.

One of the Largest Ever Held.

The great exhibition of orchids under the auspices of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Boston, looked forward to for about two years, has now gone over into history and will live long as a most remarkable display of those aristocrats of the floral kingdom. Nothing like it has ever been seen in America and few orchid displays in the world have approached it in magnitude. Such adjectives as "bewildering," "overwhelming" and "immense" were commonly heard, even from those who are orchid growers and fanciers. The exhibition set a high mark, one which will be difficult to even approximate for years to come.

The end of May, selected as the most suitable date to accommodate the largest exhibitors, is a little late in the season to draw crowds such as can be had at a winter or spring show, and in the event of such a show being held again, as is not improbable, the early part of the month might advantageously be selected. Still, from the number of genera and species on exhibition, the end of May proved a popular date, although coming so near Memorial day made it difficult for many in the trade to attend it.

John K. M. L. Farquhar, chairman of the prizes and exhibitions committee, and Robert Cameron, manager of the exhibition, put in an immense amount of hard work and deserve hearty commendation for the admirable manner in which everything was arranged. The resources of Horticultural hall were taxed to accommodate all the exhibits, even though the number of exhibitors was not large, and some had to be staged in the basement.

The Thousand-Dollar Class.

Of course the keenest interest attached to the competition for the group covering 400 square feet of space. For this there were five entries, but one withdrew, leaving four competitors, all of whom put up superb groups. The one with which the Julius Roehrs Co. won the blue ribbon of the show, the $1,000 cash prize and a gold medal, was one of the most artistic and impressive orchid exhibits ever staged. A huge Dicksonia in the center was clothed with magnificent odontoglossums of such varieties as O. crispum, Pescatorei, album, eximium, Ossaltonii, Wilckeanum, brilliantissima, aspersum and others. On the walls, running up to a height of fifteen feet, were quantities of other odontoglossums, Phalænopsis amabilis, P. Rimestadtiana, Dendrobium thyrsiflorum and other graceful varieties. Over the delightfully undulating surface of the group the orchids were largely arranged in groups, with choice or handsome specimens given well elevated positions.

Among the wealth of choice and beautiful subjects noted were: Odontiodas Vuylstekiæ, Bradshawiæ and luditis, Brasso-Cattleyas Queen Alexandra and Maroni, beautiful batches of the pure white dendrobiums Dearie and nobile virginalis, Cypripediums Rossetti, Maudiæ, callosum Sandera, caudatum and Lawrenceanum Hyeanum, a handsome lot of Oncidium ampliatum majus, several plants of the chaste pure white cattleya, Dusseldorfiæ Undine, C. Mossiæ Reineckiana, C. Mendellii alba, C. intermedia alba, the pure white C. Mossiæ Gravesiana, C. Mossiæ Mrs. Julius Roehrs, Lælio-Cattleyas Fascinator and luminosa, numerous miltonias, excellent trichopilias and other varieties embracing about every genus flowering at this season. Cattleyas, such as gigas, Mossiæ, Mendellii and Gaskelliana, were shown in large numbers, but the odontoglossums were the commanding feature of this wonderful group. A separate gold medal was awarded to the interesting group of brasso-cattleyas.

Charles G. Roebling, Trenton, N. J., James Goodier gardener, put up an entirely different group in the lecture hall, of nearly square formation, with pagoda-like entrances on each side, the arches being covered with drooping orchids, asparagus, etc., and the benches sloping on the outside to the ground. It contained an immense assortment of orchids, including many rare and valuable varieties. Lager & Hurrell, who secured third prize, had an artistic group containing thirty-one genera and over 200 varieties. It gave a good representation of a South American jungle, with a charming ravine with waterfall effects. The most eagerly scanned and valuable plant in the entire show, Cattleya gigas alba, carrying four of its large, pure white flowers, was the gem of this group. Some other good things noted were Epi-Cattleya Nebo, Lælio-Cattleya G. S. Ball, Vanda Amesiana, Miltonia Bleuana, Cattleya Mossiæ Reineckiana and C. intermedia alba, Miltonia flavescens, splendid specimens of Dendrobium thyrsiflorum, Phalænopsis Rimestadtiana and many other good things.

W. A. Manda, by means of large mirrors at the back of his group and another to produce water effect, put up a group which, while lacking in the variety of the other groups, showed great taste and was more satisfying in many ways than any other group in the hall. The tree trunks clothed with cattleyas were excellent. In this way they looked vastly better than arranged in almost dead-level groups. He had a fine lot of Odontoglossum citrosmum and many unique cypripediums, lælias, etc. Mr. Manda was well to the front in many other orchid classes.

Other Notable Orchid Exhibits.

In the 150-square-feet group, from which commercial growers were excluded, the groups put up by E. B. Dane, Donald McKenzie gardener, and Walter Hunnewell, T. D. Hatfield gardener, contained a wealth of choice varieties, which to properly display them needed double the space. Mr. Hunnewell's miltonias were fine.

Joseph A. Manda's first prize group of cut orchids, arranged on a bed of green moss, with numerous stands of bromeliaceous plants dotted with flowers, well raised to relieve any flatness, was tastefully arranged. It contained many interesting botanical orchids, in addition to a full representation of the larger and showier species. W. A. Manda's second-prize group was also full of interest.

J. T. Butterworth's specimen cattleyas, Reineckiana and Mossiæ Mrs. J. T. Butterworth, attracted much attention, as did his beautifully grown miltonias. The best specimen carried fifteen spikes of immense flowers. Mr. Butterworth also had a large group of specimen cattleyas, odontoglossums, miltonias, oncidiums, etc., not in competition. Mrs. J. L. Gardner had a similar group of excellent plants, awarded a special bronze medal and gratuity.

The huge specimen of Cattleya Mossiæ, carrying 250 flowers, from the Julius Roehrs Co., carried off the gold medal for the finest specimen in the exhibition.

George Melvin's silver medal plant of Brassia verrucosa, with thirty strong spikes, was one of the most admired plants in the hall.

The mammoth Oncidium Sphacelatum from Mrs. B. B. Tuttle, M. J. Pope gardener, and Cypripedium Lawrenceanum from Dr. C. G. Weld, W. C. Rust gardener, with forty flowers, were also noteworthy.

The George L. Freeman Co., Fall River, had a large display of cut orchids and a table containing an interesting assortment of newly imported orchids, in which they are now doing a big business.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co., San Francisco, sent some splendid newly imported plants of Phalænopsis Schilleriana and amabilis, orchids in which they specialize.

C. W. Brownell & Co., Walden, N. Y., received a certificate of merit for their fine grades of osmunda fiber for potting purposes.

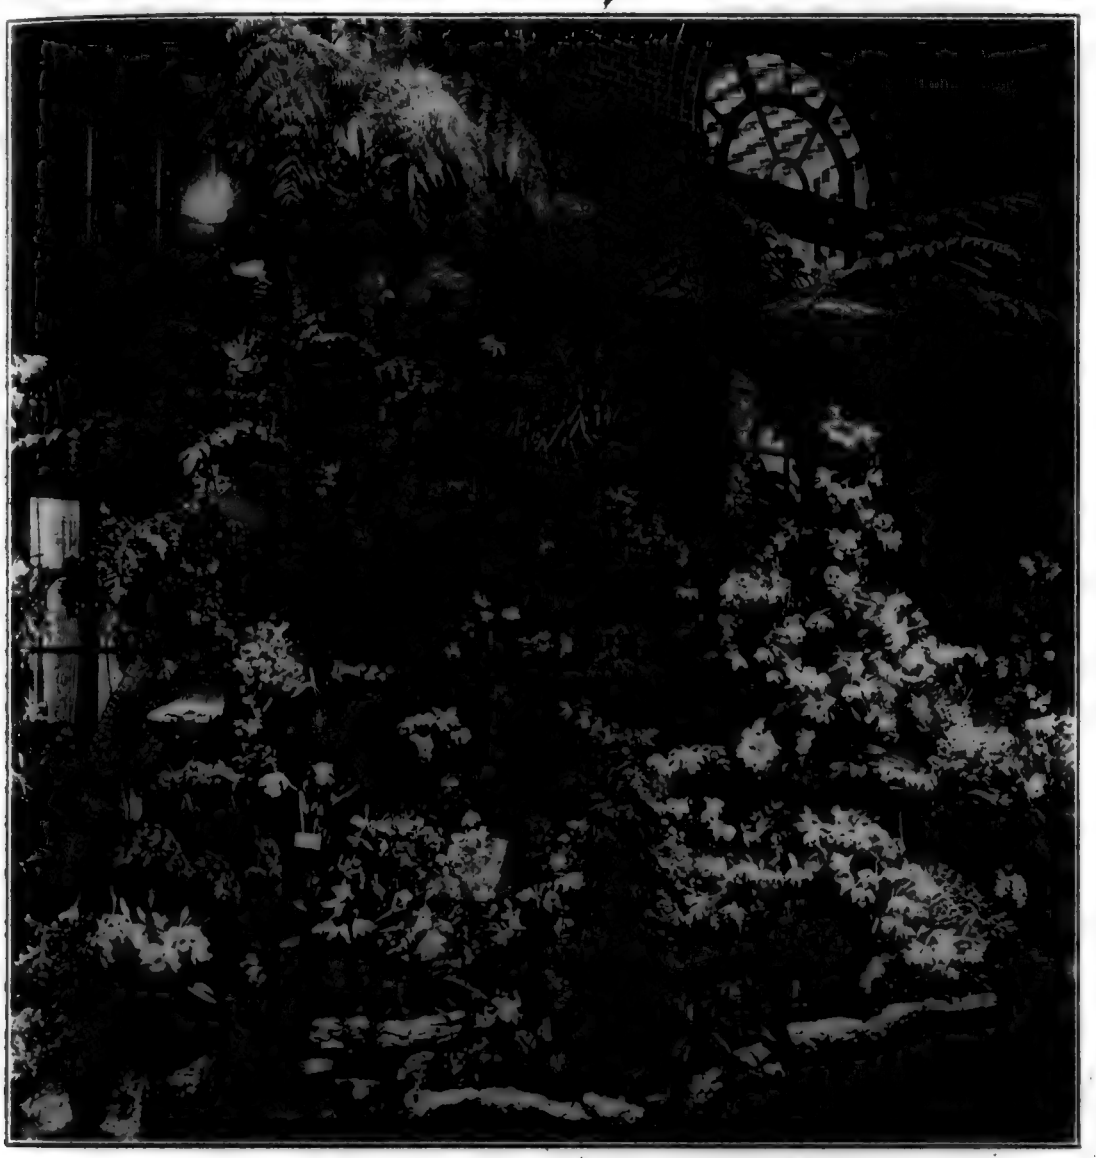
Miscellaneous Exhibits.

While orchids were the star feature of the show, there were many other exhibits of great interest. The Julius Roehrs Co. captured the gold medal and $100 for the best group of flowering and foliage stove and greenhouse plants. Included were some fine anthuriums. The silver medal and $50 went to Edward MacMulkin. This exhibit contained some fine cattleyas, including a pure white C. Mossiæ. E. A. Clark, William A. Riggs gardener, also contributed an excellent group.

R. & J. Farquhar had an extensive group of E. H. Wilson's newly introduced Chinese plants, which received a gold medal. They also had a display of new seedling iris, Pallida Dalmatica x Kæmpferi, Calendula Oriole, single pink zonal pelargonium Mrs. Pfaff awarded honorable mention, and a new bedding begonia of the same color as Gloire de Lorraine, named Pink Beauty, awarded a first-class certificate. Included in the exhibit were flowering plants of the new lilies, Sutchuense and myriophyllum.

Mrs. H. F. Durant, Thomas Watt gardener, had excellent Statice Holfordi. Walter Hunnewell, for a grand group of specimen plants of Fuchsia Black Prince, received a silver medal; as did Gen. S. M. Weld, Thomas Coles gardener, for specimen rhododendrons in tubs. Prof. C. S. Sargent, Charles Sander gardener, had numerous specimen azaleas with pots sunk, arranged in beds, which were sodded over, arranged down the center of the main hall. He received a silver medal for a beautiful collection of Moutan peonies, many of which were seedlings. Thomas Meehan & Sons had a table of Japanese maples and peonies, and the Henry A Dreer Co. two splendid tables of hybrid tea roses in large variety.

Howard Gould, Harry Turner gardener, had three fine vases of carnations of the English malmaison type. William Sim had a grand collection of sweet peas, including among the Spencer types, Asta Ohn, Countess Spencer, Apple Blossom, Frank Dolby, Gladys Unwin and King Edward. Other sorts included Miss Willmott, Blanche Ferry and St. George. Norris F. Comley also showed a fine collection of sweet peas. M. A. Patten had two fine vases of carnations, and the Waban Conservatories for a superb vase of White Killarney roses received a cultural certificate and special premium of $25. Thomas Roland received a silver medal for a finely grown group of hydrangeas, mostly new varieties from Japan. One, a striking new pink variety, was keenly scrutinized and should prove a valuable addition.



W. A. Manda received a gold medal for the best new coniferous plant, likely to prove hardy in Massachusetts, with an African juniperus. In this class Cedrus Libani grown from seed, collected by Prof. Sargent in the coldest part of Asia Minor, and which has proved hardy for some years near Boston, was entered. Robert Cameron, from the Harvard Botanical Gardens, in spite of his other arduous duties, found time to arrange a magnificent group of fine foliage plants, which well merited the gold medal bestowed. All the plants bore marks of high culture.

Nephrolepis Milleri, from Mount Desert Nurseries, Bar Harbor, Me., resembling a dwarf Whitmani, and with fronds closely resembling Todea superba, received a first-class certificate. Judging by the way orders were being booked for fall delivery, this new variety has already caught on. Duncan Finlayson received a silver medal for a beautiful group of Campanula Medium and rhododendrons. A group of the new croton, Fred Sander, from the Julius Roehrs Co., received honorable mention.

A superb lot of Cocos Weddelliana in small tubs, 250 in number, from the Group of Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., Entered for the Thousand-dollar Prize at Boston.

Group of W. A. Manda, Entered in the Thousand-dollar Class at Boston.

Establishment Horticole le Lyon, of Ghent, Belgium, received a silver medal and it is doubtful if any finer lot ever was seen in America. This firm's productions have secured gold and silver medals in many of the leading European cities.

W. W. Rawson & Co. had a beautiful arrangement of Parrot, Darwin and Rembrandt tulips in rustic baskets and stands on a background of dark velvet, which charmed the ladies particularly.

Dr. C. G. Weld showed some fine specimen azaleas. Prof. C. S. Sargent was awarded a gold medal for his collection of specimen azaleas. Thomas Roland was awarded a gold medal for new Japanese hydrangeas, in addition to a silver medal for group of them. William Sim received a silver medal for his sweet peas, and Norris F. Comley received a bronze medal for his collection of sweet peas. R. & J. Farquhar & Co. were awarded honorable mention for their new bedding pelargonium, Ostergruss.

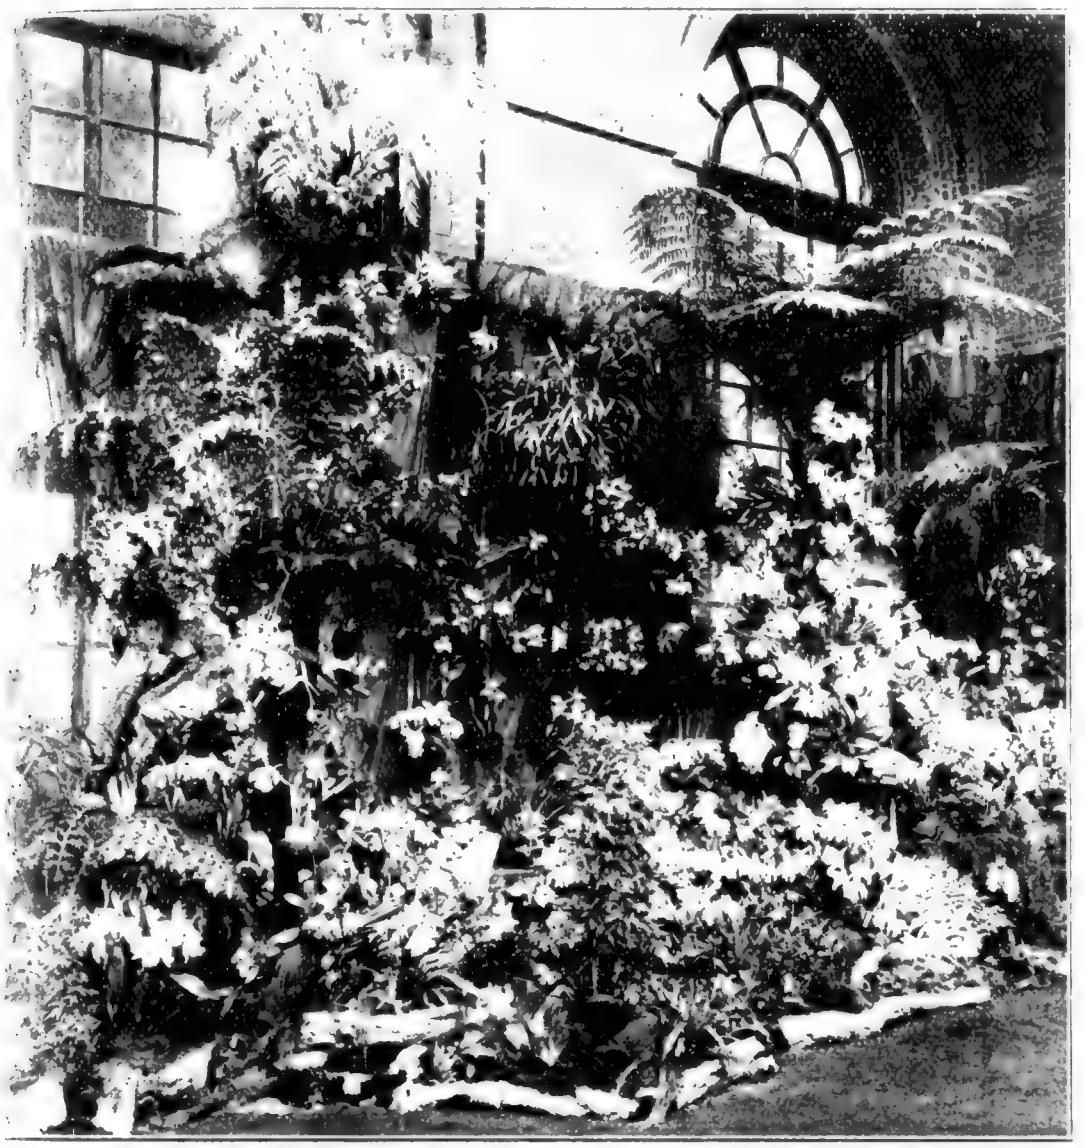
Miscellaneous Exhibits.

While orchids were the star feature of the show, there were many other exhibits of great interest. The Julius Roehrs Co. captured the gold medal and $100 for the best group of flowering and foliage stove and greenhouse plants. Included were some fine anthuriums. The silver medal and $50 went to Edward MacMullen. This exhibit contained some fine cattleyas, including a pure white C. Mossiae. E. A. Clark, William A. Riggs gardener, also contributed an excellent group.

R. & J. Farquhar had an extensive group of E. H. Wilson's newly introduced Chinese plants, which received a gold medal. They also had a display of new seedling iris, Pallida Dalmatica x Ikaempferi, Calendula Oriole, single pink zonal pelargonium Mrs. Pfaff awarded honorable mention, and a new bedding begonia of the same color as Gloire de Lorraine, named Pink Beauty, awarded a first class certificate. Included in the exhibit were flowering plants of the new lilies, Sutchuense and nepalense and myriophyllum.

Mrs. H. F. Durant, Thomas Watt gardener, had excellent Statice Holfordi. Walter Hunnewell, for a grand group of specimen plants of Fuchsia Black Prince, received a silver medal, as did Gen. S. M. Weld, Thomas Coles gardener, for specimen rhododendrons in tubs. Prof. C. S. Sargent, Charles Sander gardener, had numerous specimen azaleas with pots sunk, arranged in beds, which were sodded over, arranged down the center of the main hall. He received a silver medal for a beautiful collection of Mougne peonies, many of which were seedlings. Thomas Meehan & Sons had a table of Japanese maples and peonies, and the Henry Dreer Co. two splendid tables of hybrid tea roses in large variety.

Howard Gould, Harry Turner gardener, had three fine vases of carnations of the English malmaison type. William Sim had a grand collection of sweet peas, including among the Spencer types, Asta Ohn, Countess Spencer, Apple Blossom, Frank Dolby, Gladys Unwin and King Edward. Other sorts included Miss Willmott, Blanche Ferry and St. George. Norris F. Comley also showed a fine collection of sweet peas. M. A. Patten had two fine vases of carnations, and the Waban Conservatories for a superb vase of White Killarney roses received a cultural certificate and a special premium of $25. Thomas Roland received a silver medal for a fine grown group of hydrangeas, mostly new varieties from Japan. One, a striking new pink variety, was keenly scrutinized and should prove a valuable addition.



W. A. Manda received a gold medal for the best new coniferous plant, likely to prove hardy in Massachusetts with an African juniperus. In the class Cedrus Libani grown from seed collected by Prof. Sargent in the cedar forest part of Asia Minor, and which has proved hardy for some years near Boston, was entered. Robert Cameron, from the Harvard Botanical Garden, in spite of his other arduous duties found time to arrange a magnificent group of fine foliage plants, which well merited the gold medal bestowed. All the plants bore marks of high culture.

Nephrolepis Millerii, from Mount Desert Nurseries, Bar Harbor, Me., resembling a dwarf Whitmani, and with fronds closely resembling Todea superba, received a first class certificate. Judging by the way orders were being booked for fall delivery, this new variety has already caught on. Duncan Finlayson received a silver medal for a beautiful group of Campanula Medium and rhododendrons. A group of the new croton, Fred Sander, from the Julius Roehrs Co., received honorable mention.

A superb lot of Cocos Weddelliana in small tubs, 250 in number, from the AMERICAN GLADIOLUS SOCIETY.

Another society devoted to the interests of a special flower was auspiciously launched at Boston May 27, when some twenty gladiolus enthusiasts met pursuant to a call sent out by Maurice Fuld, manager of W. W. Rawson & Co.

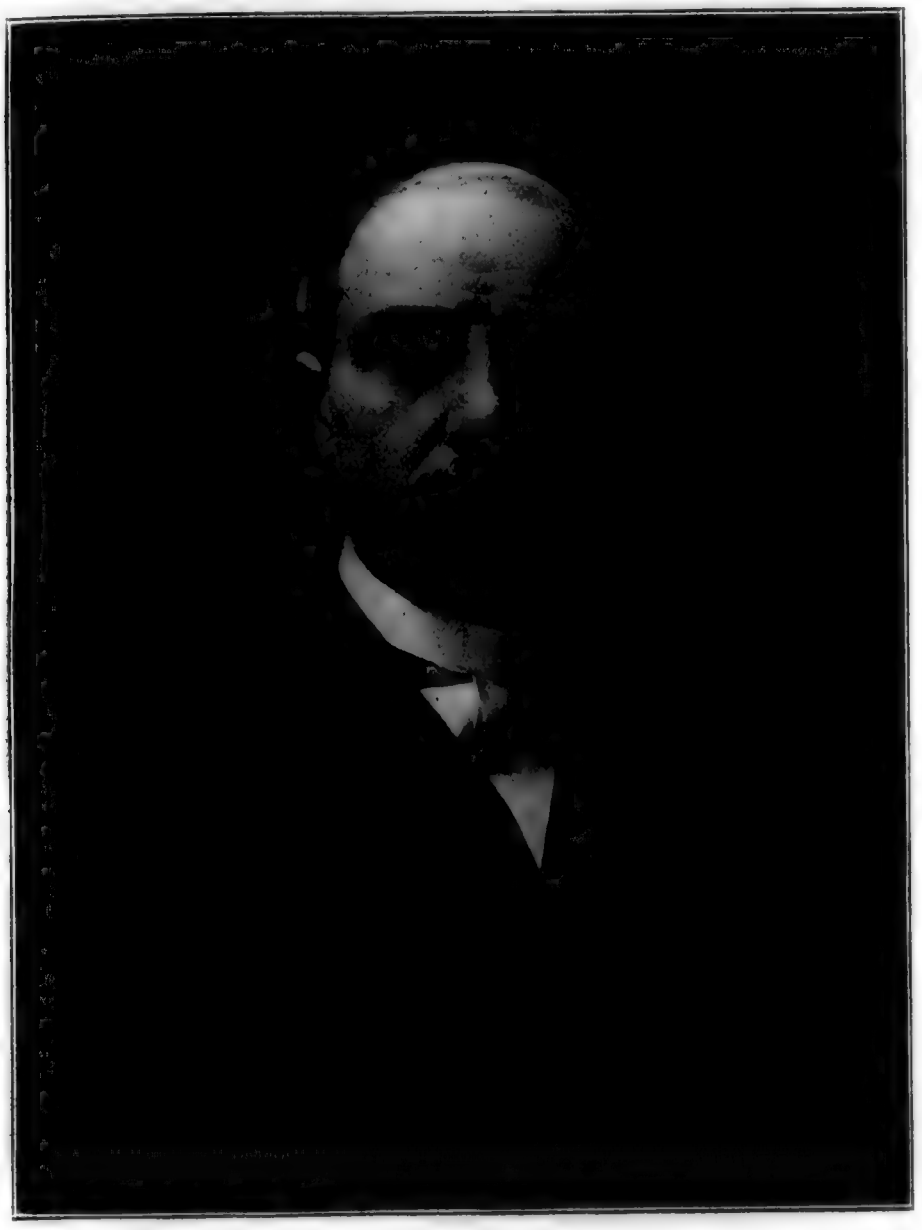
The meeting was held at Horticultural hall, advantage being taken of the presence of a large number of trade visitors at Boston for the big orchid show then in progress. There being only one view as to the desirability of organization, the work was put through with vim. A constitution and by-laws was presented and adopted. The names of seventy-five charter members were enrolled. The following officers were elected:

President—I. S. Hendrickson, Floral Park, N. Y.

Vice-president—E. H. Cushman, Sylvania, O.

Treasurer—Maurice Fuld, Boston, Mass.

Corresponding secretary—L. Merton Gage, Orange, Mass.



Financial secretary—H. Youell, Syracuse, N. Y.

Executive committee—Arthur T. Boddington, New York city; Arthur Kirby, New York city; J. K. Alexander, East Bridgewater, Mass.

Committee on nomenclature—Arthur Cowee, Berlin, N. Y.; Prof. L. B. Judson, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.; Leonard Joerg, Floral Park, N. Y.

Prof. George E. Stone, of Amherst, who was the temporary chairman, gave an interesting talk on floriculture and its relation to the farm and home. Maurice Fuld, who had called the meeting to order, later read a paper, prepared by H. Youell, of Syracuse, N. Y., giving the history of some of the early varieties of Gandavensis hybrids, which was given a vote of thanks. The Society of American Florists tendered an invitation to the American Gladiolus Society to hold its first annual exhibition at Rochester, N. Y., in August, in connection with the annual convention of the S. A. F. The invitation was accepted.

The department of horticulture of Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., through Prof. L. B. Judson, tendered the use of its trial grounds and the coöperation of its members in testing the varieties of gladioli along the lines of the tests now in progress, coöperating with the American Peony Society and the National Sweet Pea Society. The offer was accepted with hearty appreciation. Among those who participated in the spirited discussions incident to the work of organization were: Arthur Cowee, Berlin, N. Y.; I. S. Hendrickson, Floral Park, N. Y.; Arthur T. Boddington, New York, N. Y.; Carl Cropp, Chicago, Ill.; Maurice Fuld, Boston, Mass.; J. K. Alexander, East Bridgewater, Mass.; Robert Cameron, Harvard Botanic Gardens; Eugene Fisher, Jamaica Plain, Mass.; L. Merton Gage, Orange, Mass.; Montague Chamberlain, Boston, Mass.; Prof. L. B. Judson, Ithaca, N. Y., and others.

John K. M. L. Farquhar, Chairman Orchid Show Committee.

MEMORIAL DAY.

The demand for flowers never has been so strong on Memorial day as it was in the present year. In the central west a portion of the increased demand may be credited to the shortage of outdoor flowers as a result of the April frosts, but in the east the increase was almost equally great and there had been no frosts to destroy outdoor flowers. The fact is that Memorial day has become the greatest flower day of the year. So far as quantity of stock goes, it eclipses Easter or Christmas, though naturally prices are lower than at other special flower dates.

ROBERT CAMERON.

Robert Cameron, as his name would indicate, is a Scotchman by birth, being a native of Invernesshire, that county where the most perfect English is supposed to be spoken. He early manifested a desire for gardening and after some training in Scotland went to Kew Gardens, London, where he remained several years, getting an excellent botanical and practical insight into floriculture, under the best teachers in that world-famous training school. He came to the United States twenty-four years ago, finding employment on the once famous Payson estate, in Watertown, later going to the Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, and working under Alexander Montgomery for two years. In 1889, on the retirement of W. A. Manda to join the firm of Pitcher & Manda, he was called to take charge of the Harvard Botanic Gardens, and it is safe to say that these gardens were never more satisfactorily cared for than during the twenty-one years of Mr. Cam-

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

The National Flower Show Committee of the Society of American Florists held a meeting at Horticultural hall, Boston, May 25, at which F. R. Pierson, president of the society and chairman of the committee, presided. There was a fair attendance of members of the general committee and a full attendance of the local committeemen.

After full discussion it was decided to hold the Second National Flower Show in Mechanics' building, Boston, March 18 to 25, 1911. It was considered that this building offers much the best opportunity which will then be available in Boston. The rental for the eight days is $4,900, and the space available will permit of a much larger show than the first one, held at Chicago.

The committee authorized the employment of C. I. Campbell as secretary of the committee and manager of the exhibition.

East Moriches, N. Y.—E. Stanley Brown, proprietor of the Dahlia Farm, sells large quantities of choice stock, both wholesale and retail, and yet he hardly knows, he says, whether he should classify himself as a commercial florist or an amateur, since he is engaged in the work largely for the sake of testing the different varieties and experimenting with them. During the present year, he says, he expects to test a large number of dahlia seedlings which have been neither proved nor named.

ROBERT CAMERON.

Robert Cameron, as his name would indicate, is a Scotchman by birth, being a native of Invernesshire, that county where the most perfect English is supposed to be spoken. He early manifested a desire for gardening and after some training in Scotland went to Kew Gardens, London, where he remained several years, getting an excellent botanical and practical insight into floriculture, under the best teachers in that world famous training school. He came to the United States twenty four years ago, finding employment on the once famous Payson estate, in Watertown, later going to the Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, and working under Alexander Montgomery for two years. In 1889, on the retirement of W. A. Manda to join the firm of Pitcher & Manda, he was called to take charge of the Harvard Botanic Gardens, and it is safe to say that these gardens were never more satisfactorily cared for than

PEONY CLASSIFICATION.

The Department of Horticulture of the College of Agriculture, Cornell University, has just issued its third report on the classification of the peony. This bulletin of seventy-six pages is written by Leon D. Batchelor, but embodies the work of B. H. Farr, president of the American Peony Society, and J. Dauphin, of the Cottage Gardens Co., who were appointed by the Peony Society as a special nomenclature committee to work with Mr. Batchelor in the society's test plots at Cornell. During the flowering season of 1909 the test plots were gone over by Messrs. Farr, Dauphin and Batchelor, and from comparisons with the originators' descriptions precise descriptions were formulated for some 400 varieties, the descriptions constituting the principal part of this latest bulletin. A considerable number of synonyms have been discovered and classified and in future work it is expected that the identity of many more varieties will be determined with such accuracy that much of the heretofore existing confusion will be eliminated.

Before undertaking exact descriptions of the varieties it was necessary to formulate definitions for the various characters in order that the descriptions might be intelligent. The method of description followed in the bulletin is shown by the following two typical examples:

"Edulis superba.—Species, P. albiflora. Originated by Lemon, 1824. Donated by Dessert, Goos & Koenemann, Cottage Gardens Co., and Peterson Nurseries.

"Description in brief.—Large, loose, dark pink (Mauve 2 (181)), crown type bloom; rather flat when full open. Early. Extra good commercial bloom.

"Description in detail.—Large, loose, flat crown with a few narrow lilac 1 (176) petals at collar. Large tuft of wide petals, same color as guards, surrounding a few narrow petals in extreme center of bloom; prominent collar. Odor pleasant. Same season and color as General Bertrand, but it differs in having a collar and crown, while General Bertrand is a bomb; the latter is a more upright grower also.

"Synonyms.—Identical with the above are Delia, Edulis odorata, Rosa lilacina, Mamie Cutler, Sylvanus, Gloire de Douai, Pizano, Early Rose, Acanum, Sainfoin and Lilacina superba. The above so-called varieties are synonyms pure and simple. No record can be found of the origination of any bona fide varieties under the aforementioned names; they should be stricken from the trade and this variety placed under the proper name, Edulis superba.

"In addition to the above synonyms this variety has masqueraded under the following names, which in reality are standard varieties, and there should be no confusion between them and Edulis superba: L'Esperance, Alexandriane, Jeanne d'Arc, Rosa Plenissima, Duchess de Nemours (Guerin), Jules Elie, General Bertrand, Solfatare, Compte de Paris, Triomphe du Nord, Triumphe de l'Exposition de Lille, and Fragrans.

"Remarks.—There seems to be more confusion over this variety than any other, and it has been sent to the Cornell plots under each of the above twenty-three names; and in some cases Edulis superba has come under three or four different names from a single nursery."

"Marechal Vaillant.—Species, P. albiflora. Originated by Calot, 1867. Donated by Croux Bros., Fewkes, Dessert, Peterson Nurseries and Charlton.

"Description in brief.—Very large, compact, medium pink (pure mauve 3 (181)), rose type bloom. Very late, good variety, good commercial bloom.

"Description in detail.—Typical rose bloom, borne on a large, coarse, thick stem, poorly furnished. Odor unpleasant. Tall, strong growing plant, stems rather weak at the base, giving plant a spreading habit. Medium bloomer, laterals undeveloped. Coarse, heavy stem and foliage is a distinguishing characteristic of the variety.

"Synonym.—Identical with the above is the so-called grandiflora rubra.

"Remarks. — Souvenir d'Auguste, Miellez, is said to be identical with the above by prominent growers. From correspondence with A. Dessert."

FUNKIA UNDULATA VARIEGATA.

Kindly instruct me how to handle Funkia undulata variegata to have it for Easter. Should it be potted in the spring or fall? J. P. M.

This beautiful variegated funkia, which is also sometimes called F. undulata media variegata, is better potted in late fall when wanted for Easter sales. Keep the plants over winter in a coldframe and bring into a cool greenhouse six or eight weeks before being wanted. C. W.

GOOD SORTS TO START WITH.

I should like to grow a couple of houses of chrysanthemums and I want to plant them now. Would you please advise me what varieties to buy and also state the time when the buds should be taken? When may I expect the first flowers? I intend to grow early and late varieties mostly, but also some midseason sorts. I am located in Illinois. F. K.

A selection of early varieties may include the following: Pacific, Polly Rose, Monrovia, Golden Glow, October Frost, C. Touset and Early Snow. The buds on these can be taken at varying dates, from July 12 in the case of Monrovia and Golden Glow, to August 1 for October Frost and its yellow sports, and August 20 for Pacific, Polly Rose and Touset.

Some midseason varieties that do well generally are: Duckham, Appleton, President Taft, Mrs. Partridge, M. Desjouis, Ivory and its sports, Bonnaffon and White and Yellow Eaton. The buds are safe on these varieties after August 20 to 25, in almost any location, so far as I know.

The late kinds mostly grown are Nagoya, White and Yellow Chadwick, J. Nonin, Enguehard, J. Shrimpton, J. Rosette, Maud Dean and W. T. Brock. In growing for late flowers the plants should not be benched till July and then should be kept growing along as long as possible before the bud is taken. The later the bud is taken, the better, as it will make the flowers correspondingly late, and the kinds mentioned all do well on terminal buds.

MUMS IN UNFINISHED HOUSE.

If I bench my mums in an unfinished house, with the sides and ends glazed but the roof not yet glazed, can I control the conditions for a while? In this part of Oklahoma the weather gets so hot and dry that I am afraid I shall have trouble to keep the plants moist without overwatering them. Please advise me how to handle them till I get the roof glazed, which will probably be in two months.

W. R. M.

If the weather is dry, as W. R. M. says it is, I see no reason why he should not grow the mums successfully in the benches till the roof can be put on. The chief trouble in this state would be that we might get heavy thunder storms and these make it sometimes difficult to keep the soil in good condition. The plants can easily be kept sprayed five or six times a day to keep them soft and provide a cooler atmosphere, and if this is done by a careful operator, with a fine-nozzled sprayer, the benches need never become too wet. A PRIVATE GARDENER'S IDEAS.

[A paper by Geo. B. Wilson, of Roslyn, N. Y., read at a meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society in Glen Cove, N. Y.]

I venture to say that there is not one of you before me tonight but what has original or peculiar methods, from which you have elaborated a system which governs the growth and beauty of the carnation. It will not be necessary, therefore, for me to enter into minute details of the subject, since there is scarcely a gentleman present who has not proved himself to be efficient in this particular line. I shall just touch lightly on the various stages of the growth of the carnation, after giving a few particulars about its early history.

Origin and Early History.

The carnation, Dianthus Caryophyllus, is a native of southern Europe and is sometimes found in Britain in a wild state, where it had been introduced by cultivation.

The name carnation is from the Latin word caro, carnis, meaning "flesh," and having reference to the flesh color of the original. This plant is supposed to have been in cultivation for over 2,000 years. Theophrastus, in his "History of Plants," says, "The Greeks cultivate roses, gillyflowers, violets, narcissi and iris," the gillyflower being the old English name for the carnation. However, it was not till the beginning of the sixteenth century that the carnation gained a prominent place in the mind and eye of the representatives of the flower-loving nations of the world, namely, the gardeners, who seemed to grasp with prophetic zeal the importance of such acquisition and herald the coming magnificence, beauty and fragrance of the carnation of the future.

Early Classifications.

The French, who were enthusiastic over the numerous different varieties, attempted a classification of them. In 1597 Gerard wrote that to describe each new variety would be difficult, seeing they were as countless as sand. As I have said, the French sought to introduce a little order in this line and arranged all the varieties in three classes: First, Grenadins, embracing those with strong perfume, flowers of medium size, either single or double, petals fringed and of one color; second, Flamands, including those with large flowers, sound and double, rising in the center to form a convex surface, petals entire, either one color or striped with two or more colors; third, Fancies, embracing those with colors arranged in bands on light grounds, the petals fringed or otherwise. The British classification of those varieties divided them into four sections: First, Flakes, or those having a pure ground of white or yellow, and flaked or striped with one color; second, Selfs, or those possessing only one color; third, Bizarres, or those having a pure ground, marked, as in the flakes, with two or more colors; fourth, Picotees, or those having a pure ground of white or yellow, and each petal having a band of color around its extreme edge.

In the Nineteenth Century.

In the early part of the nineteenth century the British gardeners recognized the importance of giving particular attention to the developing and perfecting of such flowers as give promise of future greatness, and thus gradually, through the great interest shown by many prominent men in our profession, every age has added to the grace, beauty and fragrance of the carnation, until at the present day it has taken such a hold on the hearts of the American nation that we hear whisperings of a likelihood that in the future it will dethrone our much-loved rose and reign supreme as queen of the flower world. But I am inclined to think this is an undue stretch of the imagination, as I believe that the rose is well able to hold its exalted position against all comers, even carnations.

I should just like to say a word about the Malmaison carnation. This is a variety that I have been much interested in since I was a boy, and last spring I had some plants imported, but I was not successful with them, owing to their condition on their arrival, as they were much infected with stem-rot. However, I may try again, as this is a family that would gladden the heart of all lovers of carnations.

Modern Culture.

Modern carnation culture calls forth our best energies, not only for exhibition purposes, but for our own satisfaction, since we have the knowledge that we have done our utmost to produce the best results.

The varieties to be chosen for the coming season depend largely on our fancy or on the favor of those who employ us. As examples, let me mention White Perfection, Rose-pink Enchantress, Enchantress, Beacon, Imperial, Victory and Windsor. When any grower has only the use of one house, it is not advisable to grow a great many varieties, seeing we must keep in mind our table decoration and the prevailing tendency to have one color on the table, and if we adopt two or three varieties we will be better able to provide for the wants of those in authority.

GRAPTOPHYLLUM PICTUM.

Graptophyllum pictum is one of a small genus of shrubs from the southern tropics and is the most valued and ornamental of the species. It is a tender evergreen shrub, grown in our northern greenhouses entirely for the beauty of its foliage. Although the illustration does not very well show the variegation, the leaves are most irregularly marked and blotched with yellow, no two leaves being alike. It grows to a height of seven to ten feet, but smaller specimens are more ornamental in the conservatory. Ordinary good loam, with a warm temperature, will grow it freely. The flower is scarlet, but not conspicuous. There is a variety of the above called lurido sanguinea, with purplish leaves and red veins.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Allamanda Williamsi.

Allamanda Williamsi makes one of the best summer flowering pot plants. It is an especial favorite at Newport, R. I., and other fashionable summer resorts, nicely grown plants making beautiful centerpieces. Plants started early in April in a brisk heat, and kept in a warm house, will now be showing flower. It gives the flowers more substance if they are not grown in too shady a structure. They will stand full sun and even grow outdoors. In the latter case the flowers take on a bronzy hue.

A greenhouse kept about 55 degrees at night will now suit A. Williamsi well. Let the plants have an abundance of water and, as the pots rapidly fill with roots, use liquid cow manure water or a top-dressing of Clay's Fertilizer once a week. These allamandas flower for months, and as they are adaptable for cutting for market purposes and are of easy culture, they are worthy of more attention. Soft-wood cuttings will root in a month in a warm house.

Achimenes.

Whether achimenes are grown in pots, pans or baskets, they are excellent summer blooming plants. In Europe they are greater favorites than here, but the large flowered varieties, such as alba maxima and Margaretta, are useful florists' plants where choice pot plants in bloom are wanted in July and August. They last remarkably well in the dwelling house and, when in active growth, do well in a house suitable for gloxinias. They can be moved to a cold, airy house as the flowers open. The compost should be light, porous, but fairly rich; one-half fibrous loam, one-fourth cow manure, one-fourth flaky leaf-mold and a good dash of sand suits them nicely. Do not let the direct sun strike them, as the foliage will readily scald, and in watering avoid wetting the foliage as much as possible. Eight or nine growths are ample for a 6-inch pot or pan, and these should each have light stakes before the flowers start to expand.

Hydrangeas.

The arrival of Memorial day means a heavy diminution in the supplies of flowering plants, and hydrangeas are in as much demand as any other pot plant at that season. There is, with many, considerable sale for these plants through June and July. Late blooming stock should have some shade, to reduce watering and keep the flower heads of a good color. Plant out young stock rooted early in the year. Choose a well manured piece of land, inclined to be moist. If some water can be given during severe droughts, it will be a great benefit. It is not too late even now to root a good batch of cuttings. These, if kept growing along in pots, will be fit to flower in 6-inch pots next spring with one or two large heads each. Plant out any unsold stock, after heading them back well. These will make fine, big specimens another year. Large plants carried over winter in cold cellars will now be outdoors and must have an abundant water supply. As they start into active growth, apply liquid manure freely, as hydrangeas are gross feeders.

Cannas.

In planting out beds of cannas, it is always a mistake to have them mounded up toward the center. The plants will not make nearly as good growth in these as when the beds are level or even a little sunken, unless they are copiously watered. Cannas enjoy a warm, moist and rich soil, but in the early stages of growth, when the nights are liable to be rather chilly, it is best not to water too freely. Be sure to plant out a sufficient quantity of stock plants for yourselves before the bedding season is too far advanced. It is sometimes necessary to refuse late orders, strong as the temptation may be to fill them with plants needed by ourselves.

Nerines.

Nerines will now have completed their growth and the foliage will show signs of decaying on some of them. They will do well now stood outdoors in full sun on a bed of cinders. Do not dry them off too suddenly, but withhold water by degrees. By the middle of June, when the foliage will all be assuming a golden hue, lay them on their sides on a hot, sunny bank, where they can get a thorough baking all summer long. They will need no further attention until the middle or end of September, when the flower spikes will commence to push and the pots can be moved into a frame or cool greenhouse and watered.

Variegated Vinca.

Variegated vinca is one of the most generally useful of hanging plants for vases, piazza boxes and window boxes, and there never seems to be much of a surplus of it. Be sure to reserve and plant out a sufficient quanity of plants for propagating purposes. Cuttings rooted during the winter do not make plants of sufficient size for the bulk of customers and are better grown a season in the field, when they make heavy clumps by fall. As the propagating benches will now be less in service, take off a good batch of cuttings with a heel. Keep them shaded and well soaked with water. Few will fail to root. Pot these, and, to get a nice growth on them, plunge them in an empty coldframe in old manure. Scatter a little fine manure on top of the ground. Water freely and they will make nice plants before fall.

Astilbe Japonica.

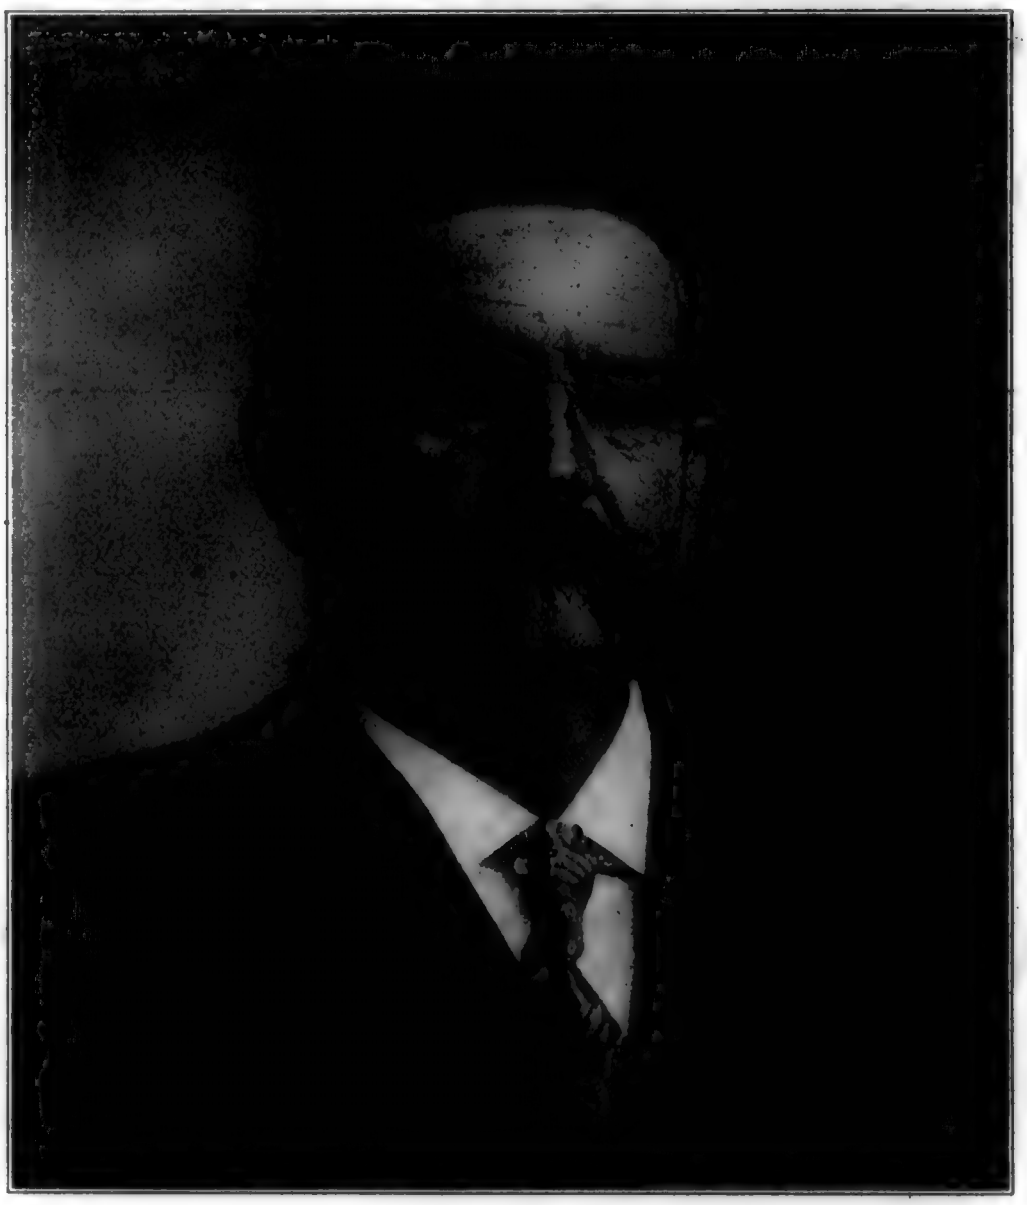
If you have been growing Astilbe

Graptophyllum Pictum.

(Spiræa) Japonica or some of its improvements for cutting for Memorial day, you will probably be getting ready now to throw away the plants. It is true they can be bought inexpensively. They can also be grown at a low cost right at our own doors. Select a piece of rich, rather moist ground. Chop the larger clumps in two with a sharp spade and plant them out in nursery rows thirty inches apart, allowing fifteen inches between the plants. Keep well cultivated. By the end of the second season you will have big, heavy clumps, which will need dividing into three or four in some cases, and these will flower far better than any you can buy in Holland or Belgium. If you can spare the ground, grow some of your own spiræa clumps. You will be surprised to see how well they grow and how finely they will force.

Astilbe Queen Alexandra.

Speaking of astilbes reminds us that while the glorious peach-pink variety, Queen Alexandra, is as yet seen only in moderate quantities commercially, it is getting cheaper each year and is bound to have a tremendous sale, especially at Memorial day. Probably the white forms will continue to be favored at Easter. This astilbe does not take kindly to early and hard forcing, but if allowed to come on in a cool house it is superb at the end of May. It is of vigorous habit and 5-inch pots of it will carry more spikes than any other astilbe, either pink or white. The plants want a shaded house when opening, to prevent the fading out of the flowers. Every grower should plan to buy some of these and grow them for Memorial day, 1911.



Lorraine Begonias.

If you do not propagate your own Lorraine begonias—and it is far better for many small growers to secure stock from some reliable specialist—the present is a suitable time to purchase a quantity of young plants. Keep them in a rather warm house which is not heavily shaded. When potting use plenty of flaky leaf-mold. Lorraine begonias like a light and moderately rich soil, through which water passes freely. It is not yet too late to take cuttings from any old stock plants. Some good bottom cuttings are now being produced and these will root readily. The slow rate of growth on Lorraines during the early summer months is discouraging to beginners in their culture. They make rapid headway with the coming of cooler evenings in August.

Tender Nymphæas.

The weather is now sufficiently settled to allow the planting out of any of the tender water lilies. Of the day-blooming varieties a few of the best are: N. Capensis, Cape Blue water lily; N. cærulea, blue Egyptian lotus; N. Zanibariensis, deep blue; N. Zanzibariensis rosea, rose; N. pulcherrima, light blue, a hybrid of N. cærulea; Mrs. G. W. Ward, rosy pink, very fine. Of night bloomers a few good sorts are: N. rubra, purplish red; N. Sturtevantii, pink, sometimes red; N. dentata, white; N. dentata magnifica, creamy white; N. Deaniana, light pink; N. Devoniensis, red.

Lilies do best planted in natural beds of mud, but, as this is not always at command, half barrels answer well for a season, also boxes three to five feet square and a foot deep; six to twelve inches should be allowed between top of boxes and water surface. Use half cow manure and half loam for compost. Cover with three inches of sand, to prevent washing away after the plants are placed in them. Never plant water lilies in a shady spot; they want the fullest sunlight.

A. Alost.

ALOST OF NEW ORLEANS.

A. Alost, president of the New Orleans Horticultural Society, started June 1 for a tour of Europe, to occupy the greater part of the summer. He will visit all the larger horticultural establishments in Europe in the interest of his private business and at the same time to exploit the horticultural department of the Panama Exposition, to be held at New Orleans in 1915. The New Orleans Horticultural Society intends that in so far as horticulture is concerned this exposition shall be the grandest ever held in America and it is earnestly desired that all leading horticulturists, not only in this country but in Europe, participate in it.

It has been the annual practice of Mr. Alost to entertain the society at dinner at Rose Villa Nursery. The event coming just before his departure for Europe, the society expressed its love and esteem for its president by responding to the invitation in large numbers, there being more than 100 members and guests seated about the tables when the festivities began. While the steaming dishes were being served Secretary C. R. Panter presented Mr. Alost with a silver tea set and also a handsome traveling bag. His remarks on behalf of the society were expressive of the good will that went with the gift. This little incident unnerved the host, but he responded happily, and resigned his office as toastmaster in favor of Secretary Panter, who acquitted himself with dignity.

Among those who spoke were P. A. Chopin, U. J. Virgin, C. W. Eichling, Joseph Steckler, Ed. Baker, Harry Papworth and several guests not members of the trade. A toast was proposed to John Eblen, the treasurer of the society, who was detained at home.

After the dinner the guests were taken about the establishment and upon returning to the house were again treated to light refreshments. The ladies of the house entertained with songs and music and dancing in the big parlors. The crowds left Rose Villa long after dark and were brought to their respective destinations in the big wagons of Joseph Steckler.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society is 26 years old and a local newspaper, in an account of the dinner, said the society has done more toward beautifying New Orleans than any other organization.

The officers are: A. Alost, president; Herman Doescher, vice-president; C. R. Panter, secretary; John Eblen, treasurer.

Corry, Pa.—Mrs. Milton Caldwell has opened a flower store in the traction office.

Des Moines, Ia.—The Iowa Seed Co. is planning an important addition to its greenhouses this season.

GRAPTOPHYLLUM PICTUM.

Graptophyllum pictum is one of a small genus of shrubs from the southern tropics and is the most valued and ornamental of the species. It is a tender evergreen shrub, grown in our northern greenhouses entirely for the beauty of its foliage. Although the illustration does not very well show the variegation, the leaves are most irregularly marked and blotched with yellow, no two leaves being alike. It grows to a height of seven to ten feet, but smaller specimens are more ornamental in the conservatory. Ordinary good loam, with a warm temperature, will grow it freely. The flower is scarlet, but not conspicuous. There is a variety of the above called lurido sanguinea, with purplish leaves and red veins

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Allamanda Williamsi.

Allamanda Williamsi makes one of the best summer flowering pot plants. It is an especial favorite at Newport, R. I., and other fashionable summer resorts, nicely grown plants making beautiful centerpieces. Plants started early in April in a brisk heat, and kept in a warm house, will now be showing flower. It gives the flowers more substance if they are not grown in too shady a structure. They will stand full sun and even grow outdoors. In the latter case the flowers take on a bronzy hue.

A greenhouse kept about 55 degrees at night will now suit A. Williamsi well. Let the plants have an abundance of water and, as the pots rapidly fill with roots, use liquid cow manure water or a top-dressing of Clay's Fertilizer once a week. These allamandas flower for months, and as they are adaptable for cutting for market purposes and are of easy culture, they are worthy of more attention. Soft-wood cuttings will root in a month in a warm house.

Achimenes.

Whether achimenes are grown in pots, pans or baskets, they are excellent summer blooming plants. In Europe they are greater favorites than here, but the large flowered varieties, such as alba maxima and Margaretta, are useful florists' plants where choice pot plants in bloom are wanted in July and August. They last remarkably well in the dwelling house and, when in active growth, do well in a house suitable for gloxinias. They can be moved to a cold, airy house as the flowers open. The compost should be light, porous, but fairly rich; one half fibrous loam, one fourth cow manure, one fourth flaky leaf-mold and a good dash of sand suits them nicely. Do not let the direct sun strike them, as the foliage will readily scald, and in watering avoid wetting the foliage as much as possible. Eight or nine growths are ample for a 6 inch pot or pan, and these should each have light stakes before the flowers start to expand.

Hydrangeas.

The arrival of Memorial day means a heavy diminution in the supplies of flowering plants, and hydrangeas are in as much demand as any other pot plant at that season. There is, with many, considerable sale for these plants through June and July. Late blooming stock should have some shade, to reduce watering and keep the flower heads of a good color. Plant out young stock rooted early in the year. Choose a well manured piece of land, inclined to be moist. If some water can be given during severe droughts, it will be a great benefit. It is not too late even now to root a good batch of cuttings. These, if kept growing along in pots, will be fit to flower in 6-inch pots next spring with one or two large heads each. Plant out any unsold stock, after heading them back well. These will make fine, big specimens another year. Large plants carried over winter in cold cellars will now be outdoors and must have an abundant water supply. As they start into active growth, apply liquid manure freely, as hydrangeas are gross feeders.

Cannas.

In planting out beds of cannas, it is always a mistake to have them mounded up toward the center. The plants will not make nearly as good growth in these as when the beds are level or even a little sunken, unless they are copiously watered. Cannas enjoy a warm, moist and rich soil, but in the early stages of growth, when the night are liable to be rather chilly, it is be not to water too freely. Be sure plant out a sufficient quantity of stoc plants for yourselves before the be ding season is too far advanced. It sometimes necessary to refuse la orders, strong as the temptation may b to fill them with plants needed by ou selves.

Nerines.

Nerines will now have completed thei growth and the foliage will show sign of decaying on some of them. The will do well now stood outdoors in ful sun on a bed of cinders. Do not dr them off too suddenly, but withhol water by degrees. By the middle o June, when the foliage will all be assum ing a golden hue, lay them on thei sides on a hot, sunny bank, where they can get a thorough baking all sum mer long. They will need no further attention until the middle or end o September, when the flower spikes will commence to push and the pots can be moved into a frame or cool green house and watered.

Variegated Vinca.

Variegated vinca is one of the most generally useful of hanging plants for vases, piazza boxes and window boxes, and there never seems to be much of a surplus of it. Be sure to reserve and plant out a sufficient quanity of plants for propagating purposes. Cuttings rooted during the winter do not make plants of sufficient size for the bulk of customers and are better grown a season in the field, when they make heavy clumps by fall. As the propagating benches will now be less in service, take off a good batch of cuttings with a heel. Keep them shaded and well soaked with water Few will fail to root. Pot these, and, to get a nice growth on them, plunge them in an empty coldframe in old manure. Scatter a little fine manure on top of the ground. Water freely and they will make nice plants before fall.

Astilbe Japonica.

If you have been growing Astilbe

Graptophyllum Pictum.

spiræa) Japonica or some of its improvements for cutting for Memorial y, you will probably be getting ready w to throw away the plants. It is e they can be bought inexpensively. y can also be grown at a low cost t at our own doors. Select a piece rich, rather moist ground. Chop larger clumps in two with a sharp e and plant them out in nursery s thirty inches apart, allowing fifinches between the plants. Keep cultivated. By the end of the ond season you will have big, heavy mps, which will need dividing into e or four in some cases, and these flower far better than any you buy in Holland or Belgium. If you spare the ground, grow some of your spiræa clumps. You will be surised to see how well they grow and finely they will force.

Astilbe Queen Alexandra.

Speaking of astilbes reminds us that le the glorious peach-pink variety, een Alexandra, is as yet seen only in derate quantities commercially, it getting cheaper each year and is nd to have a tremendous sale, pecially at Memorial day. Probably e white forms will continue to be ored at Easter. This astilbe does take kindly to early and hard forcg, but if allowed to come on in a l house it is superb at the end of y. It is of vigorous habit and 5ch pots of it will carry more spikes han any other astilbe, either pink or hite. The plants want a shaded ouse when opening, to prevent the ading out of the flowers. Every grower should plan to buy some of these and grow them for Memorial day, 1911.

Lorraine Begonias.

If you do not propagate your own Lorraine begonias—and it is far better for many small growers to secure stock from some reliable specialist—the present is a suitable time to purchase a quantity of young plants. Keep them in a rather warm house which is not heavily shaded. When potting use plenty of flaky leaf-mold. Lorraine begonias like a light and moderately rich soil, through which water passes freely. It is not yet too late to take cuttings from any old stock plants. Some good bottom cuttings are now being produced and these will root readily. The slow rate of growth on Lorraines during the early summer months is discouraging to beginners in their culture. They make rapid headway with the coming of cooler evenings in August.

Tender Nymphæas.

The weather is now sufficiently settled to allow the planting out of any of the tender water lilies. Of the day-blooming varieties a few of the best are: N. Capensis, Cape Blue water lily; N. cærulea, blue Egyptian lotus; N. Zanzibariensis, deep blue; N. Zanzibariensis rosea, rose; N. pulcherrima, light blue, a hybrid of N. cærulea; Mrs. G. W. Ward, rosy pink, very fine. Of night bloomers a few good sorts are: N. rubra, purplish red; N. Sturtevantii, pink, sometimes red; N. dentata, white; N. dentata magnifica, creamy white; N. Deaniana, light pink; N. Devoniensis, red.

CARRILLO & BALDWIN'S PLACE.

After having been four years in the business at Secaucus, N. J., Carrillo & Baldwin this spring removed to a new location at Mamaroneck, N. Y., where their facilities are admirable and capable of indefinite expansion. The accompanying illustrations show the plant as it appeared a few weeks ago. There now are three greenhouses of modern type and another, 50x125 feet, is being erected. The property consists of fifteen acres, lying on the hills that overlook the sound and a glorious stretch of suburban country. The land is devoted to summer crops of various kinds and one of the side lines is poultry farming, there being model chicken houses, with over a thousand chicks of various ages and double that number on their incubator way. There are horses, cows and everything a country gentleman needs to make life worth living.

New Establishment of Carrillo & Baldwin, Mamaroneck, N. Y.

The importation of South American orchids is, of course, the main issue with the firm, and L. F. Carrillo is now in South America collecting cattleyas. He has already this season shipped home over 1,000 cases. In Brazil the firm also has a force of hunters sending home labiata. Mr. Carrillo is a native of Colombia. George E. Baldwin, who attends to the receiving and selling end, hails from Yorkshire, England. In addition to the business in freshly imported orchids, a large stock of established plants is carried and in the greenhouses there are many things of striking interest to an orchid enthusiast.

DUTY ON WILLOW BASKETS.

Under a decision handed down May 25, by the Board of General Appraisers, dealers in florists' supplies who import willow baskets will be compelled to pay duty on their importations at the rate of forty-five per cent ad valorem, as manufacturers of willow under the provision of paragraph 212 of the Tariff Act of 1909. Several alternative claims were made for lower rates of duty, but in a brief filed by counsel for protestants, the only claim relied upon was that made for duty at the rate of thirty-five per cent ad valorem under paragraph 214 of said act as baskets of wood.

General Appraiser McClelland, in overruling the importers' claim, stated:

"That willow is wood according to the common understanding of the word there is no question, and in the absence of the provision for manufactures of osier or willow, baskets made of willow would, beyond doubt, be subject to duty under the provision for baskets of wood. Neither may it be gainsaid that a provision for 'baskets of osier or willow' would be narrower and more specific than one for 'manufactures of osier or willow,' and it follows that the provision for baskets of wood is more specific than that for manufactures of wood, but we think that as between the existing provisions for 'manufactures of osier or willow' and 'baskets of wood,' when considered in the light of Congressional action in respect thereof, as we have before stated it, the purpose is shown to eliminate from every general or blanket provision for wood or manufactures thereof, one particular kind of wood, to wit: osier or willow and all articles made thereof. In other words, Congress has said that for tariff purposes willow is not wood. The language of paragraph 212 applying to osier or willow and manufactures thereof is so specific that it could not be applied to any other kind of wood or articles made of any other kind of wood. To uphold the view of protestants would, in large measure, destroy its meaning."

POWDER PASTES.

In The Review of May 19 I noticed the inquiry of C. F. C., with reference to a powder which, he said, was used as a paste for attaching labels to boxes and was called Paste Substitute. He said he had formerly used it and had found it the best preparation for the purpose he had ever seen, but that he had lost the address of the manufacturers. I also noticed, in The Review of May 26, a reply to this inquiry. The reply was signed A. W. L. and was substantially as follows: "Though I can not give any information about that particular sort of paste, there is another brand of powder paste which I can recommend. It is used by my firm, by the Henry A. Dreer corporation and other florists, and also by the Adams Express Co. It is called Dextrine and is manufactured by the Steele & Atwood Co., of Chicago. I think it is the best paste that can be had for attaching labels."

Now, I have been considering the use of this kind of paste and am glad to learn from these correspondents that it is a good thing. Like A. W. L., I am unable to give to the inquirer the name of the firm that makes the powder called Paste Substitute, but I can tell him about another article of the same sort, a small sample of which was recently sent to me by the makers. It is called the Instanter Cold Water Powder and is for sale by Binney & Smith Co., 81 and 83 Fulton street, New York city. This is another of the "add water and serve" preparations and any florist who does a shipping trade will appreciate how much more convenient it is to handle than are the old liquid pastes.

HARDY PLANTS FOR BORDERS.

The New Double Gypsophila.

Few hardy plants are more popular than the charming Gypsophila paniculata, with its fleecy cloud of blossoms, but more beautiful is the new double form, which is one instance where the doubling process has improved a plant's beauty.

Heucheras are among the most useful of small growing herbaceous plants, and many are familiar with the beautiful scarlet, H. sanguinea. Quite a few good hybrids have been raised recently, the finest of which is undoubtedly H. Shirley, which grows three feet high and has large scarlet flowers. Pageant is also fine, a strong grower, rich, bright crimson in color. Rosamunde, Margaret, Firefly, Coralie, Flambeau and Lucifer should all be included.

Heleniums are among the most useful of tall flowering plants, but I will only mention one here, a new variety, raised in this country. This is Riverton Gem, which has golden yellow flowers largely suffused with crimson.

Hybrid Hemerocallis.

Everyone is acquainted with the old day lily, Hemerocallis fulva, which is a decidedly ornamental plant for many positions, but for the select flower border the newer hybrids are superior. The most noteworthy of them are: Dr. Regel, with large flowers, rich orange in color; Sir Michael, a beautiful soft yellow; Queen of May, a wonderful plant, three and a half feet high, with deep orange colored flowers, often carrying eighteen on a single stem, and Baroni, with sweetly scented, orange-yellow flowers.

Incarvillea Delavayi and I. grandiflora are two remarkable new species from China. The former has deep rose flowers about the size of a gloxinia, and the latter is rich carmine in color, with a yellow throat. These succeed best in a position shaded from the hottest sunlight.

Two desirable new lupines of the polyphyllus section, both with rose colored flowers, are Lupinus polyphyllus roseus and L. Moerheimi, and an excellent variety of the double Lychnis Chalcedonica is Cripps' variety, which is not affected by the sun.

OBITUARY.

William E. Kelley.

The president of the Horticultural Society of Chicago, William E. Kelley, died May 27, at his summer home at Oconomowoc, Wis., as the result of an ailment that had continued more than a year.

Mr. Kelley was an enthusiastic horticulturist and possessed of ample means to pursue his hobby, so that his place at Oconomowoc was well worth a visit. James A. Wilson is the gardener in charge. Mr. Kelley was serving his second term as president of the Horticultural Society of Chicago and always took a keen interest in its affairs, though he bore no active part in its exhibitions, so that he had no wide acquaintance among the trade.

Mr. Kelley was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Asa P. Kelley. He was born August 27, 1850. His early education was obtained in Chicago. After he was graduated from Yale Mr. Kelley returned to Chicago and engaged in the lumber business with his father, acquiring extensive lumber lands in Wisconsin and Idaho. Mrs. Kelley and her two daughters, Margaret and Dorothy, were with Mr. Kelley when he died. Two sons, William and Asa P. Kelley, who have been looking after their father's lumber interests, were in Idaho.

The funeral was held at Oconomowoc Tuesday, May 31, a large party of business and personal friends going from Chicago on a special train. The remains were brought to Chicago June 1 for interment at Graceland cemetery. There was a wealth of fine flowers.

Joseph W. Hulsizer.

Joseph W. Hulsizer, formerly of Grinnell and for some years located at Des Moines, Ia., died May 23 at his home in the latter city. He was 60 years of age and was widely known in the state and in the trade, having lived in Iowa since young manhood, first engaging in the business at Grinnell, but removing to the capital some eight years ago. He leaves a wife and one son, Clyde Hulsizer, who will continue the business.

David Neely.

David Neely, one of the best known nurserymen in the vicinity of San Francisco, Cal., died in Berkeley, Cal., May 25. He established one of the first plant nurseries in California, locating in San Francisco early in the sixties. After successfully conducting this business for twenty-five years, he removed to West Berkeley. He lost his wife several years ago and left no family. He was 77 years of age and a native of Scotland.

Woburn, Mass.—William Ward, the Montvale florist, is building a greenhouse. His business is increasing rapidly.

South Sudbury, Mass.—The greenhouses formerly owned by Coolidge Bros., and conducted lately by Chester Williams, were expected to pass into other hands in the first part of June. It was reported that one of the former owners would assume control.

Madison, N. J.—M. C. Ebel, treasurer of the Aphine Mfg. Co., is elated over a letter received May 19 from James Whiting, foreman of the department of floriculture at the Massachusetts College of Agriculture, which he thinks is the strongest endorsement the company's product has yet received.

DUTY ON WILLOW BASKETS.

Ruling at Boston Upheld.

Under a decision given June May 25, by the Board of General Appraisers, leaders in florists' circles who import willow baskets will be compelled to pay duty on their importations at the rate of forty-five per cent ad valorem, as manufactures of willow, under the provision of paragraph 212 of the Tariff Act of 1909. Several interesting points were raised for lower rates of duty, but were ruled out by counsel for protestants, the only claim upheld being that made for entry at the rate of that is, five per cent ad valorem under paragraph 211 of said act as baskets of wood.

The funeral was held at Oconomowoc Tuesday, May 31, a large party of business and personal friends going from Chicago on a special train. The re[illegible] were brought to Chicago [illegible] interment at Graceland cemetery. There was a wealth of floral tributes.

Joseph W. Hulsizer.

Joseph W. Hulsizer, [illegible] Grinnell, Ia., died May 25, [illegible] was born in the latter city. He was 60 years of age and was widely known in the state and in the trade, having lived in Iowa since young manhood, first engaging in the business at Grinnell, but removing to the capital some eight years ago. He leaves a wife and one son, Clyde Hulsizer, who will continue the business.

David Neely.

David Neely, one of the best known nurserymen in the vicinity of San Francisco, Cal., died in Berkeley, Cal., May 25. He established one of the first plant nurseries in California, locating in San Francisco early in the sixties. After successfully conducting this business for twenty-five years, he removed to West Berkeley. He lost his wife several years ago and left no family. He was 77 years of age and a native of Scotland.

Woburn, Mass.—William Ward, the Montvale florist, is building a greenhouse. His business is increasing rapidly.

South Sudbury, Mass. The greenhouses formerly owned by Coolidge Bros., and conducted lately by Chester Williams, were expected to pass into other hands in the first part of June. It was reported that one of the former owners would assume control.

Madison, N. J.—M. [illegible] Ellis, secretary of the Aptene Mfg. Co., is elated over a letter received May 19 from James Whiting, foreman of the department of horticulture at the Massachusetts College of Agriculture, which he thinks is the strongest endorsement the company's product has yet received.

Camden, Me.—The Lily Pond Nurseries is the name under which George Glaentzel conducts his place. He reports a large increase in his sale of bedding plants, and in his cut flower sales for Memorial day, giving the credit for the gain to the advertising he did during the latter half of May.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS, MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.

Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August 16 to 19, 1910.

RESULTS.
We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

WHEN is a geranium not a geranium? When it isn't in flower at bedding-out time.

HERE is a word of wisdom from John E. Lapes, of Cedar Rapids. "Competitors may imitate," he says, "but they do not, in any strict sense, follow."

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two copies.

SOME growers think that the way to get the most money out of their stock is to put it in competition with itself by shipping to two commission houses in the same city.

THAT question of express rates is as deep as the rates themselves are high; express charges affect railroad income, and the cost of transportation adds to the expense of growing stock, and of marketing it.

THE frosts that put outdoor flowers out of commission for Memorial day may have been an ill wind for those who look to this source for a little extra money, but it "blew good" to a lot of growers under glass who can make equally good use of the coin.

THE Ladies' Home Journal for June pictures a dozen styles of graduation bouquets by Charles Thorley, New York. Such publicity is a great thing for the trade; the more people see of the way other people use flowers, the better it is for all concerned in the production and distribution of flowers.

A LEGAL QUESTION.

In regard to the legal question asked by G. H. P. on the contents page of The Review, in the issue of May 26, I do not think he has any direct remedy against the cemetery association for selling stock outside of the grounds. His only course would be to notify the county auditor and treasurer of the facts and ask them to put the whole cemetery, if possible—i. e., if any of the stock sold is grown on the burial grounds, or if not, that part used as the conservatories—on the tax duplicate. If the county officials then neglect to do this, G. H. P. should go to court and mandamus them to compel them to tax the cemetery association.

A few years ago the county treasurer in this part of Ohio placed some property owned by a local cemetery upon the tax duplicate, because corn was grown upon the cemetery land. As soon as this was done, the cemetery association stopped growing the grain, though it had been used to feed the stock that worked in the cemetery, and sowed the soil with grass seed and planted ornamental shrubbery. A Pennsylvania case holds that "when the legislature exempts from taxation property used for a specified purpose, the exemption includes such property only as is directly and immediately used therefor, and cannot be extended to other property, even though the income received therefrom is entirely devoted to furthering such purposes."

Therefore the managers of a cemetery can be compelled to pay taxes, and if this does not make them stop selling stock to outside parties, it will at least put them upon the same level of competition as the florist with whom they are competing. C. H. H.

JUNE.

Time to Make Collections.

In addition to its many other activities, June is a time to get busy on collections. Remember that as schools close in June, your best customers, those probably who owe you the largest balances, will be leaving for their summer homes. If you don't get your money before they get away, the chances are you will have to wait for it until they return in the autumn. In that case will you be able to meet your own bills? Or will you be compelled to stand off the wholesaler, the seedsman and the local growers, to say nothing of the grocer and butcher? Many a florist has the reputation of being "slow" when he simply is slow to get after his own money. Collecting is just a little more important than selling.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The volume of business for Decoration day exceeded the expectations of the most sanguine—and that is saying considerable.

The business in the Chicago market has grown so steadily and so rapidly that the regular holiday reports of increased sales as compared with the same holiday in previous years have come to be lightly regarded, but no one who spent any portion of the three days of May 27 to 29 in the market will for a moment question the statement that the Memorial day business brought the biggest increase recorded for any holiday of recent years. Every house in the market had all the business it could handle, from the moment the first shipping orders went out right up to noon of the holiday itself.

While the demand proved stronger than had been anticipated, the supply of stock was just the reverse. It seemed that every buyer wanted carnations in large quantities and, though the receipts were large, it was impossible to fill all orders. In roses it was more nearly possible to meet all requirements. The peony supply, except with one or two houses, was less than it usually is and the result was that everything cleaned up at fine prices. Sweet peas and the odds and ends did not do so well as the shipping flowers up to the time that city buyers had a hearing. The out-of-town orders do not call for much in the way of the small and miscellaneous stock and these did not share in the general advance in prices until Saturday and Sunday.

There was considerable complaint of the sharp advance in prices, but when the business had all gone out it was found that prices were not so very much higher than usual, after all. The principal advance was on carnations, and it is quite true that red and special fancy stock brought higher prices than ever before at Memorial day, but at the same time an important percentage of the receipts was Boston Market, which never can be made to realize fancy prices; also, a considerable part of the carnation receipts were in a condition which prevented shipment, so that the average prices, taking the carnations as a whole, were not nearly so high as might be thought from hearing those tell it who wanted only red or fancy quality.

Short roses were excellent property and brought more money, in comparison to quality, than the special grade did. When buyers found that they could buy short roses rather cheaper than they could buy a good grade of carnations, they took the roses. There was a special demand for red and Richmond returned a better average price than any other variety, but the average buyer wanted roses at from 4 to 6 cents, not higher. Rose orders were much better filled than carnation orders. No one went without long Beauties, but there was the usual scarcity of short and medium Beauties.

Peonies proved to be excellent property and the price went above the rates at which advance orders had been taken. In the closing days of the rush any good white brought $1 per dozen, and there were askings of $1.25 and $1.50, but not much business at these figures. The supply proved practically equal to the demand, though no doubt many more might have been sold had the supply of peonies been increased, but not the supply of other flowers. There were, of course, some peonies that were not salable; also, there were some which came from storage in such a condition that the heads quickly dropped off, but taking the situation as a whole it was distinctly satisfactory to those who had the peonies.

There was an enormous supply of sweet peas and the quality of much of the stock showed a marked deterioration from what it was a few days before. The peas sold splendidly to city buyers at fair prices, but this is not a shipping flower, so that early in the week prices ruled extremely low. Lilies were plentiful for Decoration day and sold well. Considerable quantities of indoor gladioli arrived and found ready buyers Saturday and Sunday. Cape jasmines were in only moderate supply. The better grades sold well, the short stock poorly. One of the incidents of the week was the cleaning up of the fern market, so that good fancy ferns went to $4 per thousand.

The wholesalers were altogether too busy with shipping business to give much attention to city buyers May 27 and until evening May 28 and, indeed, all day Sunday there was heavy shipping, most of the wholesalers staying open all day. Sunday and Monday morning city buyers took hold freely.

Saturday was hot and Sunday bright, so that about closing time on the holiday many heavy shipments arrived and were carried over to Tuesday. Coupled with fairly heavy receipts Tuesday morning, the market broke sharply, especially on carnations, though most of the wholesalers anticipate a rally the latter part of the week. Carnation prices Tuesday and Wednesday of the present week were lower than at any time for the period between Mothers' day and Decoration day and rose values equally good.

June starts off with an excellent volume of shipping business, and local retailers have booked some excellent orders for wedding decorations, so that the market looks forward to an excellent month. The quality of all stock is fully as good as could be expected in June, roses being especially good, and prices are no higher than ordinarily prevail at this season. For the moment peonies are in light supply, but there is an abundance of Easter lilies for the early wedding decorations. Old red peonies are being cut by local growers and only a few days will elapse before the peony supply will be large once more.

Business in May.

It was a banner month of May for this market. Where is that other month with two holidays, both of which proved better than expected? Curiously enough, the carnation was the flower specially in request both times, for Mothers' day and for Memorial day. Carnation growers certainly have reason to look back on May with the hope that every May may be as good for them. There were large supplies of good roses most of the month, which sold at seasonable prices and made a good volume of business. More sweet peas than ever before were sold and other items did fairly well, so altogether May was a fine month for business. Cool weather no doubt helped materially.

Various Notes.

Charles Klehm, of Klehm's Nurseries, made his Memorial day headquarters with Kyle & Foerster. He said the peonies at his firm's new Indiana place were badly hurt by the April frost, but that they will cut some good stock at the home place at Arlington Heights.

L. Baumann has been spending a few days at Salzburg, in the Austrian Tyrol, and sends home souvenir post cards of the mountains he climbs.

day sales closely approximated those of Christmas. Figuring on the difference in prices, he estimates that more than twice and possibly nearly three times as many flowers were handled.

Through the death of W. E. Kelley, W. N. Rudd becomes president of the Horticultural Society of Chicago. The vice-presidents elected last January, in the order named, were W. N. Rudd, E. Wienhoeber and August Poehlmann.

C. L. Washburn says that Bassett & Washburn sold more roses May 27 and 28 than in any two days of the previous history of the concern.

O. W. Frese has left Poehlmann Bros. Co., after a connection of several years' duration.

Gus Alles says that Memorial day with Wietor Bros. was better than anyone about the place expected. They were lucky in having a fine crop of red carnations.

The automatic telephone people are working hard to get the wholesalers and the retailers in the downtown district to let new instruments be installed, but are meeting with little success. When the automatic phone was first offered nearly everyone in the wholesale section put it in, but it was not long before it was recognized that two telephone systems simply are a nuisance.

C. M. Dickinson says that E. H. Hunt's cut flower sales for May 27, 28 and 29 were twenty per cent ahead of the same three days last year, principally because of larger supplies of peonies.

Mrs. Moore, who sells for N. C. Moore & Co. in the Flower Growers' Market, has had a bad time with her right hand for three weeks as the result of poisoning caused, she thinks, by handling Sprengeri.

E. F. Winterson Co. had 1,000 pond lilies for Memorial day, probably the first time these flowers ever were offered in quantity so early.

The Florists' Club holds its monthly meeting at the Union restaurant tonight, June 2. Secretary L. H. Winterson states that he will have a proof of the new by-laws and roster and hopes to get the pamphlet out right after this meeting. Club buttons are for sale by the secretary, price 50 cents.

Robert Northam says that George Reinberg is this week cutting the heaviest crop of Richmond this season. It seemed to take just the touch of hot sun that came May 28 to set them going.

The esteemed Tribune has been so hot-foot on the trail of Billy Lorimer that it did not hear of the marriage of O. P. Bassett, March 24, until May 31, when it published a scare head over an account that was good reading if not strictly accurate.

Charles Zapfe, who had been in the hospital for three weeks, rejoined the J. A. Budlong store force in time for the Memorial day rush, minus his vermiform appendix and still rather weak.

Vaughan & Sperry say that there can be no shortage of Beauties during June, though most of their crop now is long-stemmed.

A. L. Randall says this was not only much the biggest Memorial day on record, but that he considers it the most satisfactory in his experience, considering the interests of grower, wholesaler and retailer.

Tim Matchen thinks the local retailers had as good a Memorial day as the wholesalers did. He says several who stocked up heavily Saturday bought again in quantity Sunday and were down early Monday for further supplies.

Among last week's visitors were: Alfred W. York, of the Lakeside Floral Co., Houghton, Mich., buying Memorial day supplies; N. J. Hayman, of the Hayman Greenhouse Co., Clarksburg, W. Va., buying greenhouse material; James B. Wild, Sarcoxie, Mo., father of Gilbert H. Wild, and on his first visit here in seventeen years.

The E. Wienhoeber Co. will soon begin work on an addition to the store building at 22 Elm street. One of the greenhouses is to be sacrificed for an addition which is to contain a new workroom, the present space being inadequate when all hands are busy making up.

Kennicott Bros. Co. states that its sales last week exceeded the record for the whole month of December. So much for the importance of the peony as a Memorial day flower. Mike Fink says he ate and slept in the store from Tuesday morning to Saturday night.

Louis Wittbold says May was the biggest spring month the George Wittbold Co. ever has had, but that June promises splendidly. Shipping trade has been especially good. A new retail catalogue mailed just before Memorial day is a fine example of the printing arts and is bringing prompt returns. The Edgebrook plant is sending stock to Buckingham place at the rate of five or six wagon-loads a day.

J. Bombenger will expend about $5,000 this summer in modernizing his place at Woodlawn avenue and Sixty-fourth street. A range of new houses to cost $4,000 will be built on the Woodlawn avenue side. The neighborhood is an excellent one, with little competition, though J. H. McNeilly has just opened a retail store, without green-

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Memorial day was cloudy and humid, the first real summer temperature of the year, and a day long to be remembered in eastern floriculture, because of the enormous quantity of blooming plants and cut flowers disposed of. Prices were not abnormal and, in fact, most reasonable compared with many other cities. Boston wholesalers bought in advance over 100,000 carnations in this market and realized a handsome profit on their venture. One house had a buyer here for nearly a week and in addition large quantities of cut flowers were shipped direct to the other wholesale houses of the Hub, where Decoration day is the big day of all the year, far in advance of either Christmas or Easter. Thomas F. Galvin showed me 600 wreaths prepared in anticipation of the demand, and few of the Boston retail stores were closed at all on Friday night.

Beauties sold as high as 30 cents May 28 and the best of the other roses brought 6 cents, but all of these were selected. Carnations did not go above 4 cents and most of the best stock sold at 3 cents. The weather has begun to influence the quality of the roses, especially Killarney.

Cape jasmine from the south can be had at low rates. The street men offer good flowers at 5 cents, badly interfering with the home-grown and long-stemmed stock, which now is offered at $1 per dozen. Orchids are abundant, in all the seasonable varieties, but the demand for weddings probably will hold them at present quotations. Some of the finest gigas sell at 75 cents. Lilies have fallen to 4 cents again. Valley has to compete against enormous quantities of the outdoor crop, and even the demand for wedding bouquets cannot raise it above $2.50 per hundred. The best of the sweet peas are in constant request, but there is no use sending any but the finest to the New York market. Peonies are now at their best and the fine varieties yield $8 per hundred easily. There is a tremendous amount of common stuff, however, that never should be grown at all. The south has flooded us with it. Gladioli are abundant and the best still command $1 per dozen. The market this week overflows with cut blooms from weigelias, snowballs, spiræas and the rambler roses. These will all be largely used in wedding decorations. The many weddings will keep the prices of Beauties, valley and orchids steady all through the month. One retail house has five big weddings booked for June 9 and 10. This may be taken as a sample of the splendid outlook for the retailers during the month.

Various Notes.

The greenhouses near all the cemeteries are depleted. These never had so thorough an appreciation as this Memorial day. There was a call for every-

Monday, June 13, the New York Florists' Club will hold its final meeting of the season. Its importance ought to bring out a record crowd. Tuesday, June 28, the club's annual outing at Wetzel's Grove, College Point, will take place.

The method of the Denver clergyman in New York, in giving a flower to everyone attending the church services, has had wide publicity, and several other New York churches announce a similar distribution. It beats Fathers' day, or any special day, for it can be made a continuous performance.

Kessler Bros. had one lone geranium plant left unsold in their big store Saturday night, a straw which shows how the Memorial day wind was blowing. This firm has purchased five acres of land at Secaucus, N. J., near Emil Savoy's, on which they will erect greenhouses. For the month of June they have secured a store on Sixth avenue near Twenty-eighth street, prior to locating permanently in the new wholesale district on West Twenty-eighth street.

It is A. Warendorff, of Broadway and Twenty-eighth street, who is recuperating this summer, and not Herman, of the Ansonia, as I said last week.

Decoration day week kept many wholesalers away from the Boston orchid exhibition, who had counted on going, J. K. Allen among them. F. H. Traendly and James McManus remained only for a day.

Wadley & Smythe are planting avenues of large shade trees in the grounds of the public library on Fifth avenue and Forty-second street. This firm has done an enormous nursery business this spring. Their nursery at Yonkers is filled with choice importations purchased by Mr. Smythe on his last visit to Europe. They have made large plantings at John D. Rockefeller's estate this year. Last week they had the wedding decoration for E. H. Harriman's daughter.

The Madison Square Garden Real Estate Show last week gave opportunity for enterprise to Hitchings & Co., who exhibited a portable greenhouse, valued at $250, and the Forster Mansfield Co., which displayed rustic work, bamboo conceptions, plant tubs, pergolas, window boxes and other florists' requisites.

Among the prominent members of the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association, who sail for Europe in June, are John Miesem, of Elmhurst, N. Y., and Herman Steinhoff, of West Hoboken, N. J.

Philip Kessler has removed his office and wholesale store to the third floor of the Coogan building, where the Cut Flower Exchange is located, and the wholesale stores of Bonnot Bros., W. H. Siebrecht, A. Smith and Frank Millang.

A. J. Guttman is enthusiastic over the success and prospects of his new enterprise, the Best Oil Co., of which he is president and treasurer. "There's millions in it," he believes, and all his friends hope there are.

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

Florists generally have expressed themselves as well pleased with the business of Memorial day. Comparatively few outdoor plants are in bloom. with the result that most of the flowers used in decorating the resting places of the veterans came from the florists. The children of the Rochester public schools donated 7,500 potted plants and the pupils of the parochial schools furnished over 2,500; most of these came from local growers, and combined with the demand from the G. A. R. and from individuals, the trade was fully as good as in past years. The supply of plants was just about equal to the demand—no shortages reported, nor was there any noticeable surplus.

The sale of bedding plants—coleus, geraniums, asters, etc.—has been rushing and there seems a tendency toward advanced prices. The extremely low rates noted a week or two ago have about disappeared, and instead of 5 cents a dozen for good aster plants, one must now pay from 10 cents to 15 cents. Geraniums quoted at 50 cents a dozen have gone up to 85 cents, and extra choice stock from 4-inch pots brings close to $1.50.

Various Notes.

Supt. Charles H. Vick has prepared detailed plans of the ground floor and gallery of Convention hall, showing the space reserved by various firms for displaying their wares at the coming S. A. F. trade exhibition. Mr. Vick reports that about sixty per cent of the available space has already been engaged, and the prospects are that the exhibition will eclipse previous records. Copies of the detailed plan will be sent to all exhibitors and to others interested by applying to Mr. Vick.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Memorial day brought a most satisfactory business in cut flowers and plants. The weather conditions were favorable, the supply enormous, much of it good quality, and the demand was large. The general opinion is that the volume of business exceeded that of any previous year. Prices were lower, but the satisfaction to the retailers and to the general public was much greater than usual. Roses, carnations and peonies formed the bulk of the supply. The buying was limited to these flowers, comparatively few of other kinds being used. Fowering shrubbery, often so important a factor for Memorial day, was neglected this year, possibly because everybody had his own.

The crop of peonies was timed to a day, good judges estimating that fully seventy-five per cent of the local crop was ready. The ruling price for good peonies was $40 per thousand, selected stock, and smaller quantities going from this price up to $10 per hundred for fancy whites. Something like two-thirds of the flowers were white, while nearly one-third was distributed through the various shades of pink; only five per cent were red. White sold well, probably better than colors, when the quantity is considered.

Carnations, unlike peonies, were wanted in colors, a large proportion of poor white being left over. Owing probably to the immense crop of peonies, the price on carnations was lower than last season. The ruling price was $40 per thousand for the best. A few fancy lots brought $50; select stock from $25 to $30.

Roses were also more popular in colors than in white, the buyers of white roses being able to get better value in consequence, and here, too, a lot of poor stock was left over. Beauties were firm in price and in good demand, but stock was limited. The other roses were most favored in the medium grades, buyers ordering in lots of from 200 to 500 in "your selection," getting thereby good value and indicating a desire for stock that could be used in mixed bunches. There were, however, many fine orders, especially from the south, for choice lots of roses in named varieties.

Of the other flowers, it may be briefly said that the demand for valley and for sweet peas was traceable to weddings and commencements, while orchids were in slight favor. Cornflowers were popular, but Easter lilies suffered badly from the lavish supply of white peonies.

Summing up, the excellence of the Memorial day business is due largely to the fact that the small producers—the retail growers, so to speak—had a good supply of good stock that encouraged business. The shipping demand was excellent. The call from the suburban and cemetery florists was also good. The demand from the center of the city was only moderate.

The last day of May and first day of June have brought great floral activity. The Devon horse show, the school and college commencements and the first weddings caused the social wheel to revolve with extraordinary rapidity. Everything good in flowers is wanted. Beauties, Killarney, cattleyas, sweet peas and valley are all prime favorites where there is quality.

The Spring of Nineteen-Ten.

The three spring months, from March 1 to May 31, have been eventful in the business history of flowers. It is admitted that the love of plants and flowers is growing. While the spring has been one of the most eventful in the history of our business, it has been by no means an unmixed success. March opened badly. The trolleymen's strike and unsettled business conditions proved disastrous. Prices were low and irregular, with no life in the demand. Easter brought an improvement. The ideal weather for a whole week before that day stimulated business as it has rarely been encouraged. The supply was in every way worthy of this great festival, and an excellent market resulted.

The early warm weather, followed by the long weeks of cooler days and nights, brought out and then distributed heavy buying in seeds and plants, both vegetable and flower, to an extent that has given the seedsmen a splendid season.

The cool nights in May have made it possible to keep up the quality of cut flowers to a much higher standard than usual, better prices being obtained for choice stock.

The early Easter, which made it hard to get plants in bloom by March 27, made it easy to flower the next crop by May 30. A full crop of peonies came in for Memorial day.

Reports from Memorial day are not all in, but enough is known to lead to the belief that it was generally good.

The spring business may be chronicled briefly as a bad beginning and a good ending.

The Ball Clip.

There is a modest looking little fastener intended to supersede strings, pins and catches of various kinds in fastening the paper on a parcel of flowers, or a small plant, or a bundle of letters. It is a small device, simply constructed, with a grip that suggests a bull pup, for it cannot let go. The superiority of mind over matter is clearly shown in this instance, as in many others, for it will let go if you wish, but of its own accord, never. Paul Berkowitz says smilingly that there are millions in it, supporting the assertion with the statement that each one of their thousands of customers would use a thousand, etc. When it was suggested that the profit on an article so minute must be proportionately small, Mr. Berkowitz gravely said that it is the little things that count, because when good their use is general; citing the old saw about the pence and pounds in support thereof.

Various Notes.

T. W. Duggan, manager of the Dale Estate, Brampton, Ontario, visited this city May 26 in company with his son. After transacting business, it is pleasant to record that, like true sports, they enjoyed the ball game.

The outdoor rose and peony show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was held in Horticultural hall last Wednesday afternoon and evening.

M. Rice and Mrs. Rice are due to arrive in harbor June 2 on their return from their European trip.

Charles Henry Fox, famous floral artist, is ill with typhoid fever in the Jefferson hospital. Mr. Fox's friends hope that his splendid constitution will quickly rally from the attack.

One of the largest decorations of the week was arranged in Horticultural hall, May 31, by Julius Wolff, Jr., for the wedding of the daughter of a prominent merchant of this city. Ten cases of huckleberry, a southern decorative green, over 1,500 peonies, besides many Beauties, were among the material used.

The Market.

Memorial day trade, about which much guessing had been done for some weeks, was on the whole satisfactory. Any fears that there would be a scarcity of flowers proved utterly groundless. There was a good supply of practically everything and, as usual, large quantities of pickled stock were either cleared out at low rates or left unsold. Compared with 1907, for instance, there was not so good a cleaning-up, but this year far more flowers, both indoor and outdoor, were available.

Red roses sold extra well and were insufficient for demands. The same did not hold true of pink and white varieties. Of these an enormous number were available and prices were quite low, many having to be cleared at $1 and $2 per hundred. Good stock, of course, made much better prices, but on roses there is usually little advance at Memorial day.

Carnations were the most aggressive flowers on the market. Fancy red, crimson and deep pink brought $5 and $6 per hundred, a few as high as $8, while the bulk of good flowers, even whites, made $3 and $4. There was, as usual, a quantity of kept-over stock which had to be unloaded eventually at $1.50 and $2 per hundred, which, if sold a few days earlier, would have netted the growers double the money.

Sweet peas sold all the way from 40 cents to $2, the latter for fancy Spencers. They were in good supply. Easter lilies and callas made $1.50 and $2 per dozen; Spanish iris and small-flowered gladioli, $3 and $4 per hundred. Spiræa Japonica, white candytuft, stocks and double feverfew sold at 25 cents and 50 cents per bunch. Little bulbous stock from outdoors was available, except some double white narcissi and Darwin tulips. Lilac was not of good quality, being mostly on the wane. Marguerites were in strong demand at $1 and $2 per hundred. A few fancy flowers sold higher. There were not enough for the demand. Of lily of the valley some good outdoor stock was available, in addition to the forced article. Of cut shrubs, such as Spiræa Van Houttei and viburnums, there was an abundance, with slow sales. Asparagus Sprengeri sold well, as did plumosus. Of cattleyas and other orchids there was a good supply, but these are beyond the reach of the bulk of Memorial day purchasers.

Briefly summed up, it can be said that shippers of good stock received satisfactory prices. Senders of held-over flowers, as usual, received poor returns.

Since Memorial day business has ruled quiet, with a decided drop in prices. Single peonies are due to appear the last part of the week and the following week doubles should be in full blast. Pot plant trade has been good and bedding plant specialists are tolerably well cleaned out. Geraniums

Some of the finest white candytuft it was ever our privilege to see was sold at C Park street May 28. It was grown by A. S. Parker, of Stoneham, and some stalks made as high as $5 per hundred. triennially. The late show has given a big stimulus to orchid purchasing and all the dealers disposed of large quantities of plants.

William Carr, formerly salesman for the W. W. Edgar Co., who left Boston November 26, 1909, on a trip to the Pacific coast, Panama, etc., returned to Boston May 26, and after his long peregrinations thinks the Hub one of the best places he has struck.

A. A. Pembroke, of Beverly, has a fine house of Spencer sweet peas, which are netting him good money at C Park street at present.

Welch Bros. did the biggest Memorial week's business in their history. As they anticipated, supplies were adequate and, with the exception of red roses and fancy carnations, quite moderate in price.

J. J. Casey, formerly of the Rosary, has opened a new flower store on Huntington avenue.

James Wheeler has the framework and ventilators of his big new house at Natick about all in position and will be ready for glazing in a day or two. Mr. Wheeler has lost a few pounds avoirdupois of late and will hardly come within the heavy weight class at the coming club picnic.

William H. Elliott sold more roses May 28 than on any day since he was in business, the number approximating 100,000.

The newly formed gladiolus society got a good send-off May 27 and the increasing interest in this flower should draw many adherents to its ranks. Like the peony society, it will have plenty of work ahead in straightening out the nomenclature. At the recent orchid show John Lewis Childs had a nice stand of gladioli.

Peirce Bros., of Waltham, had a heavy cut of gladioli for Memorial day, all of which they had no trouble in cleaning out at good prices. They also had a big lot of spiræas and carnations.

H. M. Robinson & Co. were kept on the jump practically night and day for a few days before Memorial day and were more than satisfied with the volume of business transacted.

Peonies in this section never looked better and a grand exhibition at Horticultural hall, June 9 and 10, is certain.

The baseball team of the Park Street market expects to go to Madbury, N. H., June 4, to play the employees in W. H. Elliott's rose houses.

Memorial day proved moderately cool, with occasional showers in the afternoon. The wholesale markets cleaned up well Memorial day morning, sales being brisk.

The selection of Mechanics building for the national S. A. F. flower show in 1911 insures ample space for everyone. A reduced rental of $4,900 for one week has been secured. We think this is as long as it will pay to run even so large an exhibition in Boston, unless it contains some extraordinary attractions. W. N. Craig.

The great popularity of Martin E. Tuohy, the Broadway florist, is attested by the fact that the Tuohy Club, a social organization of young men, was named after him. It is stated that at the club's annual dancing party, held recently in Bethesda hall, "the striking feature of the evening was Mr. Tuohy's shamrock vest, which has caused much comment throughout the district."

Muncie, Ind.—The business of Hiram Warfel has now been incorporated, under the name of the Warfel Floral Co., with a capital of $10,000. The directors are Hiram Warfel, Lottie C. Warfel and Francis A. Shaw.

HEAVENLY HOUSTON.

In the Review of May 19, I note that "ten months of the year it is not a question of supply, but of one's ability to find an outlet for the stock." Down here in Heavenly Houston, Texas, as Colonel Bailey, of the Houston Post, aptly names our city, it has not been a question as to an outlet, but of where to get the stock.

We note a paragraph that "the comet has got past at last." Well, since its passage Texas has been blessed with more copious rains than she has enjoyed in the last two years. All our market gardeners, truckers and farmers all through South Texas are jubilant. Let the comet come every year. J. M.

Berlin, Md.—Wet weather is doing an injury to the strawberry crop, an important source of income to many florists and nurserymen on the peninsula.

The Market.

The Memorial day business was quite gratifying to the wholesalers and retailers. Lots of stock of every description was sold and, had it been forthcoming, more might have been disposed of, especially in the cheaper grade of flowers. In the first few days of last week business was slow. From some consignors who had been sending in good stock all along, little or nothing was received for Decoration day.

Roses continue in large supply and find a good request. There were enough carnations to meet the regular demands upon the market. The same is true of sweet peas. More peonies could have been sold, had they been on hand; the lighter varieties were generally of excellent quality. Ten weeks' stocks and iris found ready sales. Longiflorums and lily of the valley were also offered.

The whole line of decorative greens, even boxwood, sold well. The ferns, smilax and plumosus were of good quality.

Last Thursday, Friday and Saturday the wholesalers were kept busy getting out shipping orders. The request in these orders was mostly for greens, peonies and carnations.

The florists in the flower market enjoyed a profitable day on Saturday. All the cut flowers except longiflorum lilies, and most of the bedding stock, sold readily.

Various Notes.

William Murphy says the Memorial day business was the best he ever had. He received heavy cuts of carnations from Alfred and Ed Murphy, sweet peas from Charles Murphy and double ten weeks' stocks from C. C. Murphy, who had a 150-foot house of these last in full bloom. Mr. Murphy also has large orders on carnations booked for St. Louis.

C. E. Critchell, for the first time in years, was out of ferns the other day. He had to wait a few hours, until his next shipment came from the woods, to fill and ship his orders. He had a good call for cut flowers, greens and metal wreaths for Decoration day.

Weiland & Olinger report that this year's Memorial day business was away ahead of that of last year. They expect plenty of good peonies and roses for the June commencements and weddings.

J. A. Peterson sold many fine cut iris of the different varieties, and also hydrangea plants, for Decoration day.

R. Witterstaetter's Memorial day business was the best he ever had for that day.

E. G. Gillett's force of wire workers are kept busy filling his orders. His wire baskets are especially substantial and artistic.

L. H. Kyrk's cornflowers and delphiniums were in demand for Memorial day.

August Sunderbruch celebrated his eightieth birthday anniversary on Thursday, May 26. He is still as hale and hearty as he ever was.

Tom Windram is reported as practicing with his new Cadillac touring car from the house to the barn. He is hesitating about venturing on the pike. Alexandria pike, past his home, is, however, one of the finest automobile drives in this vicinity.

J. M. McCullough's Sons Co. had a pretty display of oriental poppies from Albert McCullough's own private conservatories.

A. H. Goekel tells us there is a new florist in town. A baby son arrived at his home on Tuesday, May 24.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Twenty-eighth annual meeting, Atlantic City, N. J., June 21 to 23, 1910.

T. Outerbridge, lily grower in Bermuda, is visiting the trade in eastern cities.

There should be no trouble over lettuce next season, unless, indeed, there is too much.

A summary of the rules of procedure of the newly-established customs court will be found on page 55 of this issue.

The Reichardt & Schulte Co., Houston, Tex., says that taking inventory July 1 will be the simplest matter in years—never a closer clean-up than this season.

Pansy seed sold splendidly last season, and those who bought it have had just as good a demand for the plants, so the prospects are that seed will again sell unusually well.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has issued Bulletin No. 392, "Irrigation of Sugar Beets," which will be of interest to the seedsmen who find sugar beet seed an important item.

E. Suhr, Copenhagen, Denmark, is visiting the seed trade as far west as Chicago. For some fifteen years he has grown cabbage and cauliflower seeds for the Danish exporters, and is now beginning to export for his own account. This is his first trip to America.

PEAS IN WISCONSIN.

At Green Bay, Wis., May 28, E. L. Olmsted, superintendent for the Clark Co., said:

"Regarding the present condition of the pea crop, will say that peas in this section are in good condition and are making satisfactory growth. The damage from the cold spell and storms in April was not as great as we feared it would be, only a small portion of the total acreage showing a thinner stand as the result, so far as we have seen or heard. We have had only a few really warm days since the storm; consequently the peas are no farther advanced, on the average, than is usual at this time, in spite of the early spring. There is sufficient moisture and this, with the cool weather, makes favorable conditions for a very good vine growth."

PEAS IN MICHIGAN.

Writing at Harrisville, Mich., May 31, C. B. Pyle, of the Sheap-Johnson Seed Co., said:

"The condition of peas throughout this section up to one week ago was favorable for a fair crop, the bad weather just after planting time not having done as much damage as had been estimated. For the last week, however, we have been passing through a period of cold and rainy weather, while today the thermometer is hovering around 34 degrees and the danger now of a heavy freeze is giving much concern. It is impossible, therefore, at this date to determine just what these conditions will develop, and we prefer to wait before venturing any predictions."

THANKFUL IT ISN'T WORSE.

That it is a duty to wear a smiling countenance under present conditions, and be thankful they are no worse, is the opinion of Arthur B. Clark, president of the Everett B. Clark Seed Co. He finds the weather not altogether to the liking of the seed crops, but will be satisfied with immunity from anything less favorable. Writing from Milford, Conn., May 25, Mr. Clark said:

"The superintendent of our Michigan branch has just reported that through his territory there was a period of weather unfavorable to the crop of peas, along about May 15, with freezing weather at night and cold winds during the day. Peas, however, are better able to withstand such conditions than drought and heat in the later stages of against seeding early, to which the unusually fine weather in March tempted growers in many sections.

"However, although Mr. Olmsted had anticipated some injury to our crops in his territory outside of the Door county section, he has been able to report to us now that he believes the damage to have been small—much less, indeed, than one would have supposed. In fact, he has been able to learn of hardly more than two or three crops, one of the Everbearing and one of Ameers, that have been seriously injured by the April storm, and he gives us a most encouraging report as to present conditions, the weather, since the storm, having been as favorable as one could ask, providing frequent rains, with moderately cool weather.

"As to conditions here in Connecticut, we consider that thus far they have been favorable. The acreage of our principal crops is about an average acreage, and the biennial seed crops have obtained a nice start and, for this time of the season, promise well. Sweet corn planting is completed. The seed planted is of fair average strength and, with the conditions that we are getting, we think it should germinate satisfactorily. Warmer nights would be more favorable to this crop, but in view of the conditions that we have undergone for years past, we feel that it is our duty to bear a smiling countenance in view of present conditions and to hope for immunity from anything worse. A good crop is due us and, in our opinion, a good average crop will be the best thing for the seed trade in general, as we have had a succession of years of shortage quite sufficient for the good of the business."

THE SEED SEASON.

Weather the Principal Factor.

Taking it by and large, the seed selling season for 1910 has been a satisfactory one. The volume of business has been large, both for mail order and counter trade, though it did not with everyone equal the best previous records. The summing up shows that weather conditions were a more important factor than stock shortages. January and February were so cold that orders were slow to attain normal, full volume; then came a warm March, with the biggest month's business most houses ever did, followed by a cold April and cool May. Where April showed a big increase, the other months of the season show a decrease.

The following letters will give a view of the season as it now appears to leading houses in the trade:

Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis.

This season's mail order trade has been the largest in our history. It opened up early, continued well, and is holding out long.

James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y.

The season of 1910 has been exceptionally good and the orders have averaged larger than usual. The open weather in March made an unusual rush of orders, bothering us somewhat to get them out on time. The month of April really was not quite up to last year; still, the average business of 1910 will be far ahead of a year ago.

Currie Bros. Co., Milwaukee.

The season has been a remarkable one in many respects, and generally satisfactory, the volume of business being greater than in any previous year. There were drawbacks, however, mainly due to short deliveries. The warm weather in March caused an unusual influx of orders early in the season, with a corresponding dearth of orders in April, when cold weather again set in. The demand for both farm and garden seeds during May has been unusually active, and there never was a time when stocks were so thoroughly cleaned up with us.

S. M. Isbell & Co., Jackson, Mich.

With us the catalogue trade of 1910 will hardly equal 1909 in volume of business. January and February were very cold, and we had no weather to induce seed buying. March came with unprecedentedly warm weather, which was so general all over the country that we had an influx of orders from every quarter. In April we had our March weather, so that from a seedsman's point of view conditions have been rather unusual, and therefore unfavorable to a large trade. Then, too, the prices of several standard items were unusually high.

Had it not been for the unusual weather and high prices, we believe this would have been a banner year.

A. C. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

It is early to say what our total spring business will amount to, as our season continues well past the middle of June. Our March showed double last year's trade, but April fell off one-third. The first half of May was much below normal, although we have had unusual trade in perennials, but since May 15 we have had warm weather, plenty of rain and the accompanying rush. The outlook for trade in tender vegetable and bedding plants is highly promising.

Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O.

We believe the present season's business with us has shown a slight gain on previous years. This is probably due, however, to our somewhat increased advertising appropriation, and we do not believe that, in the main, the season has been any more favorable in the seed trade than that of 1909. Seed potatoes, both Irish and sweet, also onion sets, gradually declined in price throughout the season, making it difficult to unload a portion of these stocks. It was rather a losing game with us.

However, we had about the same large demand for our choice varieties of tomato seed as in former years, and this was especially true of the Livingston's Globe throughout the south.

A. T. Boddington, New York, N. Y.

On an average, our business has gone away ahead of last year. The months of January and February ran about ten per cent ahead, and March and April about twenty-five per cent. However, it seems to us that May will drop back about twenty-five per cent, and we think this will be the general report of the seed trade for the month of May. This comes from the fact that, owing to the unusual weather previous to this month, the spring had opened up very early. In New York state, peaches were one month ahead of their usual time of flowering.

We have found unusual demand for cannas this season, and for all bulbous stock. Sweet pea seed has sold exceptionally well. We find a much greater demand for the named varieties, especially the Spencer type, and less call for mixed seed. This matter of mixture applies to almost all kinds of stock handled by us this season. People are beginning to learn that they can secure better varieties by ordering them to name.

Vegetable seed stocks are cleaned up wonderfully well and there has been a considerable scarcity of all varieties of peas and beans. The present outlook, from various reports, is somewhat disquieting at this date also. We think that stocks have been cleaned up quite generally this year. There has also been a great demand for all varieties of roses, of which we handled about 60,000 this season.

W. W. Rawson & Co., Boston.

There can be no doubt but what the season of 1910 will go down in history as a record breaker, for every element that could possibly be produced to favor a prolonged season was this year in evidence.

The increase that we experienced this year in our business is so large that we dare not give it in figures, lest we might be accused of exaggerating. We do not believe that all this success is due to the favorable season, but we also know that it is partially due to the judicious advertising and proper publicity work.

The opportunities in the seed business have scarcely yet been touched, in our opinion, and the future holds abundant fortune for all. In certain lines this year the sales have been phenomenal, particularly in items in which we have specialized, and which we have catalogued separately. As far as the seeds are concerned, we have been able to clean up stocks which in ordinary seasons would have been a burden on our hands, and we sincerely hope there will be but few crop failures this fall, or else we should be compelled to buy in the open market.

The season began extremely early—three or four weeks earlier than usual, for this location—and with night work starting the first of March, we looked forward to May 15, the latest, as the end of the season, but even today, May 24, we are rushed to our limit, and we cannot see the end in sight.

The most remarkable feature that has come to our notice is the unusual increase in the demand for vegetable plants; an increase of 500 per cent over the season of 1909 would put it but mildly. Fortunately, there is always a surplus of these plants; or at least it is provided for.

We are looking forward to a most promising fall season.

Joseph Breck & Sons, Boston.

The season started in early and so far has been a satisfactory one with us.

Sioux City Seed & Nursery Co.

The seed business for 1909-10 in this vicinity has had a fair advance over former years. All in all, trade has been very satisfactory.

Wm. Henry Maule, Philadelphia.

The season has been most satisfactory. In fact, notwithstanding a poor April business, we have done by all odds the largest business in the thirty-four years' history of our firm. At the same time, whether we shall make as much money as we have the last three or four years is a question, as every year the expense account seems to increase, and while our gross profits have been something phenomenal, the expense account is in a similar condition.

This has been the best season's trade we have ever had, especially in the garden seed department. While seeds have been scarce and it has been hard

AMMONIATED
LAWN LIME
Kills Weeds—Makes Grass Grow

Applied as a light top dressing to lawns, it kills all flat leaved weeds, such as Dandelion, Daisy, Plantain, Sorrel, Chickweed, Moss, etc., in 48 hours, and without other fertilizer produces a wonderful, luxuriant, rich green growth of lawn grasses, which is distinctly noticeable 50 feet away.

The use of Ammoniated Lawn Lime supersedes hand weeding of lawns, putting greens, etc. It saves the grass from being pulled up and in many cases ruined. Grasses take a new, vigorous growth, avoiding probable trouble in future.

Quantities: If very weedy, 1 lb. to 40 sq. ft.; 25 lbs. to 1000 sq. ft. (20x50). Half to one-quarter amount if moderately weedy.

ABSOLUTELY GUARANTEED
Money refunded if not satisfactory.

PRICES: 5 lbs., 50c; 25 lbs., $2.00; 50 lbs., $3.50; 100 lbs., $6.00.

We will ship a 100-lb. bag of Ammoniated Lawn Lime at $6.00 f. o. b. Louisville, to any Superintendent of a Cemetery, Park or Private Estate, where references are furnished. It is absolutely guaranteed as represented. If used as directed. If not satisfactory, we are to be notified within 30 days from date of invoice.

Cut Dahlia Flowers Pay

If you have the following varieties and plant them NOW

After considerable consideration and observation, and "talks" with the trade, we decided to offer the following Dahlias to florists this season. Price, $1.00 per 12, $8.00 per 100; Our Selection, 75c per 12, $6.00 per 100.

Decorative Dahlias

Auguste Nonin. Clear scarlet, a large and superb flower, borne abundantly, always above the foliage. Flowers are always perfect.
Beauty of Kent. Well named, beautiful in form, color and appearance. Deep crimson-red, with distinct pure white tips; most effective and at once catches the eye; free-blooming and fairly large.
Camellia. A dwarf, bushy plant, attaining a height of 2½ feet with small, but prolific foliage and myriads of small-sized perfect flowers of a coppery orange. The shape of the flower is just like a Camellia and lasts well when cut.
Catherine Duer. Crimson-scarlet.
Clifford W. Bruton. Best yellow.
Firefly. A most striking variety on account of its color, fiery orange-scarlet, with distinct white tips.
Frank L. Bassett. Bright purple, shading to blue.
Lyndhurst. Bright scarlet.
Maid of Kent. Cherry-red, tipped white.
Nymphaea. Color clear, light shrimp-pink.
Orange King. Rich glowing orange; early and profuse.
Source de Feu. New. Deep orange, splashed and streaked with vermilion-scarlet, a dazzling color; flowers gigantic and on long stems. Four feet.
William Agnew. Rich, dazzling red; immense size.

Giant Decorative Dahlias

Gigantea. Its name suggests the size; truly gigantic and massive in form. The individual petals are short and it requires many to form such a monstrous flower. Color a soft sulphur-yellow.
Souvenir de Gustave Doazan. The most sensational Dahlia of the season; a decorative variety of mammoth proportions, which under ordinary cultivation will produce flowers 6 inches across, and can be grown to measure full 9 inches. It is of free growth, remarkably profuse-flowering, and pure scarlet in color.

Cactus Dahlias

Countess of Lonsdale. Amber and salmon.
Earl of Pembroke. Bright plum.
Kriemhilde. One of the finest pink Cactus Dahlias.
Standard Bearer. Brightest scarlet; profuse bloomer.

Show and Fancy Dahlias

Acquisition. Rich, royal deep mauve; splendid exhibition flower.
A. D. Livoni. Beautiful soft pink; early and profuse bloomer.
Alice Emily. Delicate buff, center clear yellow.
Arabella. Pale primrose, tipped and shaded old rose and lavender.
Comedian. Orange ground, beautifully flaked and speckled with crimson and tipped white; of the finest form. Four feet.
Criterion. Delicate rose; large and fine.
Gloire de Lyon. Very large, pure white.
Glowing Coal. Brilliant red.
Gold Mantle. Golden yellow, neat and good; requires thinning.
Gold Medal. Bright canary-yellow, regularly marked with fine stripes and splashes of deep red.
Grand Duke Alexis. Very large white, tinted pale lavender.
Green's White. One of the best whites for cutting.
Harlequin. Brilliant crimson, striped and tipped white.
John Thorpe. Very large; soft, rich pink.
La Republique. Creamy white, overlaid with rose; very fine.
Menheddy Beauty. Fancy buff, with crimson spots, free long stems, large bloom.
Mrs. Gladstone. Delicate soft pink; large and splendid form; the finest pink Dahlia.

Mrs. Reggie Green. Color a pure white ground, slightly flaked and veined with rosy purple.
Mrs. Chas. Lanier. This grand new Show Dahlia is one of unquestionable merit; color deep brilliant yellow; flowers of immense size; free-blooming.
Norma. Bright orange-buff; good outline.
Rev. J. B. M. Camm. Yellow, flaked red.
Rosamund. A very fine selling flower, white ground, heavily edged with crimson.
Watchman. Rich golden yellow, heavily striped and blotched with crimson.
White Swan. Snow-white, with long stems.

Single Dahlias

The 20th Century. Intense rosy crimson, with white tips and white disc around yellow center.
Maroon Century. Rich maroon, shaded plum; very large and velvety.
Pink Century. In size it is from 6½ to 8 inches in diameter; a strong, vigorous grower with fern-like foliage; color is a delicate shell-pink, slightly suffused, clear, soft pink.
Rose-Pink Century. By far the largest and best, in fact, the only clear rose-pink Century, of immense size, perfect form and great substance. Very strong, heavy plant, with 2 to 3-foot flower stems, bearing the giant flowers erectly, making it the most valuable as a plant or for cutting.

Dahlias to Color

We can also furnish, without names, in mixture, all colors separate, or all colors mixed as follows:

Mixed Pinks, Mixed White, Mixed Reds, Mixed Yellows, 75c per doz., $5.50 per 100, $50.00 per 1000.

Mixed, all colors, 60c per doz., $4.50 per 100, $40.00 per 1000.

o secure such quality of seeds as we lesire to sell, we have been able to keep our drawers well filled, supplying most of our customers with their entire stock.

Holmes Seed Co., Harrisburg, Pa.

The general seed trade has been better this year than we have ever experienced heretofore. The mail order business, in particular, has been ahead of all previous records. Owing to a cold spring, the store business has not increased as much as some of the other departments; yet the wholesale department is about twenty per cent in advance of any previous year.

Just at present we are busy with bedding stock and are handling quite a lot of it; in fact, more than heretofore. Also the demand for cabbage, tomato plants, etc., has been more extensive this year than heretofore.

Wood, Stubbs & Co., Louisville, Ky.

We have enjoyed a good deal better trade in the garden seed department this year than usual, the sales being considerably advanced over the corresponding months of last year. The small mail order business seems to be holding up exceptionally well this season.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seeds through the port of New York for the week ending May 21 were as follows:

eron's superintendency. A recent report of Prof. Goodale, the retiring professor of botany at Harvard College, highly commends the splendid work done by Mr. Cameron at Harvard.

Since making his home in Boston, Mr. Cameron has actively identified himself with all its horticultural interests. He is a life member of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, served for many years as one of the plant and flower committee and of late years has made a most efficient superintendent of exhibitions, having charge of the arrangement of the exhibits and always being on hand when needed. He has for many years been a staunch supporter of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, being "one of the faithful among the many faithless found" when the club's fortunes were at their lowest ebb. He rarely misses a meeting and is ever ready to join in a discussion, read a practical essay, escort a lady lecturer to the platform, boom banquets, dances and picnics, and lend his aid along every possible line. He served as one of the executive committee in 1897, 1898, 1907, 1908 and 1909, and as vice-president in 1899. The presidency will undoubtedly be his in the near future, in spite of his natural diffidence, as no one has the club's interests more at heart.

Mr. Cameron was for years a regular contributor to the columns of Garden and Forest and no one regretted more than he the passing of that paper. He frequently contributes articles to present-day magazines. As a lecturer and judge his services are frequently requisitioned outside of the Hub.

Frequently men having charge of botanic gardens are more botanical than practical, but a visit to Harvard will satisfy anyone that as a practical grower Mr. Cameron is in the front ranks, and his many fine exhibits in Boston each year testify both to his skill as a grower and his taste as an arranger of groups. In connection with the coming S. A. F. national show, he has already done much valuable work, and it is safe to say that on the roll of honor for valuable horticultural work accomplished in Boston and vicinity, few will stand higher than Robert Cameron.

W. N. Craig.

STEVIAS.

Stevias, though rather old-fashioned, are useful midwinter flowers and should not be overlooked. Plenty of nice cuttings are now to be had from the plants propagated six weeks ago and these will grow along into nice 8-inch pots before winter. Any time after they go into their flowering pots or boxes, they are better kept outdoors. The common plan of planting outdoors has serious drawbacks, as stevias break easily when even carefully handled, and even if kept well pinched they often break to pieces during rain and wind storms.

Richmond, Va.—The building owned by Ratcliffe & Tanner, at 25 West Broad street, and formerly occupied by them, is now being torn down, preparatory to erecting the much larger structure which is demanded by their fast developing trade. Meanwhile the firm is conducting business in a store next door. The new building will be ready for their use about September 1.

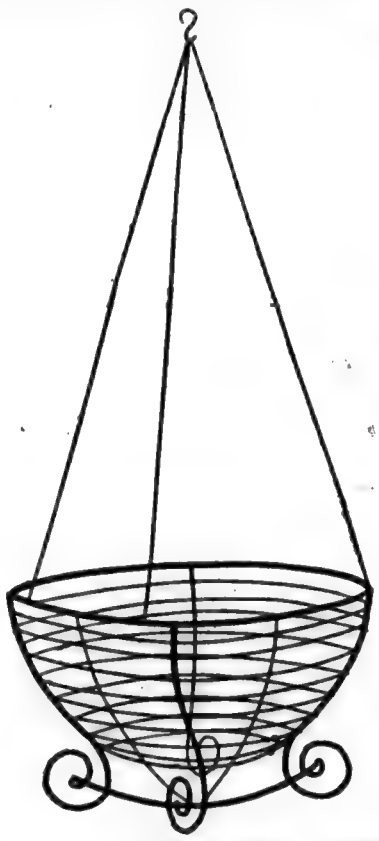
FORCING STRAWBERRIES.

Please give brief directions for forcing strawberries, as to soil, temperature, best varieties, etc., and state whether the plants as they are supplied by dealers in the early fall can be made to bear during the following winter.

F. R.

The soil for strawberries should not be too heavy or too sandy—just a medium black loam, containing a little sand and some well-rotted manure. It should be clean, new soil that has not been lying around the houses. If from a pile of compost that has been stacked for a year or so, all the better.



It is usually better to purchase the plants from a dealer early in August than to try to start only a few yourself, but this is the most important part of the business. You want some 2½-inch pot plants, not runners, and they must be of the right kinds. The pot plants are started from runners from the plants in the field, and are grown in the greenhouses in 2½-inch pots until ready to shift or to set out. For forcing, they should be potted into 6-inch pots, if they are well established when received. Plunge these pots in soil, shavings or ashes, in a deep, cold frame, where they will be protected from drying out too fast. Watch them closely and attend to the watering carefully. You must get them well established before fall, or they will not force well. Do not use any sashes or shading over them at all. They should have a good potful of roots and a good crown before cold weather.

After freezing weather, cover them with leaves or straw to keep them from thawing and freezing. Take them into the greenhouse about eight or nine weeks before the time when they are wanted ripe. Hold them cool for a month—about 45 degrees at night and 55 degrees in the daytime. Then raise the temperature 10 degrees until they commence to turn color; then raise it another 10 degrees. The process is similar to forcing bulbs or dormant shrubs.

Few varieties of strawberries are suitable for forcing. The earliest and latest varieties, also the largest and smallest fruited ones, are to be discarded. Bisexual or perfect flowered sorts are to be preferred to the pistillate ones, although The President is a pistillate variety and quite good. Brandywine is hard to beat.

Dayton, O.—C. M. Schaefer, of the Advance Floral Co., says that business would be excellent if the rains only would let up, so outdoor work might go on steadily.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We are within a few days of Decoration day and already the signs are for a heavy trade, both in local business and shipping orders. Although flowers are not quite as plentiful as they were a week ago, they are still enough in evidence to show that there will be no scarcity of them next week.

Carnations show a slight falling off in supply and the price has advanced somewhat. The best whites cost the stores from $2 to $3 per hundred, while the pink and red sorts are a shade cheaper. With roses there is even a greater rise in price. The best Brides and Maids are held by the growers at from $4 to $6 per hundred and Beauties are worth about twice these quotations. Sweet peas are by far the most popular flower at this time and, owing to the continued spell of cool weather, they are better than we usually have to offer at the end of May. The stems are uniformly long and the flowers are of good color and texture, which makes them desirable either for shipping or loose bunches. Bride gladioli are in good demand and cost the retailers $1 per hundred. Easter lilies are not quite so plentiful as they have been and the growers are getting from $1 to $3 per dozen. Marguerites, cornflowers, stocks, coreopsis, dahlias, Shasta daisies, candytuft and gypsophila are coming in handy for all kinds of shipping orders, and large quantities are being sent to the country dealers.

From present indications, we will have a busy Memorial day and the quiet season which we have enjoyed for the last few weeks will give place to heavy trading, both in the city stores and out-of-town shipments.

Various Notes.

Adolph Johnson, well known to all the gardening fraternity in the neighborhood of the bay cities, is at present in the city of Mexico.

J. M. Holland, of Peralta Park, Berkeley, is erecting a plant house, 20x 100 feet, on his grounds.

E. W. McLellan & Co., of Burlingame, are cutting some extra fine Brides and Maids at this time.

J. M. Hutchings, of Fruitvale, is making heavy preparations for another season's trade. His stock of young ferns looks remarkably healthy and several thousand poinsettias are already rooted in the cutting beds.

W. J. Graham has returned from an outing at Soquel, Cal.

David Neely, one of the best known nurserymen in the neighborhood of San Francisco, died in Berkeley May 25. Further particulars with reference to him will be found in this week's obituary column.

J. W. Delahanty, formerly of Rochester and New York, is in town, with the intention of permanently locating here.

rists have been busy. Everyone is looking forward to a good trade in June, with its many weddings and commencements.

Some fine longiflorum lilies from outside are coming in. They are grown in Santa Ana. They sell for $5 a dozen stalks, at retail. Centaureas are used largely in funeral work and have a good call. Gladioli are blooming finely now, and many miniature ones are also to be seen. Orchids continue plentiful, with good sales. Cornflowers, coreopsis, gaillardias and Shasta daisies are in all the stores and sell well.

There was no shortage of flowers here for Decoration day.

Outside-grown carnations are in great oversupply. Many of the growers are letting them go to waste on the plants, as they do not bring in enough to pay for cutting. Greenhouse-grown ones are large and fine yet and the best bring 75 cents a dozen.

Various Notes.

Jack D'Ortignac, of the Redondo Floral Co., has sold out to his partner and expects to open a wholesale store.

Morton & Darling have moved from their former location on West Third street into the Hayward hotel, at the corner of Spring and Sixth streets.

Lichtenberger & Wolfskill, who have been conducting two stores, have been obliged to vacate the one on Broadway, as the building is being torn down. They will continue business in the store on West Fifth street. They report a good business, with several weddings booked for early June. Mr. and Mrs. Lichtenberger will leave July 1 for Maine, where they will spend the summer.

Mr. Reymond, of the Roserie, has gone abroad and will spend two or three months in France.

J. W. Wolfskill will move from his present location one door farther east, where he is fitting up a store in the Angelus hotel. It is to be finished in white enamel and has a tile window. He is showing some exceptionally large, fine gladiolus blooms from stock imported by himself.

H. Bateman, formerly of Morris Goldenson's, is now to be found at the Angelus flower store. G. C. Eischen, who has been at the latter place so long, is taking a much needed vacation, which he is spending on his father's ranch at Montebello.

R. W. Saakes, on Main street, was getting ready to deliver a lot of designs for a funeral. The peculiar thing about it was that every one was artificial, and California is the land of flowers!

Charles Corrette, of Pomona, a chrysanthemum specialist, is adding many new varieties to his already large stock.

J. B. Monasco, of Eagle Rock Valley, is making great preparations for fall and has bought heavily of new varieties of chrysanthemums. He will grow larger quantities than ever before of Bonnaffon, as the demand for this has always been greater than the supply.

Adin Alexander, of Boyle Heights, a grower of Cochet roses, died suddenly last week. He was 79 years of age.

Wright's Flower Shop was, as usual, overflowing with flowers of all kinds. They are getting in some beautiful water lilies of all colors. They had a display of poppies which are exceedingly beautiful. The flowers are single and are five or six inches in diameter. The petals are crinkled like crepe and are pure white, with yellow centers. The plants grow six to ten feet tall and are of shrubby growth. This firm is building four new houses, 300 feet long, in addition to those built earlier this spring. They have ten acres in hardy flowers, for which there is always a good demand through the summer and fall. They always seem to be doing a brisk business and have a large force of clerks. S. A. C.

MEMORIAL DAY TRADE.

Lake City, Ia.—M. M. Titus says Memorial day trade was excellent; everything in cut flowers cleaned up and more might have been sold.

Glouster, O.—D. A. Steadman reports Memorial day business the best ever recorded in this vicinity. It was a general clean-up.

Lincoln, Neb.—C. H. Frey says that trade simply is immense, both in plants and cut flowers, with profitable prices. Stock is of good quality for this season of the year.

Phoenix, R. I.—George Whitford says that about the best thing he had for Memorial day was galax wreaths with clusters of Killarney or White Killarney roses. The roses were fine and the wreaths sold splendidly.

Calumet, Mich.—In the copper country and along the south shore of Lake Superior, where the florists' business is increasing rapidly, the trade had to contend with a blizzard on Memorial day, so severe that train schedules were demoralized.

De Kalb, Ill.—J. L. Johnson, of the De Kalb greenhouses, says Decoration day business was immense and every available flower was sold at 10 a. m. Plant trade also was excellent, though there has not been much bedding done here yet. He thinks there will be a shortage of geraniums in this vicinity.

MULCHING OUTDOOR PEAS.

A customer would like to know if it would assist the blooming period of outdoor sweet peas to top-dress the soil after the plants are six or eight inches high. If so, what kind of a top-dressing do you recommend?

R. G.

A mulch of meadow hay, straw, grass or littery manure spread between the rows of sweet peas as a mulch is of great benefit. If you can secure it, some rather fresh manure of a strawy nature will answer capitally. Old, spent hotbed manure is equally good. A mulch of this kind serves a double purpose in keeping the ground both moist and cool, conditions necessary for the successful flowering of sweet peas. Loosen the soil well before applying the mulch.

ELMER D. SMITH & CO., Adrian, Mich.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

The Market.

Business since last report has been good. We are in the midst of the planting season, which, owing to some unfavorable weather, was delayed considerably, and those that follow this line largely are kept on the jump continuously and are taking advantage of every good day. With a few more good days, this work will be wound up nicely, although a good many straggling orders will be booked until the latter part of June.

Geranium plants at $1.50 per dozen are getting to be the thing with us and a majority of the florists are getting that price for them. Although two grades are shown, customers prefer the big plants, which are the pick of the lot. The small plants are the $1 grade, and the most of these that are unsold grow into $1.50 stock in a week or two. Three or four years ago the Kentucky Society of Florists held a meeting for the purpose of raising the prices on 4-inch geraniums and other bedding stock, but could not come to any agreement, as a majority thought that would kill the sale of bedding stock. They were badly fooled, however, and those who are still selling them at $1 are just 50 cents out, and are beginning to realize that it is not such a hard matter to get a little more for your stock if you grow it a little better.

Window boxes are getting quite popular and a few more have been filled this year than formerly.

Cut flowers for all occasions have had a good, steady call, and all stock is in good shape. Carnations are holding up well and some good stock is being cut, considering the season. Some fine roses are to be had and in good quantities. Peonies are on the move. A few outdoor peas are coming in, but the bulk are indoor grown and are satisfactory in both quality and quantity. Other cut flowers are in good shape. Green goods are again in fair supply.

Various Notes.

The wholesale grocers' convention, which took place last week, was about the finest thing in the way of a convention that has hit this city for a long while, from the florists' standpoint. Jacob Schulz furnished 350 Richmond roses and 250 Beauties for the grocerymen.

A. Rasmussen continues to cut some good Killarneys, Brides and other roses.

Geo. E. Schulz will build a handsome residence in Kenilworth place this summer. Work will be started in a few days.

Mrs. C. B. Thompson has had several pretty window displays. K. R.

Franklin, Mass.—William Doel, of Pascoag, has taken possession of the Slade greenhouses and is ready for business.

Why delay ordering your Begonia Gloire de Lorraine? You will soon want them sure. We are equipped better than ever to supply excellent stock, 2½-in. pots, twice transplanted, at $15.00 per 100; $140.00 per 1000.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The last week was one that will probably be remembered for a long time. The first half was rainy and cold, which prevented people from planting. Then the rush came, in the last three days, and an effort was made to supply all demands for plants, but this was impossible. Anything in bloom was what was wanted and such stock was not plentiful, but there were thousands of plants sold with only a speck of bloom.

Saturday night found all plantsmen about worn out, but as it looks as if there might be better weather, they will likely finish such work this week.

Among the cut flower men business was satisfactory. Early in the week much of the stock was not good, but in the latter part of the week there were immense quantities of everything. There were elegant roses and the carnations were abundant and good. Peonies were in better shape than usual and lilies were never finer. Everything was cleaned up, but at reasonable prices. People would buy if they could get good stock at a reasonable price, but passed up anything for which a fancy price was asked. Yet, taken all in all, it was a most satisfactory Decoration day from the wholesalers' standpoint.

The retailers, of course, were more than busy, with plants and cut flowers together, and all admit that it was a good Decoration day. They found their customers wanted cheap flowers, but the volume of sales was satisfactory.

The immense quantities of outside flowers, aside from keeping the prices down, did not interfere with greenhouse stock, as everything was sold.

Various Notes.

Charles Koenig was there with the lilies for Decoration day, and the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., which handles his stock, was able to take care of all demands along this line.

P. S. Randolph has purchased a Buick touring car.

Fred Burki has turned his horses out to pasture and bought a fine, big touring car, from which he expects to derive much pleasure this summer.

PITTSBURG NOTES.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Burki and John Bader, who have been at Mount Clemens for several weeks, surprised their friends by stepping into their midst on Saturday night. Both Mr. Burki and Mr. Bader were improved in health, but neither had entirely recovered.

B. L. Elliott, manager for John Bader, reports an exceptionally good season in the plant line, but they still have some good stock to sell.

William Falconer, superintendent of Allegheny cemetery, after several years has transformed that old, overgrown cemetery into one of the most beautiful in the country. He has spent a quarter of a million dollars in the work during the last three years and people generally only commenced to appreciate it this spring, but each year it will become more beautiful and Pittsburgers will not need to be told again about the beautiful eastern cemeteries. And all this has been accomplished under growing conditions that would make the average man throw up his hands in disgust.

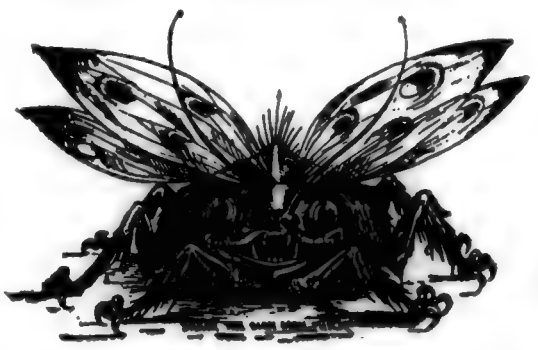
Mrs. E. C. Ludwig, who has been at the Allegheny General Hospital for an operation, is recovering slowly.

De Forest Ludwig, who has just returned from a trip east, is suffering with a badly poisoned hand and arm.

Hoo-Hoo.

Florence, Mass.—F. D. Keyes had an extremely heavy Memorial day trade, keeping open shop all day Sunday and until noon Monday, when practically everything was sold.

Cleveland, O.—Frank M. Smith, president of Smith & Fetters Co., says that the Memorial day trade was the largest ever recorded, partly because of the scarcity of outdoor flowers. Most lines of stock were short, but carnations especially so.



Aurora, Ill.—The Richards Mfg. Co. is about to place on the market a light, portable soil conveyor, designed for use in removing and replacing soil in greenhouse benches and which it is thought will prove valuable for such purposes as carrying plants in and out of the houses.

Fort Wayne, Ind.—What is called the "florist train" of the Pennsylvania lines arrived here May 23, on its long, slow trip between Pittsburg and Chicago. The train carries a load of plants and vines, with a force of about thirty men, and stops at the various stations on its route for the purpose of beautifying the grounds. Owing to the coolness of the weather recently, the train is a little behind schedule time.

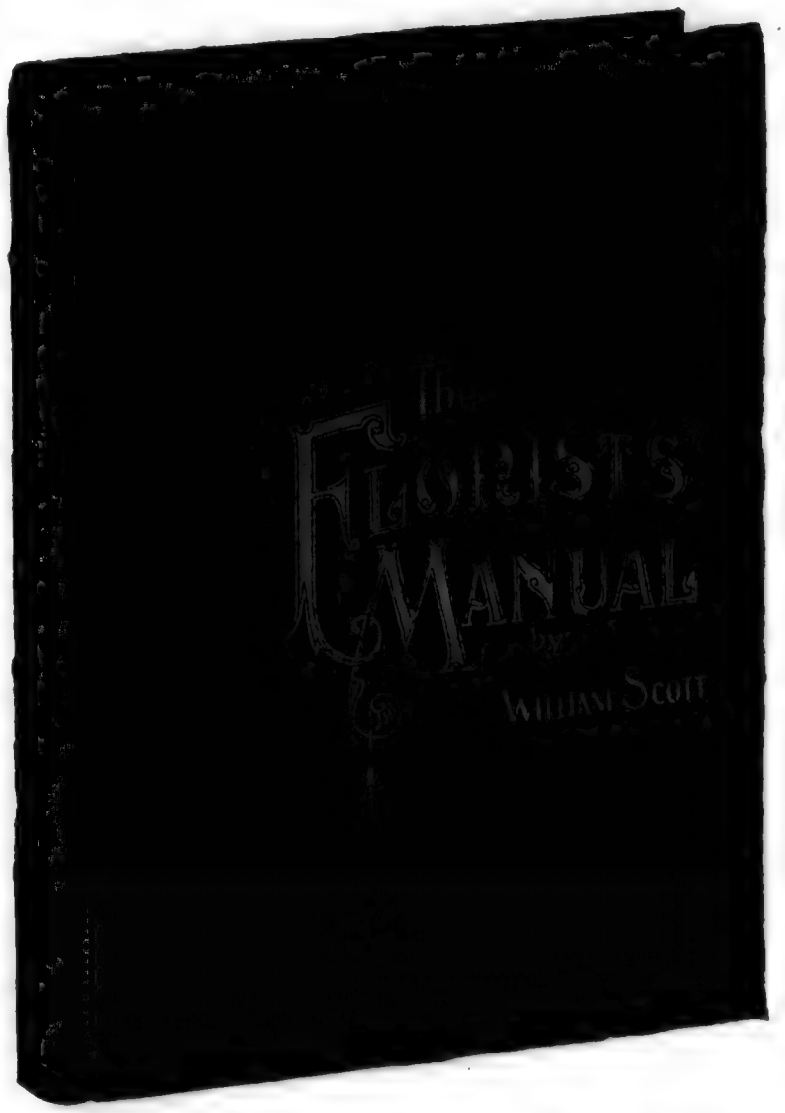
RED SPIDER.

Please let me know how to get rid of red spider, as I have tried almost everything I know of without success. I have no water force and have to depend only on fumigation with tobacco, which I use in liquid and powder forms, but I cannot keep them away and I cannot use hydrocyanic acid gas, as I have only a wall between my residence and the greenhouse. If anybody can help me out in this case, I shall be thankful. P. J. K.



It is unfortunate that you have no force of water. This is absolutely necessary to keep spider in check under glass. It revels in dry, arid conditions and there is no better way to prevent its appearance, or prevent its spread if it has appeared, than water through the spray nozzle at the end of a hose. Fumigation with tobacco of any kind is a partial remedy; even hydrocyanic acid gas cannot always be relied upon. I would advise you to secure a small force pump, seeing that you have no pressure from the hose, and by using this you should keep spider in check. Use a teaspoonful of salt to every three gallons of water at each application and direct the water below the leaves, which is where the red spiders are to be found.

Meriden, Conn.—It is said that John J. Bonell and other florists of the city have filled the role of a temporary art commission this spring and, with the aid of the people, have done much to improve the appearance of the lawns about the homes. A spirit of friendly rivalry among neighbors has been aroused, with marked results in the added attractiveness of the streets.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

This spring will be written into the history of the florists' business as exceeding anything ever known. Easter contributed an aggregate of trade that was enormous for this section, but Memorial day surpassed even that. There has been a noticeably increasing demand for flowers for occasions of every description, while the custom of wearing flowers on the street is becoming more popular.

The conditions for Memorial day helped to make it a big day for the florists. The season was fully two weeks advanced, so that all kinds of wild flowers and the early cultivated ones had gone by and the second groups were not quite ready. To add to this, carnations were entirely off crop and the demand for regular stock had kept that a trifle short. There was a sufficient supply for the demand, although prices were up a third to a half more than normal. Potted plants were in special demand, geraniums being particularly salable. What carnations there were in the market brought from $6 to $10 per hundred; in roses My Maryland, Bride, Killarney and Bridesmaid, $6 to $15 per hundred; American Beauty, $8 to $30; Richmond, $4 to $15; ten weeks' stocks, $1 to $4 per hundred; lily of the valley, $3 to $6 per hundred; sweet peas, $1.50 to $4 per hundred; peonies, $5 to $12.50 per hundred.

Various Notes.

James Anthony, a gardener, has filed an attachment at Newport against the summer villa and estate of Charles A. Bristol, on Wyckham road, Newport, in an action to recover $300 alleged to be due for salary.

William Appleton had the decorations for the Knights of Columbus minstrel show at Infantry hall, May 23.

F. Macrae & Sons are cutting lilies in great quantity all the time now. They are making frequent plantings.

J. A. Budlong & Son Co., Auburn, is cutting thousands of roses every day. They are fine stock.

T. R. Peterson, of the Hogg Greenhouses, Benefit street, was out the last few days of last week, recovering from a severe attack of tonsilitis.

D. W. McCoid is having an unusually busy spring and early summer business, outdoor work being especially brisk.

Earl Bavier, formerly with J. H. Cushing, of Quidnick, is now in charge of the flower department of L. Dimond & Sons, Inc.

Sweeney Bros. have planted several thousand named varieties of gladioli in the open for summer cutting.

William Doel has purchased the Central Greenhouses, on Central street, Woonsocket.

O. H. Williams & Sons Co. is cutting large quantities of sweet peas.

Thomas Curley reports last week as the busiest he has had in several years.

Johnston Bros. had nearly 150 small bouquets to make for Memorial day, averaging $1.50 each.

Albert L. Warner, of Pawtucket, is cutting the finest plumosus brought into this market.

William E. Chappell has been doing a thriving business in potted stock and small bouquets. Funeral work has also been brisk.

John Macrae, of Smith street, has just completed a new carnation house, 50x400.

S. J. Reuter & Son, of Westerly, are shipping some fine roses to the Park Street market, Boston.

Adin Alexander, who was in the florists' business in this city some ten years ago, recently died in Los Angeles, Cal., where he had been engaged in growing roses.

Winfred Seaman, formerly with J. H. Cushing at Quidnick, is now foreman and decorator for M. J. Leach & Sons, Pawtucket.

E. D. Tucker, of Saylesville, has been doing a big business at his new retail store on Mineral Spring avenue, Pawtucket.

Visitors include: T. W. Lawton, of Fall River, Mass.; Oscar Schultz, of Newport, and J. Kelley, of Fall River, Mass.

Greenhouse Heating.

HOUSE, BOILER AND CHIMNEY.

We intend to build a greenhouse, 17x65 feet, seven feet to the eaves and twelve feet to the ridge, with four feet of glass in the side walls and glass in both ends. The house will run north and south and the boiler room will be at the southwest corner. We want to run a temperature of 50 degrees at night, when the outside temperature is 14 degrees below zero. We are located in western Missouri.

What size of boiler do we need and what should be the size and height of the smokestack? We have 400 feet of 1¼-inch pipe. How many and what size of flows and how many 1¼-inch returns do we need?

J. E. A.

To heat the house described, about 250 square feet of radiation will be required if steam is used, but a boiler rated for 400 feet will be desirable. One 2-inch or two 1½-inch flows will answer. If the house has a middle and two side benches, it will be as well to use one 2-inch flow pipe and have the returns arranged in three coils. One of these may be upon each of the walls or under the side benches, and the other under the middle bench. In addition to the flow pipe, seven 1¼-inch returns will be needed.

The smokestack should be ten or twelve inches in diameter and thirty to forty feet high, according to the height of the surrounding buildings.

TWO-INCH PIPE FOR STEAM.

Would you think it advisable to install a steam system and use 2-inch pipe entirely, both in the mains and in the returns? I have plenty of this size of pipe. How many 2-inch returns on each side of a house 20x100 feet would be required to maintain a temperature of 58 to 60 degrees in zero weather? My plumber says the size of the pipe makes no difference. I am located in northern Kentucky.

L. D. S.

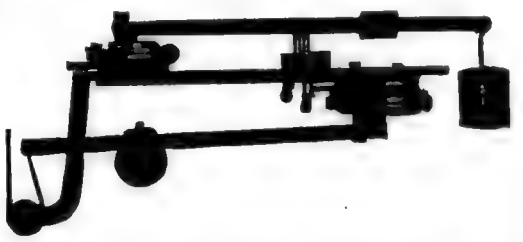
If the boiler is of good size, the 2-inch pipe can be used for steam heating to good advantage, although 1¼-inch or 1½-inch pipe is generally considered more economical. Provided the range is a small one and there is plenty of 2-inch pipe on hand, it might be better to put in hot water.

If steam is used, one 2-inch flow and two 2-inch returns should be used on each side of a house 20x100 feet. For hot water heating the number of flows and returns should be doubled.

PAINTING THE PIPES.

We have just built a new greenhouse and I want to know if it will be injurious to the plants if we paint the common black pipe with a bronze paint to finish it off nicely. I expect to grow lettuce as well as flowers. J. S.

It is not often that a lettuce grower thinks it necessary to gild the heating pipes for the sake of appearance, and it certainly should not be done if there is any regard for efficiency of radiation. It is said that there are preparations which may be put on the heating pipes without impairing their radiating efficiency, but the grower who wants to get the full value of the money he spends for coal will keep his pipes free from all paints. None of them will improve the radiation, to say the least, and most of them certainly have an opposite effect. Appearance is not an essential in a greenhouse. Of course one likes to have a neat place, but it would be purely a matter of taste if the painted pipe were considered to look better than a clean black one. F. R.



Would You Save One-Quarter of Your Coal Bill?
INSTALL
A Kitts Improved Hydraulic Damper Regulator.

Florist Peter Crowe, Rose Place, Utica, N. Y., voluntarily writes:—

"I am very much pleased to let you know that the Damper Regulator I bought from you last fall is by far the best apparatus for greenhouse purposes. I had my book-keeper compare my coal bill of last with that of this year and I find a saving of one quarter the amount of this year's coal over last year's; also the past winter was a great deal colder and longer than the winter before.

"There is another very good feature about the Damper Regulator, as it keeps a uniform heat in all the houses at all times by putting on and shutting off pipes. And I find that my Roses and Ferns did far better this winter than any winter so far, as the temperature was so uniform at all times.

"My reason for writing you is to let you know, and also to thank you for bringing my attention to the Regulator, and I assure you I cannot speak too highly of this machine."

Are not facts like these worth an investigation?

The Market.

The bright, warm weather last week greatly increased the production, but not the trade. Low prices prevailed until Saturday, when they took a jump that was disconcerting. Carnations had been selling as low as $1.50 per hundred for good stock; the price went up for three days to $3 for common stock and $5 and $6 for fancies. Some retailers did not anticipate such a raise and had to fill orders for what stock cost them on Decoration day.

Roses, too, had been in oversupply, but advanced in price. All outdoor stock was extremely scarce. Peonies advanced and even cape jasmine went up to double what could be obtained for it only a few days before. Sweet peas, which sold at $2 per thousand May 27, went up to $5 on Saturday and Sunday. As Decoration day does not amount to a great deal locally, the retailers had trouble to understand the high prices resulting from a strong demand from out of town. A great many cut flower sales which would have been made but for the high prices, went to the plant trade and the cut flower retailer was left to hold the bag. The retailers say that now that the special demand is over stock will be selling at such ridiculously low prices that the public will wonder and say they were robbed because it was Decoration day.

Various Notes.

The St. Louis Retail Florists' Association will hold an important meeting Monday, June 6, in the Knights of Columbus hall, Olive and Grand avenue.

Robert Ayers, formerly well known in florists' circles, will leave this month with his family for California and will take up his residence in Los Angeles.

Ed Kalisch, of Kalisch Bros., says that just as soon as the busy season ends he and Mrs. Kalisch will take their usual summer trip among the northern lakes. Mr. Kalisch is a great fisherman.

The four wholesale houses will again take up the early closing this year during the months of July and August. The closing hours will be 5 p. m. each day and 12 o'clock on Saturdays. This will delight the employees.

Trustees Bentzen, Ostertag and Schoenle, of the Florists' Club, say the florists' picnic will this year surpass any of the club's previous efforts. They will personally see that all the florists are invited and that they all have a good time.

Charlie Wors says that he has the concession for the sale of flowers at Suburban park and will hereafter be at the park each evening, rain or shine. The evenings so far have been too cool and the attendance has been small.

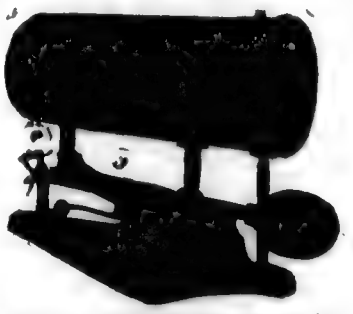
June 5 will be the first open Sunday of the year at the Missouri Botanical Garden. Superintendent H. C. Irish has a big force at work getting things in shape for the large crowd expected, should the weather be fine.

The four wholesalers, C. A. Kuehn, the Smith Wholesale Floral Co., H. G. Berning and George H. Angermueller, had their hands full for Decoration day, supplying the local and shipping trade with cut stock.

William Ossick, of the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co., with his brother-in-law, R. Windt, has opened a picture show at Wellston and Easton avenues, to which they give their time each evening, and the local trade has given them much patronage.

This is the season for school commencements and June weddings. The trade expects to put in some busy days for the next two weeks, when the season for social work ends and society begins to leave for summer vacations.

Ostertag Bros. furnished the decorations for the Puletizer-Wickham wedding, the largest society event of the year. The reception took place on a lawn at the bride's residence and they left the arrangements to Ostertag Bros., at a cost of $1,500.



The Kelley Floral Co. is furnishing the Big Four railroad with ten bouquets each morning, for the dining car which leaves here at 8 a. m.

The St. Louis Florists' Club will hold its twenty-third anniversary meeting Thursday afternoon, June 9. The secretary is sending out neat notices to the members, urging them to attend. The trustees have arranged for a smoker and the prospects are good for a large attendance.

CARNATIONS.

Now, keeping those varieties that have been mentioned in view, let us be careful in selecting our cuttings from those plants that are vigorous in health and have a good, sound heart and lungs. It is wise to see that there is no delay from the time you take your cuttings and insert them in the propagating bed, where you should keep a bottom heat of 65 degrees and a top heat of 55 degrees, giving them an abundance of water. It will be necessary to shade your bed from strong sun, giving the young stock a chance to profit by shade and moisture. The chances are, if you are careful at this stage, that you will be gladdened by a success of 100 per cent.

Potting and Outdoor Planting.

We cannot value too highly the advice to do everything at the proper time. In the care of the young rooted cuttings, just as soon as you see nice, bushy roots, remove them from the bed and put them in 2-inch pots, allowing the plants to be established before starting the hardening system. Then, from this time on, the hardier you keep your plants and the more fresh air they get, the healthier and stronger will they be. The more care and attention they get, the better a foundation will you be laying for future success.

As soon as the weather is favorable and your garden soil in good order, a liberal application of lime would certainly be of great benefit. Set your young stock out, giving the plants plenty of space, say ten inches between the plants and eighteen inches between the rows. But remember that you want your soil to grow carnations and not weeds. During the months of May and June, give your plants your never-failing attention, in the way of stopping leading shoots and getting your stock in order for housing in July or August.

Removing to the House.

This period in the progress of carnations is a critical one and requires special attention. I would advocate, before lifting your plants—say one or two days before—that each plant get so much

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

water that the soil and roots are completely saturated. After this proceeding you can go ahead with the lifting process without any danger to the plants, and safely remove them to the benches in the house, which has been prepared for them in the usual way, by making everything sweet and clean for their reception and taking soil from the pile which has been waiting for the occasion for at least nine months.

At this time, after having your benches filled with plants that look the picture of health, a wise proceeding would be to attend to the shading until such time as the fibers of the new stock begin to take hold of the new soil. Only water around each plant, as it is not necessary to saturate the whole bench, but keep your syringe going, say three times a day. After this, you can ventilate freely. The next part of the process will be to get your supports in order and have them placed in position, so that the continual syringing will not misplace the plants in any way.

We now come to the feeding. Every person has his own method, and it is difficult to lay down hard and fast rules in this line. To my mind, it is just like treating a baby, from its infancy onward. What we have to study is the stomach and lungs. Whatever you feed with, study not to give more than they can receive. Begin with a weak application, say once in two weeks, and gradually increase in strength and frequency. What to use, I will practically leave to yourselves, seeing we have on the market a great variety of good fertilizers. I am inclined to favor Bon Arbor, and I have had good success with this manure, with a change to liquid cow manure, and every five or six weeks an application of lime and soot, say a 6-inch pot of each to fifty gallons of water. We must try to avoid a great rush of sap into the plant, as it causes a softness in growth that is undesirable and renders your plants liable to the attacks of various pests.

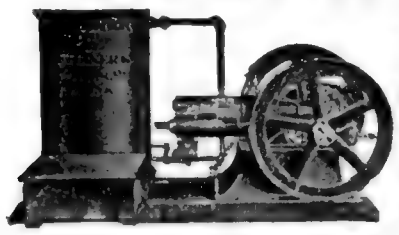
Ventilation has to be regulated according to the weather, and I would advise that the raising and closing be done in a gradual way, so that you can have a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees, with a rise of 10 to 15 degrees during the day.



Diseases and Pests.

The diseases we have to contend with are principally rust and stem-rot. If there is any appearance of rust, it is well to keep the foliage dry, remove all parts that seem to be infected and give a liberal application of Grape Dust. Stem-rot is a disease we have to keep our eyes open for at all times, especially for two months after the plants have been taken from the field and planted in the benches, after which time there is no danger, if they have not been planted too deep. Remove at once any plants that are infected, and apply a dusting of air-slaked lime.

Among the worst pests are thrips and red spider. For thrips, spray about once a week with Nicoticide during the time of hot weather; when the cool nights arrive, fumigate with Nico-fume or tobacco dust. Red spider seems to love a dry atmosphere and the general way to keep the pest under control is to apply the hose, and, if very bad, spray with salt and water—say one pound of salt to five gallons of water.

In conclusion I would say, never wait until the horse is stolen before you lock the stable door. See that it is done before, and thus prevent what would certainly happen as the result of carelessness.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The Memorial day demand for cut flowers was large. Indeed, the volume of business was only limited by the supply. These unusual conditions were due to the cool, cloudy weather, with several heavy wind storms which played havoc with outside stock, especially peonies. Friday and Saturday found heavy demands for cheap grades of all kinds of cut stock. The weather was exceedingly warm, with the thermometer registering around 80 degrees.

Carnations were in heavy supply and brought from 1 to 2 cents each. Their average quality was only fair. All colors were wanted; even those who usually have their own carnations were buyers. Peonies were to be seen on every stand, but were in bad shape, being too ripe and badly bruised by the wind. Anything resembling roses or carnations, tied up in bunches, sold well. There were plenty of callas and longiflorums, which sold remarkably well. Sprengeri, plumosus, smilax and ferns were in demand.

Pot plants were eagerly sought after and the supply was small. In this class of stock, geraniums, hydrangeas and rose bushes in bloom took the lead. For several years there has been an increasing custom of purchasing potted plants in bloom for Memorial day purposes. The fact that Memorial day this year came on Monday greatly accelerated this demand and the supply of bedding plants of all kinds was almost exhausted. In years past, small potted geraniums, heliotropes, verbenas, petunias and similar selections have sufficed to meet the popular cry; this year there has been a constant call and ready sale for potted plants, such as hydrangeas, roses and rhododendrons of the better class.

The month of May was a highly satisfactory month for business. The sales of plants ran far ahead of last year, and the same held true with cut flowers. Crops were good and stock held out well. There was an oversupply of rain, plenty of high winds and enough sunshine. The heavy rain May 24, with one of the worst wind storms, did great damage to fruit and shade trees. The market gardeners who had crops planted in low places were hard hit; otherwise market products look promising.

Various Notes.

Albert G. Fiedler and Ernst W. Fiedler will sail for Germany June 8, returning about August 1.

The Most Important Thing

About any statement in an advertisement is the truth or falsity of it. Some of the firms advertising their product are not over scrupulous as to keeping their claims within the bounds of truth and as a consequence the goods they sell offset the value of their advertising. This hinders the progress of their business. Let us say here that we are ready to stand back of every statement we have ever made in any advertisement and that we will guarantee our material to be all we claim it to be. You should investigate our material and get an estimate today on your needs.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

THE WEDDING BOUQUETS.

They Mean More Than Money.

June is the wedding month. While it brings the retail florist one of the busiest and most profitable periods of the year, it also makes its greatest tax upon his artistic abilities. There is no work of the retail florist subject to such sharp criticism as the bouquets he makes for his weddings, and the decorations for these occasions. Whatever else may be forgiven, the bride will not overlook shortcomings in her wedding flowers. The larger the wedding, the more critical the inspection the florist's work must undergo. Slovenly work at such a time will defeat all hope of developing a high-class trade; but, on the other hand, really good work for the weddings will prove one of the easiest of stepping stones to high-class patronage—there is no surer means for establishing a reputation for first-class work.

Some Good Examples.

In this issue of The Review there are a number of illustrations of wedding bouquets. These are all the work of R. Irving Gresham, of the C. A. Dahl Co., Atlanta, Ga. Two of the bouquets are made by combining orchids with lily of the valley. In one case highly-colored cattleyas are used with lily of the valley about them and knotted in the shower. The bouquet is edged with Farleyense. This bouquet sometimes is carried by the maid of honor, while the bride carries the combination of white orchids and valley shown in the other illustration. Another of the illustrations shows the conventional type of bouquet, made entirely of lily of the valley, with a shower. As in the orchid bouquet, the edging is with Farleyense fern.

One of the illustrations shows a bridesmaid's bouquet that Mr. Gresham calls his rainbow bouquet and which is popular for the so-called rainbow wedding. The one illustrated was made with a center of violets, bordered with lily of the valley, but the bouquet also is effectively made with the center either of yellow, pink or red rosebuds. It also may be made with sweet peas instead of valley.

Still another of the illustrations shows a bride's bouquet made of white roses, a little Sprengeri and Farleyense fern, tied with a heavy, wide, white ribbon. This style of bouquet also is frequently used for bridesmaids, pink, yellow or occasionally red roses being substituted for the white. Carnation bouquets are made up and used exactly as in the case of the rose bouquet, the special considerations for each wedding determining the number of flowers to be used and the size of the bouquet.

These are examples of the better class of wedding bouquets and are deserving of careful study at the hands of anyone who wishes to improve his wedding work. So good were these bouquets considered that some of them recently were illustrated in the Ladies' Home Journal, where they came conspicuously to the attention of a good many girls who will be brides this month.

in our little corner of the vineyard, let us see how the application may be made. In the creation of characters, which is the higher type of character writing—the author who reproduces most accurately an existing person, or one who creates a fantastic person purely from his own imagination? In music, what is the higher order of production—that which imitates some familiar sound, or that which renders an idea? Or, in other words, which appeals to your higher sensibility—artificial thunder and wind, or the expression of pity or love? In painting, who is the better artist—the one who can most truthfully present something that has fallen under his eye, or one who can paint an imaginary figure whose beauty and grace have been seen by his own mind's eye?

Imitation Plus Imagination.

Now let us come to the dictionary definition of the word "art." It is as follows: "Art is the application of skill to the production of the beautiful by imitation or design."

Comparing these two definitions, first it is taken for granted that there is some skill both as to dreaming and as to creation; so far there is no special difference. The terms "creation" and "production" sound alike. The dictionary says "the beautiful." Why is it not true art if unbeautiful subjects are presented?

Passing this as nonessential, let us explore the meaning of the words "imitation" and "design." The term "design" corresponds to the word "ideal" in our home-made definition. Imitation is the one branch of thought which is omitted from our original definition, and we must admit it is quite an important one as applied to our department of art. Taken as a whole, there is no one production of the floral art which is purely ideal, and yet it is as much so as any production of any other art. It is a compound of imitation and ideal. For example, in a bride's shower bouquet the round top is like the tip of a plant in mature development; the shower is like a trailing vine or collection of the same; the separate features are imitative; the assemblage is ideal. A pillow is an imitative design; its decoration may be either ideal or imitative.

Bridesmaid's Bouquet of White Roses.

Degrees of Ability.

It follows, then, that if you invent a new style of the shower bouquet you are an artist of more or less ability, according to the high or low standard of your production. If you can catch the combination of lines which makes the graceful course of a wild, trailing vine and can reproduce it in one spray on a solid design, you are an artist, but not of the highest type. If you can bring together the plans of a number of such natural creations into a creation of your own which occasion demands, you are an artist of the highest type.

It is even so in a literary sense; the person who can describe people and scenes in accordance with fact and in an entertaining way is an artist, but the writer who can create and present a character all his own, from his imagination, assisted by his observation, is the really great writer.

The so-called musician who can make the piano croak like a frog or make a fiddle whine has some musical ingenuity, but the one who can speak with the violin a better message in a better way than with his lips is a great musician.

But another definition is wanting to bring us to a perfect understanding of our subject. It is that of "massive designing." Well, it is solid work—work where the flowers or plants employed lose their individuality for the sake of the effect which the massing will produce. The production is supposed to be a striking amount of size or color or both.

Solid Work—Good and Bad.

Such solid work may be good or poor designing, according to the scale used in selecting and applying this particular style of design. I have seen solid pillows, solid crescents, harps, gates ajar, triangles, and hearts which were good examples of massive design, but I never saw a solid wreath, or basket or table plateau which was good designing. Why is it? Is it because our æsthetic beings are bounded by six senses, and that some things appeal to neither the five senses nor yet to the sixth sense, which has been so happily called "common sense"—though it is so rare, by the irony of fate—nor yet to our sense of nonsense?

Is there anything in the fact that the first designs mentioned are all imitative and the latter are purely ideal? Where we get the solid style from may throw some light on this question. Evidently it is derived from massive effects in nature, as illustrated in composite flowers; from inflorescence, as seen in racemes, umbels and panicles; as seen in a grove from a distance, or a field or stretch of land which has grown up thick with one kind of flower, like a daisy patch. Our sense of the ludicrous sometimes does us service here. A solid wreath bears more resemblance to a cart wheel than it does to a wreath, and a basket filled solidly is more like a pincushion than a receptacle for newly cut flowers.

With this chapter of definitions as an introduction, I hope to present the details of my subject in later issues of the Review. Gertrude Blair.

TRAGACANTH AS A PASTE.

In recent issues of The Review several inquiries and suggestions have appeared with regard to pastes for attaching labels. For twenty years I have used paste and, after experimenting with about every known thing used for the purpose, I have found tragacanth the best, cheapest, cleanest, whitest, nearest odorless and easiest to secure and prepare. It can be got at any drug store and 5 or 10 cents' worth will make up enough to fill a good sized paste jar.

To prepare, put the tragacanth in the jar, add enough water to cover, allow to stand over night and then add sufficient water to bring the paste to the proper consistency. If you wish, you may add a few drops of oil of cloves, which will give it what I term a clean odor. Howard Gardner.

THE TRADE'S DISPLAY.

C. H. Vick, superintendent of the trade's display at the Rochester convention of the S. A. F., has prepared a diagram showing the floor plan of Convention hall as published in The Review several weeks ago, with the tables outlined and marked to show the spaces allotted to the exhibitors who had reserved space up to June 4. The list at that date was as follows:

Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago.
Foley Mfg. Co., Chicago.
King Construction Co., No. Tonawanda, N. Y.
E. C. Brown Co., Rochester.
Wilson-Hoyt Co., New York.

Mr. Vick says applications for space are now coming in every day. He also is chairman of the local committee at work on the souvenir album. He says it will be a work of art and that they expect to have it out about July 1. It will contain 100 pages, with many original views of the streets, parks, private gardens, residences, public buildings, river and lake, also several interesting articles, as follows: "Rochester Florists," by George B. Hart; "Rochester from the Nurseryman's Viewpoint," by William C. Barry; "The Seed Industry," by Charles W. Crosman; "Rochester Florists' Association," by Fred W. Vick; "Rochester," by the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce. Every member of the S. A. F. will receive a copy.

Mr. Vick says applications for space are now coming in every day. He also is chairman of the local committee at work on the souvenir album. He says it will be a work of art and that they expect to have it out about July 1. It will contain 100 pages, with many original views of the streets, parks, private gardens, residences, public buildings, river and lake, also several interesting articles, as follows: "Rochester Florists," by George B. Hart; "Rochester from the Nurseryman's Viewpoint," by William C. Barry; "The Seed Industry," by Charles W. Crosman; "Rochester Florists' Association," by Fred W. Vick; "Rochester," by the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce. Every member of the S. A. F. will receive a copy.

HARDY PLANTS FOR BORDERS.

[An extract from a paper by Arthur E. Thatcher, of Arnold Arboretum, read before the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club. Continued from the Review of June 2.]

Favorite Bulbous Plants.

No plants, and certainly none of a bulbous character, have more devoted adherents than the lilies, and though many new ones have been introduced during recent years, I do not suppose there are any so deserving of general cultivation as Mr. Wilson's Chinese introductions. As these have been fully described in the press, I need not deal at length with them, but they cannot be too strongly recommended to those who desire good, hardy, vigorous-growing varieties. Henryi, leucanthemum, Bakerianum and myriophyllum are additions to any flower border and succeed best in a good loamy soil, with ample drainage.

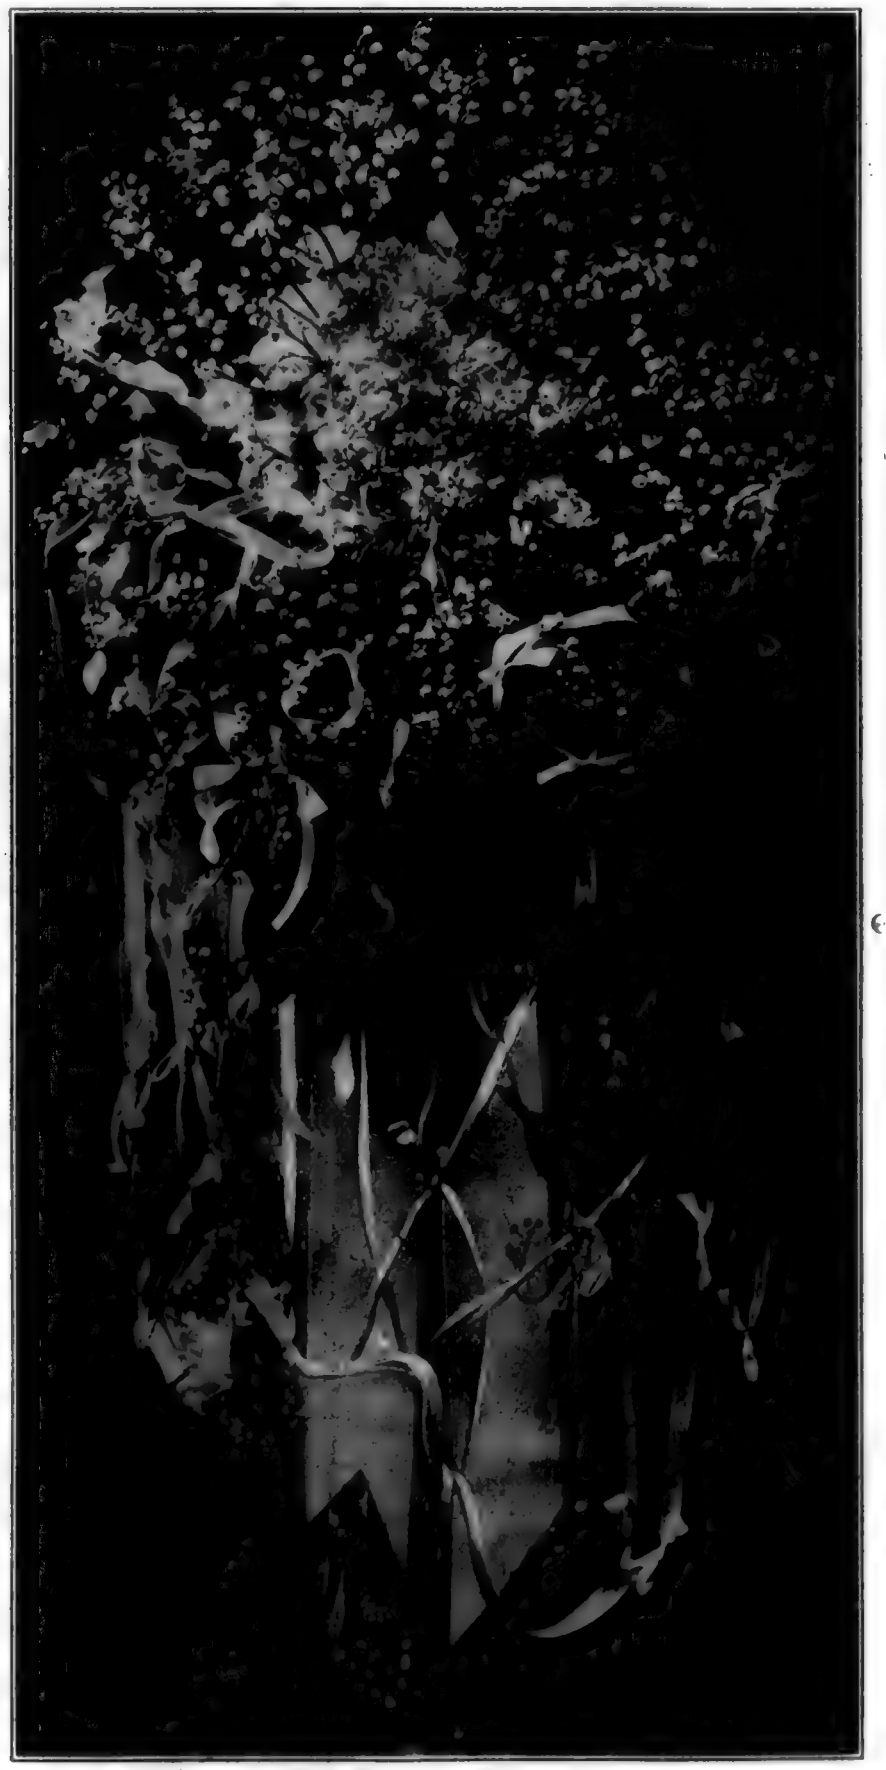
Another beautiful class of bulbs, second only to the lilies in importance, are montbretias, and these, by hybridizing, have been greatly improved of late. The newer sorts will probably not prove so hardy in New England as the older varieties, such as crocosmæflora and Pottsii, but it is a simple matter to lift them and store in a cool cellar for the winter. Such varieties as Hereward, Prometheus, King Edmund, Norvic, Westwick, Lady Hamilton, St. Botolph, George Davison and Lord Nelson all have flat, open flowers, which measure from three to four inches in diameter and are produced freely on strong, branching stems. I do not know of any plants, unless it is the florists' pentstemons, which produce such a beautiful display through the summer and autumn months.

Monardas and Oriental Poppies.

Monarda didyma is an old favorite in gardens, but it must give place now to a new variety with bright scarlet flowers, named Cambridge Scarlet, which is dwarfer in habit but much more floriferous.

Oriental poppies are among the most gorgeous of May flowers, and who does not admire the gigantic blooms of Papaver Parkmanni? A host of new sorts are now offered to us, embracing a wide range of color, but I think the most desirable are Lady Roscoe, Marie Studholme, Mephistopheles, Mrs. Perry, Jennie Mawson and Margaret. These should not be planted near the front of the border, as their flowers, though gorgeous, are rather fleeting.

A remarkable plant from Central Asia, closely allied to the campanulas, which one seldom sees grown successfully, is Ostrowskia magnifica, but it well repays any care bestowed upon it. This plant should be given a sheltered position under a warm wall, in a well drained, loamy soil, and on no account should the roots be disturbed after it has once become established. The flowers are of great size and vary in color from blue to rose and pure white, and under favorable conditions the stems will grow six feet high.



Thalictrum dipterocarpum is the most desirable of the family and is one of Mr. Wilson's Chinese children. It has a profusion of rich rose flowers, on slender stems five feet high, and elegant foliage.

Not Hardy, but Worth Protecting.

Tritomas, or kniphofias, are not hardy enough to withstand our New England winters unless amply protected, and I believe the best results are obtained by lifting and potting, unless one has a sheltered position in which to plant them. In England they are largely used and make most effective beds in well drained loam. They are so distinct and gorgeous in coloring that any extra trouble is well bestowed on them. A considerable variety of species and hybrids are now obtainable and I can strongly recommend Nelsoni and Macowani, two very dwarf, free flowering plants; Triumph, the largest variety yet raised; multiflora, Meteor, Chloris, Ideal and Corallina. The colors vary from the palest yellow to the richest scarlet and they present an imposing and beautiful appearance in the fall garden.

The Stately Eremuri.

A wonderful class of plants, which should be represented in all gardens, are the eremuri, and if single specimens are planted at various intervals along the border, where their stately spikes can rise above the dwarfer subjects, they present an imposing appearance, unequaled by any spring flowering plants. Unlike the other plants I have mentioned, they should be planted early in the fall and the young growths will need slight protection from cold winds and frosts in early April. E. Elwesianus, which has pink flowers, and its pure white variety, albus, will, when established, grow from eight to nine feet high, with fully four feet of blossom. E. robustus is equally tall, with rosy pink flowers, but E. Bungei does not exceed five feet and is very attractive, having golden yellow flowers.

The Rainbow Bouquet.

Salem, Mass.—The Ward estate, at 90 and 92 North street, including the greenhouses recently conducted by Harvey E. Ward, has been sold at auction for $6,700. Besides the greenhouses, the property comprises about 28,000 square feet of land and a two-family dwelling.

WENDLAND & KEIMEL PLANT.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph of the range of Wendland & Keimel, Elmhurst, Ill. The view is looking southwest. In response to a request for some of the details as to construction, W. J. Keimel supplied the following description:

"We have ten houses 27x200, Moninger material, fourteen feet south slope, sixteen feet north; twenty-eight ventilators on each side of ridge, operated by three machines in each house, one in the center operating the north ventilators and one at each end for the south. The ventilators are so arranged that those nearest the machines will open two or three inches before the farthest vents will start to open. This allows us to have a little air at any part of the houses where it is needed, and we find it very convenient. Seventeen of these machines, with arms, etc., were furnished by the Advance Co. and thirteen by Evans. The gutters are cast-iron Jennings, supported by 2-inch galvanized iron pipes. Purlins are angle-iron supported by 1-inch pipe.

"The houses contain four benches, each five feet wide, holding 750 plants each. Twenty-seven benches have Killarney and thirteen White Killarney, 30,000 plants in all. Of these 9,000 have been grown two years, 6,000 one year, and 15,000 were planted last April, all grafted stock supplied by A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn. The cut is sold in the Chicago market by E. C. Amling.

"The place is heated by two 80 horsepower horizontal tubular boilers from S. Freeman & Sons Mfg. Co., Racine, Wis. There are thirteen 1½-inch steam pipes in each house, three under each bench and one running just beneath each gutter. The return water from these pipes is taken care of by three No. 4 Squires steam traps and sucked out of them by a 4x5x8 National vacuum pump, which pumps it into a receiver, from which it is pumped automatically back into the boilers by a 4½x2¾x4 Dean boiler-feed pump. The exhaust steam from this pump, as well as the one used for pumping the water for the greenhouses, after passing through a 3-inch oil separator, is led into the main steam pipe used for heating, so that the fuel consumed for operating the pumps is almost nothing. The pressure carried on the boilers is eighty pounds, which is reduced to three to five pounds by a K. & T. regulating valve.

"Water is supplied by a 5-inch drilled well 102 feet deep, in which the pressure is strong enough to keep the water within seven feet of the surface. There also is a reservoir to catch part of the rain water. A Dean 6x4x6 pump is so connected that it can pump out of either or both at once.

"The boiler shed is fifty feet wide and forty feet long, at present so arranged that the west wall can be removed and the shed lengthened as needed. The boilers and coal bin occupy the west twenty feet of the shed, leaving the east half for pump room, packing shed and ice-box, the latter being 6x20 and ten feet high, and will easily hold 15,000 to 20,000 roses if necessary. The steel stacks will be replaced this summer by a 4-foot brick chimney, which will be able to take care of twice the boiler capacity there is at present. All building was done by William Mailander, of Morton Grove, Ill.

"I think that about covers everything, except that I may add that the stock at present is all in the pink of condition and promises well for the future."

FERNS GROWN IN FRAMES.

Will you kindly let us hear from you as to the best method of growing nephrolepis ferns and other varieties outside, in the latitude of Philadelphia? Would it be best to construct frames and how much shade is required? Could they be grown under laths or must they be placed under glass? Any information regarding this will be greatly appreciated by us. T. N. Y.

Nephrolepis and other strong-growing ferns may be grown satisfactorily outdoors during the summer, and, as a matter of fact, have been used in Philadelphia and some other localities for bedding purposes. But in order to grow good, salable stock, they would better be grown in frames and covered with either lath shades or thin muslin, the shading material being raised above the frame high enough to allow an abundance of air at all times. The pots should be plunged in ashes or spent hops, the latter being an excellent material to retain the moisture, and also containing some fertilizing value.

Small ferns, such as are used for table ferneries, may also be grown in the same manner, but it is better to protect them from heavy, beating rains by covering them with sashes. The sashes should be raised above the frame about one foot, to provide ventilation, and also shaded with whitewash or whiting and oil. W. H. T.

DISCOLORED AND DEAD FRONDS.

Some time ago I made an inquiry about the leaves of Boston ferns, but did not give you enough information on which to base a reply. I now send you, under separate cover, a small kentia palm and some fern fronds. The ferns are in a bed which has been made new and planted three times, but they will not grow; the new fronds soon die back. I have some in pots that are doing the same way and have been in that condition about eighteen months. If you can do so, please give me a remedy. The palms were in good condition when I got them and are placed close to the ferns. A. D. H.

The specimens in question proved to be a small plant of Kentia Belmoreana and several fronds, or parts of fronds, of the Boston fern. All of these showed injuries of somewhat similar character, the tips of the kentia leaves turning yellow and dying back, and the tips of the fern leaflets likewise discoloring and dying back toward the stem, without dropping off. This would seem to indicate some trouble with either the soil or the water, and I am inclined to the opinion that it is due to an alkaline soil, or else that the water used for watering contains an excess of either soda or lime.

I would try a change of soil, or the use of rain water for watering, or both, for there does not seem to be any disease in the plants, apart from such injury as would be likely to result from an excess of alkali. W. H. T.

ORCHIDS

A COMMERCIAL PROPOSITION.

[A paper by Alphonse Pericat, read before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, June 7, 1910.]

Your committee has me here tonight to talk orchids, much against my own inclinations. In the first place, it is a difficult subject and, in the second place, I hardly know what to say. Of course I have been in orchids all my life, both in the amateur and commercial lines; but the field is so large that it is difficult to choose any phase of it that would be interesting to you. I think the best I can do under the circumstances is to indicate a few of the species and varieties that have so far proved themselves commercially possible. There is no doubt but what the orchid has come rapidly to the front commercially in the last ten years, and it may be confidently looked forward to as a constantly increasing factor in the flower markets of America.

The Profitable Kinds.

The first of the family important commercially is, of course, the cattleya. This species and its many varieties is so showy and of such varied colors, and can be had by successive plantings through so long a season, that it is small wonder that it takes premier position. The best of them all is, of course, Trianæ, because it is not only a lovely flower, but also because it blooms at a season when cut flowers are most in demand. Next to that comes labiata, which flowers in the fall, when roses and carnations are scarce and variety is needed to supplement the chrysanthemum and other fall flowers. The other members of the same family that are of importance are Schrœderæ and Mossiæ, as these come in succession and flower at a time when the others can not be had. Gigas and Gaskelliana are, of course, the important ones for summer flowering.

Next to the cattleya, the important orchid commercially is the cypripedium. Insigne flowers more freely than any other and is most easily grown. Leeanum and Spicerianum rank next. The cypripedium can be grown and sold for less than other orchids; hence it is one of the most important, although not the showiest.

On account of the demand for white orchids in the fall, Dendrobium Formosum occupies an important place. The plants go back after two or three years and it is necessary to renew stock. D. Phalænopsis is fine for sprays.

Oncidiums are of great merit in many ways, the several varieties flowering in succession from September to February. They are much liked for decorations on account of their spray formation and beautiful colors. Some are easily managed, some not. Splendidum is one of the best growers. It is a fine flower and likely to be more grown in the future. Varicosum Rogersii is a favorite on account of its fine spray, which is easily adapted to many decorative purposes. The plants run out quickly, however, much the same as D. Formosum.

Varieties With Possibilities.

These species and varieties mentioned are practically all that are much grown today, but there are a number of others that will be on the market soon, as the demand is constantly extending. Phalænopsis amabilis is one. This can now be had from the Philippines at reasonable price and will be heard from shortly. P. Schillerianum is also a good one and its pink is a good contrast to the white of amabilis, flowering about the same time.

Vanda cœrulea is a good species to grow for cut flowers and can be made to pay. It is about the only one of its color (blue) that is worth anything to grow.

Support the Market.

In conclusion, let me add a serious and emphatic caution to all orchid growers. Never sell your flowers too cheaply. The orchid is an expensive flower to grow; but sometimes there are too many of them at one time. Rather lose a few of these than sell them cheaply. That breaks the market and you lose far more in the long run. The market is not easily mended, once it is broken. Therefore, it is good policy for the grower to be careful not to overcrowd with more than the market will absorb.

DENDROBIUMS.

As the growths on the nobile section advance a more copious water supply can be given. Do not shade too heavily. Some sun mornings and evenings will do them good. A moist, warm house, with syringing overhead about 3:30 p. m., is what they like, closing the ventilators at the same time. Leave a little chink of air on all night, however. Such dendrobiums as thyrsiflorum, Farmerii, chrysotoxum, suavissimum, densiflorum, Dalhousianum and Calceolaria are now flowering. These, while rather showy, are not lasting. They are of easy culture and do well at the warm end of the cattleya house. After flowering, any potting or top-dressing can be done.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Asters.

A last sowing of asters can now be made. Select for this sowing some varieties which bloom the earliest from seed. It is too late to sow such sorts as American Branching, Vick's Branching, or even Semple's, but Mignon, Victoria, Queen of the Earlies and Chrysanthemum will flower before we get frost. Cutworms are now troublesome on land which was in grass a year ago. Keep poisoned mash laid around. Fresh bran, moistened with molasses and water and colored with Paris green, answers well. A dusting of lime or soot, or both, discourages the pests from working and makes them seek fresh camping grounds. Constant cultivation is also of the greatest aid in minimizing the losses from their attacks.

Cycas Revoluta.

The dried stems of Cycas revoluta are now to hand. It is only a few florists who now have much call for these plants. On lawns in partial shade, when of considerable size, they are quite effective, and there are few better lasting foliage plants for big vases in large hallways or hotels, theaters and, in fact, any building where a minimum of 50 degrees is maintained. These dry stems should be potted as soon as received, using pots just large enough to comfortably hold the stems. Place them in a brisk, moist house and syringe freely. Sometimes in a few weeks growth will start, but do not grow nervous if the fronds do not appear in as many moons.

Smilax.

Where young smilax stock is to be planted, the beds should be prepared as soon as possible. Of course the plants can be well grown in benches, but much better in beds. A generous soil is wanted, just such as will grow good mums, roses or violets. Allow twelve to fifteen inches between the rows and nine inches between the plants and get the strings in place as soon after planting as possible. Smilax can be grown in a comparatively cool house, but to produce it profitably it is better to allow it 60 degrees at night in winter. With good drainage, smilax will take a lot of water and luxuriate. Deficient drainage will soon cause yellowing of the foliage.

Pruning Flowering Shrubs.

Now, when many of the flowering shrubs are out of bloom, is the ideal time to prune them and not when they are dormant, as too often happens. Lilacs should have their faded flower trusses removed before they run to seed. Especially is this necessary with the newer varieties. Cut back any runaway shoots. Remove any dead or dying wood and you will vastly improve the appearance and health of the plants. The same holds true of viburnums, philadelphus, weigelias, spiræas, loniceras and many other shrubs. Do the heading back and thinning out just as soon as you can after flowering. This will allow the plant to make considerable new growth and properly ripen it, which is not possible when the work is delayed a month. There are many shrubs of ungainly appearance which a severe early summer pruning would vastly benefit. Get the work done at once.

Cinerarias.

In order to get strong cineraria plants, which will flower for Christmas, sow seed now in pans of light, sandy soil. Use more leaf-mold than loam. Cover the seeds thinly. Water and cover the pans with a sheet of glass, over which lay some paper to keep out the sun. A north house or coldframe is suitable for germinating the seeds. They must not be coddled at any stage of their growth, although they can be kept fairly close until the seeds germinate. As soon as the little plants have made their second leaves, pot off singly and keep them in a shaded frame, keeping them moderately close for a few days. In selecting seedlings, do not discard all the weak ones, as these are usually the finest varieties. The more vigorous ones are likely to be principally blues. In shading cinerarias avoid placing anything of a heavy nature on the glass. This only makes the plants weakly. Movable shadings are far the best.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

A BEGINNING IN MUMS.

I wish to try a few chrysanthemums, and should like to have some information on their culture. In buying rooted cuttings about June 15, should they be benched in the greenhouse at once or be planted in the field and lifted in the early fall, like carnations? I have a side bench, with about two feet of head room. Will this be high enough? What distance apart do you plant on the bench? Name a few up-to-date, early varieties of easy culture for a beginner to try. I want to grow them for cut flowers. How many flowers are obtained from one plant? Is Ivory still a good white for cut flowers? My location is southeastern Pennsylvania. W. R. D.

I should prefer to plant in the house rather than to plant outside and lift in the fall—that is, if the house is available. Plants set out where they are to flower will naturally do better than if lifted and moved around.

A side bench with two feet of head room will be enough for Polly Rose, Pacific, Merza, Mrs. Partridge and Ivory, planted in June. The last mentioned, while not a large flower, is still grown in enormous quantities for some markets, so we may conclude that the growers still find it profitable to handle.

As to the distance apart for the plants in the bench, if W. R. D. will turn to The Review of May 19, page 18, he will find the subject discussed there. We plant from six by eight inches to eight by ten, according to variety, to get the finest flowers, taking one flower to a plant. Some growers plant as closely and take three flowers. It all depends on the grade of flowers needed.

Among early varieties that would be suitable are Pacific, Polly Rose, Monrovia, Golden Glow, October Frost, C. Touset and Early Snow. If some midseason and late sorts are also wanted, a selection will be found in the reply to F. K., on page 10 of The Review of June 2. C. H. Totty.

MILDEWED MUMS.

What can I do for my mums? I have a house full of them and they are badly mildewed. My house is eighteen feet wide and ten feet to the ridge, with eighteen inches of glass in the sides. There are ventilators every three feet at the sides and at the ridge. These ventilators are kept open in the daytime, but closed at night. The plants have plenty of air. There is no shading on the glass. The soil, which is five inches deep, is on raised benches, and it is soil made from rotted sod and sandy loam—two parts sod to one part well rotted stable manure. When I planted them, about two weeks ago, I gave the soil a good sprinkling of sheep manure, raking it in thoroughly before planting. I have the plants set 8x10, leaving two stems to each plant. They are growing nicely, but as the new growth comes out they become badly mildewed. What can I do to save them or check this?

I have these varieties planted: October Frost, Glory of Pacific, Polly Rose, Monrovia, Mrs. H. Robinson, Touset and Wm. Duckham. I am located in Pennsylvania. A. R. M.

The house, benches and compost seem to be about as they should be and the only fault in the methods, as described, is the lack of ventilation at night. Throw open all available ventilators and keep them open day and night, reducing the ventilation only in case of violent storm. The ridge ventilators can be lowered halfway for safety through the night, but on no account should they ever be closed.

To kill the present mildew, use one ounce of sulphide of potassium, which can be procured of a druggist, to two gallons of water, or use Ivory soap, dissolved till the water feels soapy. Either of these solutions, sprayed over and under the foliage, will quickly destroy the mildew.

The mums named by A. R. M. are not subject to mildew if grown in the right conditions. Keep all shade off the glass and syringe in bright weather six or eight times a day, being careful not to sodden the soil.

OUTDOOR MUMS.

The National Council of Horticulture is seeking to encourage the public's use of the chrysanthemum as an outdoor flower. Nearly all chrysanthemums are hardy south of the Ohio river, but comparatively few will stand the rigor of northern winters and perfect their flowers before severe frost. The early flowering and the hardy kinds are the only ones suitable for outdoors in the northern states, and the Council's press service says that inquiry of a florist will show which are suitable for any locality.

Chrysanthemums are partial to a rich, well-drained soil, and they require a liberal supply of water. In fact, they soon suffer if allowed to become dry. They may be planted in masses, the plants being set about a foot apart, or single plants may be trained into specimens. Planting should be done soon after danger of frost is over, selecting a sheltered position, if possible, with a southern aspect. If south of a building, a fence or shrubbery, protection is afforded against early frost. As the plants are gross feeders, the soil should be enriched well, and after buds are formed a top-dressing of an inch of well-rotted manure will be beneficial. If the weather is dry, frequent watering will assist in perfecting the flowers.

TREATMENT FOR GLOXINIAS.

Gloxinias, when in flower, enjoy a moderately warm house, 60 degrees at night being sufficient. It is a mistake to shade heavily. No sun should reach the plants, but they do not want to be in a dark, semi-dungeon-like structure, or the flowers will lack texture and the stems substance. Young stock raised from seed in January or February, if kept potted along, will make nice flowering plants in July and August. Give them a place well up to the glass and do not coddle them. Except on cold nights, leave some ventilation on all the time. Give them a light but at the same time fairly rich compost, and do not pot too firmly. To secure good sized tubers for another season, the best plan with seedlings is to plant them out in a coldframe in rows a foot apart, allowing six to eight inches between the plants. Keep the sashes tilted top and bottom all the time. Fumigate once in eight or ten days for thrips. Water, when well established, once in four or five days. The plants will make grand growth treated thus and throw splendid flowers in late summer. They can be lifted and stored in flats to ripen in October.

PRIMULAS IN SUMMER.

The best place for such winter-flowering primulas as Sinensis, obconica and Kewensis during the summer months is a coldframe. One facing north or east is better than one having a south or western exposure. A coating of fine coal ashes three or four inches thick, in which the little pots easily can be partially plunged, will keep worms from finding their way into the drainage. Our earliest plants are now in 3-inch and 4-inch pots, and any still in flats or pans should be potted before they become crowded. A good compost consists of one-half well-rotted fibrous loam, one-third leaf-mold, not too much decayed and inclined to be flaky, and the balance old decayed hotbed or cow manure, adding a little sharp sand and fine charcoal to give porosity and sweetness. Be sure in potting P. Sinensis not to bury the crown, and on the other hand do not leave it too elevated, or it will be constantly seesawing and will finally snap off if not supported. Properly potted primulas need no support. Keep on the sashes during bright sunshine; remove them on dull days and during warm nights. Cloth or lath shades are better than whitening the glass, as they keep the plants cooler.

One successful primula grower plants out his young stock in coldframes, well up to the glass, in light but fairly rich soil. He keeps the sashes over them all summer, but gives air all the time, and lifts and places the plants in their blooming pots early in October, taking a nice ball with each. Better grown plants rarely are seen, and placed in a shaded house they become established quickly and hardly lose a leaf. This plan has many features to recommend it, the chief saving being in labor, potting and watering. We should like any primula growers who want to get some extra fine plants, to try this plan.

IRIS FOR IDENTIFICATION.

I am sending the bud of an iris and shall be glad to have you tell me the name of the variety. The flowers expand well in water after cutting and remain in good shape for several days. The flower is the same form as the Spanish iris, white with golden markings. The foliage is narrow. The plant grows about thirty inches high, is robust, hardy and forms large clumps like the German iris. It always is in flower with us in Kansas for Memorial day. The roots are rhizomate, but still are much like a mass of stiff wire. It thrives in any good soil. The variety was introduced here several years ago by an English lady and it is sometimes called Iris Angelica. I shall be glad to have any information you can give about it. C. H. C.

When the bud reached me it was too far gone for positive identification. Considering the flower with the description, it probably is Iris Siberica alba. If so, it blooms after the German section. William A. Peterson.

ANTIRRHINUMS FOR MARKET.

We have noticed in the wholesale markets during the last season that antirrhinums well grown and of pleasing shades of color have sold well. The best shades are pure white and pink; next to these come yellow and dark red. In the better class flower stores pink is the popular color. As a rule, pink snapdragons do not produce so robust spikes as the other varieties, but they flower just as early and as profusely. We hope you remembered to select cuttings from one or two of your best varieties and have had them planted outdoors. From these you should soon be able to secure some cuttings, which, if kept potted along, will prove useful for benching as a Christmas crop. If you have no cuttings and want a quantity of plants, sow some seed now. Do not use mixtures. No one wants such. Get packets of one or two distinct colors, such as will sell in any market. Use the tall variety in preference to dwarf or so-called intermediate strains, as it produces so much stronger spikes.

GRULLEMANS' SUCCESS.

Among the exhibitors at the great jubilee show at Haarlem, Holland, J. J. Grullemans & Sons, Lisse, have been conspicuously successful, winning three gold medals and two silver gilt medals. The gold medals were awarded for the best early tulips, the best tulips at the exhibition, and the best collection of narcissi. The silver gilt medals were won on named hyacinths and collection of miscellaneous bulbs.

It is interesting to recall that at the floral exhibition in 1856 this firm also obtained highest awards for tulips, narcissi and hyacinths. The business was established in 1839, but not until 1854 did the firm really enter the field as bulb exporters, the founder of the business making journeys through Germany, before the advent of railways, on horseback. The business is now international in character, the present senior partner and his four sons traveling regularly in European countries and America. J. J. Grullemans, Jr., was only 16 years old when he made his first business trip to America and easily took the palm as the youngest of the many Holland bulb men in America that season. He has since made regular journeys through the States and become well known to many bulb merchants.

The firm's catalogue is one of the largest published in Holland. The 1910 edition contains 180 pages, finely printed, and in addition to the usual line of bulbs contains a list of many rare and choice varieties of miscellaneous bulbs cultivated by the firm. Narcissi are strongly specialized in. The 1854 catalogue contained eleven varieties; the 1910 catalogue, 1,500, including some of the most recently introduced seedlings. An export trade is done with America, England, Germany, Austria, Russia, Norway, Sweden, Australia, Africa, British Columbia, Canada, etc., and the catalogue is published in the language of each country.

ASTER BEETLES.

Is manure water better for asters than the rotted manure? Last year I used rotted manure, and a small black bug killed hundreds of asters for me. It seemed to be the manure that bred them. G. E. S.

While manure water is good for asters, I would much prefer well rotted cow or horse manure in the ground. The black beetles, which I presume are the pests referred to, do not come in the manure. They, however, seem to breed spontaneously where any asters are planted. Hand-picking is a partial relief from their attacks, which are usually the worst when the flowers are opening. I have tried a variety of remedies and find Paris green, at the rate of one pound to 250 gallons of water, or a small spoonful to a 12-quart watering can, sprayed over the plants will clean them out in short order. This poison will color even white flowers so little as to be hardly noticeable. It is readily removed by dipping the flowers in water. Use a fine spray nozzle when applying the poison, and be sure to wet all the flowers.

Other poisons tried discolor the foliage too much, but you will find the Paris green in water will prevent your flowers from being chewed to pieces. Do not spray when rain is imminent. If the poison can stay on a few hours, it will do its work thoroughtly. C. W.

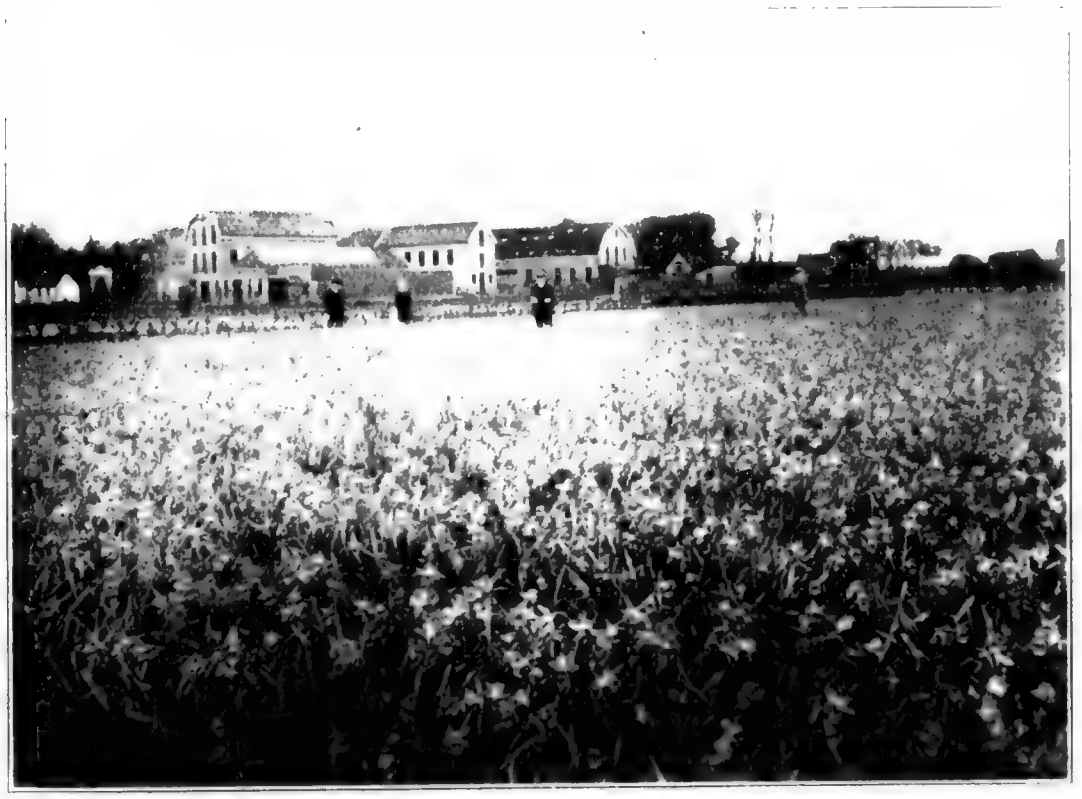
AMARYLLIS AFTER FLOWERING.



After flowering amaryllis, they often are sadly neglected and stood in almost any out-of-the-way place. This is all wrong. On the treatment they receive during the growing season the quality of the next crop of spikes chiefly depends. If bench space can be spared, an excellent plan is to plunge the pots to the brims in partially decayed leaves. This keeps the roots cooler and more moist and only a fraction of the watering is necessary. If greenhouse space is not at command, any coldframe with proper headroom will answer just as well. Keep sashes on all the time, but never close them. Syringe the plants every afternoon and feed every four or five days all such as are well pot-bound. You will be surprised at the way the bulbs will increase in size under this treatment. The sashes should have a coat of whitening, but of only moderate thickness.

LATE GLADIOLI.

The last planting of gladioli should now be made. Of course, bulbs may be kept as late even as July, but there is little advantage in it, as the earlier ones are of better quality. Let the bulbs be covered not less than six inches and they will withstand the summer drought much better. It is a common error to plant too shallow. Keep the earlier plantings in the field well cultivated. These are this season looking particularly promising, thanks to the cool, moist weather experienced. The increasing interest in this flower fully warrants the formation of a special society to guard and advance its interests, and we wish every success to the newly formed Gladiolus Society.

ISAAC S. HENDRICKSON.

Isaac Suydam Hendrickson, first president of the American Gladiolus Society, has charge of the wholesale department of the business of John Lewis Childs, Floral Park, N. Y. Mr. Hendrickson is a type of the young men who have done so much in recent years to establish floriculture on a business footing similar to that on which other industries are conducted. The gladiolus has been one of his special departments for years. There are few who deal in the gladiolus more extensively, and his selection as president seems a fortunate one for the new organization to be devoted to this special flower.

Mr. Hendrickson was born September 6, 1875, at Floral Park. He has been in the service of Mr. Childs over twenty-three years and for eight years has occupied his present position. He is treasurer of the Methodist church in his town, and a director of the Floral Park Bank.

MARGUERITES.

There is no use in trying to secure any propagating wood from marguerites at this season of the year. It is a good plan, however, to plant out a quantity of each variety, from which cuttings defy all the efforts of many growers to furnish cuttings. Plant out some of these, cutting them back pretty well. Keep others indoors. Our best cuttings came from some grown in a piece of bench, cut back well after flowering. As they started to grow, we top-dressed the bench, kept them well watered and about August 15 some nice propagating shoots appeared. It pays to do a little experimenting with yellow marguerites to find out the best way to grow and flower them. They are now a popular spring and early summer flower and have evidently come to stay.

LARVÆ IN ROSEBUDS.

I am sending you in a box some samples of roses that look and act strangely. Can you tell me what is the cause? Is it a disease? The bush is large and full of blooms, but few of them are perfect flowers. J. S.

This malformation is caused by an insect, Cynips rosæ, depositing its eggs in the bud. The grubs or larvæ hatched from these eggs produce those galls or lumps, covered with greenish or reddish fibers that look like moss.

Spraying with some of the tobacco solutions when the buds are forming will prevent the insects from approaching the buds. Ribes.

can be obtained in late summer. Where plants of the white varieties are in 3-inch or 4-inch pots, they will make nice, bushy specimens by the end of September, especially if kept watered. Potted at that time, they make capital winter flowering plants, coming in much earlier than those propagated later in the year. Yellow marguerites

Cedar Rapids, Ia.—In his newly improved and modern establishment, John E. Lapes is doing a much larger business than heretofore. He advertised his Memorial day facilities and had a specially good sale.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Business has been quiet since Memorial day. A good number of weddings are now taking place and this naturally uses up considerable material. Peonies have not yet made their appearance to any great extent, but toward the close of the present week they will be abundant. Early arrivals have realized excellent prices. There are complaints that late severe frosts have killed the buds on many varieties and the crop with some will be below the average.

Roses are in overabundant supply and many are only cleared at low rates. Owing to the absence of hot weather, the quality has held up surprisingly well. Carnot is a good seller and so are Killarney and White Killarney. Of My Maryland there are some fine flowers seen, indicating that it promises well as a summer variety. Bride and Maid continue slow sellers. Mrs. Aaron Ward is popular.

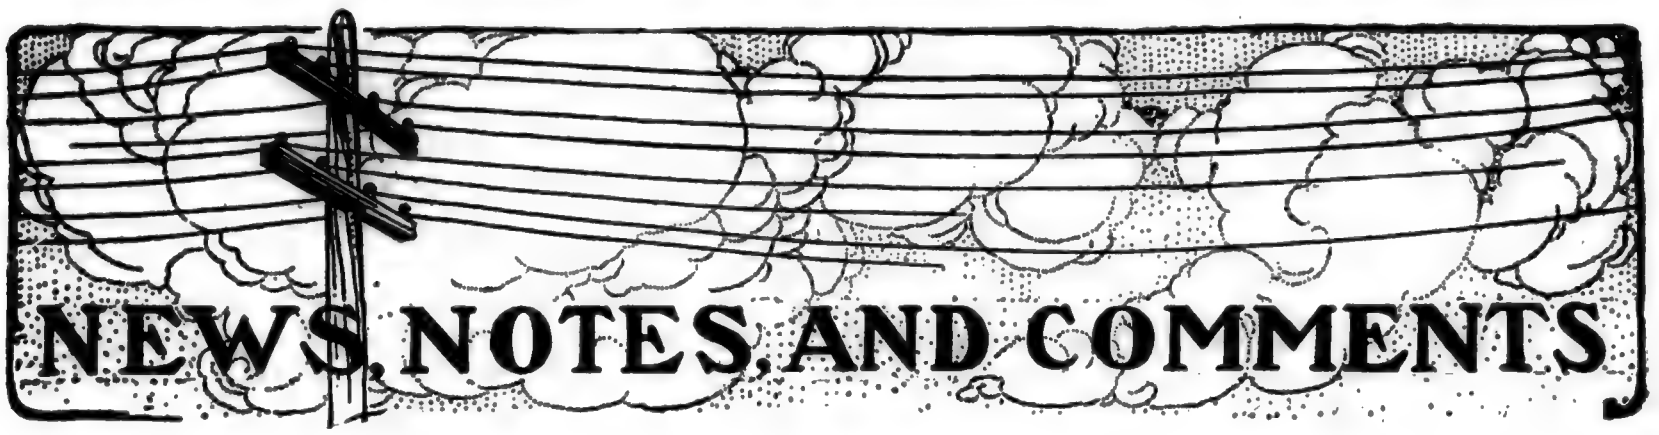
Carnations are not yet overabundant and many flowers are spidery and of little value. Good flowers are selling well. Spencer sweet peas are more abundant and sell as well as anything on the market. There is still a good supply of marguerites, the yellow color being in especially good demand. Gladioli of the large-flowered types are more plentiful. So far they have sold satisfactorily. Of lilies and callas there is an adequate supply. Quite a few auratums are coming in. Stocks are overabundant and the sale for candytuft, feverfew, etc., is light. Outdoor valley is done and the indoor variety is selling only moderately well. There is a fair sale for orchids. There were never so many seen in the windows in any previous June, thanks to the recent orchid show.

There are quantities of single pyrethrums, German iris and other hardy flowers, which, however, sell rather poorly. Antirrhinums are getting poor and will soon be over. For asparagus and adiantum the demand is quite good.

Trade in bedding plants shows signs of languishing, but the bulk of the dealers are pretty well sold out.

Various Notes.

Penn Bros., the enterprising and thoroughly up-to-date Bromfield street florists, had their large show-window entirely devoted to orchids last week, a large proportion of the Julius Roehrs first-prize exhibit being included. The display attracted the attention of hosts of passers-by.



The grounds of Holm Lea, Brookline, Prof. C. S. Sargent's charming estate, were opened to the public June 4 and 5, and many thousands of visitors embraced the opportunity to inspect the beautiful show of hardy azaleas, rhododendrons, huge standard wistarias and many other seasonable flowers.

Richard D. Kimball, of Waban, was first on hand at C Park street with double peonies, and is shipping fine lots daily to Thomas Pegler.

Peter M. Miller, of the T. J. Grey Co., left June 4 for a visit to New York city. His firm has had an exceptionally busy season, the best in its history.

J. A. Pettigrew and J. K. M. L. Farquhar spent June 5 visiting the several fine estates in South Lancaster, Mass.

One of the prizes will be for the best display by a nurseryman.

Peoria, Ill.—Frederick Hansen and H. Swanson have bought out the Illinois Avenue Greenhouses and are busy getting ready for fall trade. F. E. Two hundred and fifty shares of stock have been issued, with the par value of $50 each. The concern will do a general supply business for undertakers and cemeteries.

Newport, R. I.—It is stated that the assistant gardeners, with five exceptions, have won their fight with millionaire employers for more pay. They were getting $2 a day, and demanded $2.25. The five exceptions work for some of the richest colonists in Newport.

Pittsburg, Pa.—P. J. Demas sailed June 7 on the Athens for a visit of several months to Greece. Mr. Demas is accompanied by his wife and son. During his absence the business of the Pittsburg Florists' Exchange will be conducted by James C. Herron and George Franks as attorneys in fact and by William J. Brennen as legal attorney.

Houghton, Mich.—The Pearce Hardware & Furniture Co., of Lake Linden, is erecting greenhouses on the Pearce farm and making other preparations for entering into the florists' trade. The first section of the greenhouses arrived recently from Chicago and comprises two houses, each 27x100, a propagating house, 8x100, and a boiler house, 14x54. A general stock of plants, including roses and carnations, is already growing outdoors, to be removed to the houses later. Mr. Pearce has macadamized the road from the village to his farm, so as to expedite business.

ISAAC S. HENDRICKSON.

Isaac Suydam Hendrickson, first president of the American Gladiolus Society, has charge of the wholesale department of the business of John Lewis Childs, Floral Park, N. Y. Mr. Hendrickson is a type of the young men who have done so much in recent years to establish floriculture on a business footing similar to that on which other industries are conducted. The gladiolus has been one of his special departments for years. There are few who deal in the gladiolus more extensively, and his selection as president seems a fortunate one for the new organization to be devoted to this special flower.

Mr. Hendrickson was born September 6, 1875, at Floral Park. He has been in the service of Mr. Childs over twenty-three years and for eight years has occupied his present position. He is treasurer of the Methodist church in his town, and a director of the Floral Park Bank.

MARGUERITES.

There is no use in trying to secure any propagating wood from marguerites at this season of the year. It is a good plan, however, to plant out a quantity of each variety, from which cuttings defy all the efforts of many growers to furnish cuttings. Plant out some of these, cutting them back pretty well. Keep others indoors. Our best cuttings came from some grown in a piece of bench, cut back well after flowering. As they started to grow, we top-dressed the bench, kept them well watered and about August 15 some nice propagating shoots appeared. It pays to do a little experimenting with yellow marguerites to find out the best way to grow and flower them. They are now a popular spring and early summer flower and have evidently come to stay.

LARVÆ IN ROSEBUDS.

I am sending you in a box some samples of roses that look and act strangely. Can you tell me what is the cause? Is it a disease? The bush is large and full of blooms, but few of them are perfect flowers. J. S.

This malformation is caused by an insect, Cynips rosæ, depositing its eggs in the bud. The grubs or larvæ hatched from these eggs produce those galls or lumps, covered with greenish or reddish fibers that look like moss.

Spraying with some of the tobacco solutions when the buds are forming will prevent the insects from approaching the buds. Ribes.

Isaac S. Hendrickson.

can be obtained in late summer. Where plants of the white varieties are in 3-inch or 4-inch pots, they will make nice, bushy specimens by the end of September, especially if kept watered. Potted at that time, they make capital winter flowering plants, coming in much earlier than those propagated later in the year. Yellow marguerites

Cedar Rapids, Ia.—In his newly improved and modern establishment, John E. Lapes is doing a much larger business than heretofore. He advertised his Memorial day facilities and had a specially good sale.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Business has been quiet since Memorial day. A good number of weddings are now taking place and this naturally uses up considerable material. Peonies have not yet made their appearance to any great extent, but toward the close of the present week they will be abundant. Early arrivals have realized excellent prices. There are complaints that late severe frosts have killed the buds on many varieties and the crop with some will be below the average.

Roses are in overabundant supply and many are only cleared at low rates. Owing to the absence of hot weather the quality has held up surprisingly well. Carnot is a good seller and so are Killarney and White Killarney. Of My Maryland there are some fine flowers seen, indicating that it promises well as a summer variety. Bride and Maid continue slow sellers. Mrs. Aaron Ward is popular.

Carnations are not yet overabundant and many flowers are spidery and of little value. Good flowers are selling well. Spencer sweet peas are more abundant and sell as well as anything on the market. There is still a good supply of marguerites, the yellow color being in especially good demand. Gladioli of the large-flowered types are more plentiful. So far they have sold satisfactorily. Of lilies and callas there is an adequate supply. Quite a few auratums are coming in. Stocks are over abundant and the sale for candytuft feverfew, etc., is light. Outdoor valley is done and the indoor variety is selling only moderately well. There is a fair sale for orchids. There were never so many seen in the windows in any previous June, thanks to the recent orchid show.

There are quantities of single pyrethrums, German iris and other hardy flowers, which, however, sell rather poorly. Antirrhinums are getting poor and will soon be over. For asparagus and adiantum the demand is quite good.

Trade in bedding plants shows signs of languishing, but the bulk of the dealers are pretty well sold out.

Various Notes.

Penn Bros., the enterprising and thoroughly up-to-date Bromfield street florists, had their large show-window entirely devoted to orchids last week, a large proportion of the Julius Roehrs first-prize exhibit being included. The display attracted the attention of hosts of passers-by.

The grounds of Holm Lea, Brookline, Prof. C. S. Sargent's charming estate, were opened to the public June 4 and 5, and many thousands of visitors embraced the opportunity to inspect the beautiful show of hardy azaleas, rhododendrons, huge standard wistarias and many other seasonable flowers.

Richard D. Kimball, of Waban, was first on hand at C Park street with double peonies, and is shipping fine lots daily to Thomas Pegler.

Peter M. Miller, of the T. J. Grey Co., left June 4 for a visit to New York city. His firm has had an exceptionally busy season, the best in its history.

J. A. Pettigrew and J. K. M. L. Farquhar spent June 5 visiting the several fine estates in South Lancaster, Mass.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS, MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.

Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August 16 to 19, 1910.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

WHAT would YOU think of a business man who didn't have any business stationery?

THE Associated Press reports that Burbank is about to spring a couple more "creations," a poppy and a primrose.

IF you want to buy, sell or exchange real estate or greenhouse materials, boilers, etc., try The Review's Want Ad department.

IN many central western localities where bedding out usually is pretty well along by the middle of June, it hardly has been started this season.

WE have so much bad weather this spring that, if the seasons are to average up, as they usually do, it should mean a fine summer and autumn.

THE price of glass, of putty, of paint and of oil is what even sellers call "way up," but the price of the products grown under them is normal.

J. A. VALENTINE and Mrs. Valentine are busy this week extending the glad hand to the visitors at the nurserymen's national convention, now in progress at Denver.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two copies.

SECRETARY A. H. FEWKES announces that, owing to continued cool weather, it has been found necessary to postpone the annual meeting and exhibition of the American Peony Society, at Boston, from June 9 and 10 to Tuesday and Wednesday, June 14 and 15.

C. W. JOHNSON, secretary of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, has issued the annual volume. It contains, in addition to the report of the convention, essays and prize awards of the meeting held at New York last November and published at the time in The Review, a list of the new varieties disseminated in 1909, both American and foreign, and a list of the society's 118 members.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., has filed with the American Rose Society notice of registration of a new sport of Killarney, originating in 1908. It is identical with the Killarney, except in color, which is much brighter, showing a strong tendency to red, some blooms having been as dark in color as the Richmond, and the average of the crop for the entire year of 1909 only a shade lighter.

The question has been addressed to the secretary, whether the American Rose Society will have a June show, but up to this writing there have been no steps taken toward such an exhibition.

The Minnesota State Rose Society has applied for a bronze medal to be offered at its summer exhibition for the best exhibit by an amateur. The definition which the society gives of an amateur is, "One who grows the plants himself or herself, but does not regularly employ a gardener to grow them, and one who does not grow or sell plants as a business." Last year the American Rose Society offered its bronze medal, and this was awarded to Mrs. F. H. Gibbs, St. Paul, Minn.

Department of Registration.

Public notice is hereby given that A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell, Conn., offers for registration the rose described below. Any person objecting to the registration or to the use of the proposed name is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date. Raiser's description: A sport of Killarney, originating with A. N. Pierson, Inc., in 1908. It is identical with Killarney, except in color, which is much brighter, showing a strong tendency to red, some blooms having been as dark as Richmond, the average the entire year a shade lighter than Richmond. Name: Red Killarney.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

If the month holds out to the end as well as it did through the first week, June will go on record as one of the best ever known in this market. Some wholesalers think the unusually active condition of the market since Memorial day has been largely due to the scarcity of outdoor flowers; others think the cool weather is responsible, delaying the arrival of that time of the year when people seek their pleasures in the open air and without the aid of flowers; still others say the exceptionally high quality of the stock available as a result of the cool weather has stimulated the business, while others point to the general prosperity of the west and say the June increase is no more than the normal gain, apparent all through the first five months of the year. But everyone agrees on the fact that business last week was excellent. The out-of-town demand is better than the city business, and the call is principally for the finer grades of stock.

Since Memorial day there has been a considerable improvement in the quality of the stock, with the possible exception of Beauties. Most of the wholesalers will say that really first-class long Beauties are scarce, though there are plenty of cripples. Of other roses there is an abundance of notably fine quality. The cool weather recently prevailing has restored the color and texture, leaving nothing to be desired in roses. It is possible to procure Killarney, Richmond, White Killarney, Maryland, Jardine, Cardinal and Rhea Reid with stems of exceptional length and buds in proportion, while those old favorites, Maid and Bride, have again come into the race. Kaiserin is abundant and fine. While Killarney continues to be the best seller, the call for red has improved and Richmond, Cardinal and Rhea Reid are commanding better prices than the same lengths in other roses. There is plenty of shorter stock, and buyers find values extra good all through the rose department. With such large supply, such fine stock and such moderate prices, it is no wonder a big business is being done.

Carnations are in heavier supply and are of improved quality. Prices are moderate. Under the circumstances, there is little demand for the lower grades, and growers who cut a considerable proportion of these find returns unsatisfactory. For others, they are seasonable.

One of the most popular flowers of the season is the Butterfly sweet pea. Nobody wants the winter bloomers any more. There are all kinds and conditions of Butterfly peas. Some have stems four or five inches long and others have stems eighteen inches long. Some are nice, clean stock, and some are not. Consequently the price is anywhere from 50 cents to $1.50 per hundred, with the best grade selling much more promptly than the others.

Not many peonies have come in. The weather is too cool. A number of local growers, however, are cutting moderate quantities, and the deluge will follow a few warm days. Much of the stock shows frost injury, but peonies have been selling excellently, because of light supplies. Easter lilies are not so abundant as they were, and callas are passing. The market is well supplied with fancy gladioli, Augusta being the principal variety seen, with lesser quantities of Mrs. Francis King, which is the best seller. Valley is an important item, but plentiful. Daisies are not abundant. The miniature gladioli are not selling well. Cattleyas are less plentiful, but still are equal to any requirements.

There are abundant supplies of green goods. Asparagus strings are not yet especially plentiful, but the demand appears to have dropped off as a result of the scarcity which has continued for months. Smilax is fairly abundant, but not in large request. Adiantum is plentiful. Ferns from storage are pretty well cleaned up, but new crop is available.

Make Wants Clear.

Many peculiar things happen in a holiday rush. Here is one of them: An extra hand in a wholesale house picked out and shipped an order of roses, sending the best the firm had and charging their price. When it was discovered what grade of stock had been sent, a strong protest was expected by return mail. When the letter came this is what it said: "The roses were fine; why don't you send me that grade all the time? I wouldn't mind the price if I could get that quality." The customer had always been sent second-grade goods, under the impression that it was what he wanted.

In a great many cases if buyers would make their wants more clearly known to the wholesaler, they would not lose anything by it.

May Weather.

May was a cold and peculiar month. The mean temperature was 3 degrees below normal; the rainfall was one-third greater than normal; the warmest day was 78 degrees, May 22, but this record was exceeded several times in March and also in April. There were frosts May 5, 26 and 27, and the duration of sunshine was only fifty-five per cent of the possible number of hours.

Club Meeting.

At the club meeting June 2 the suburban vice-president, H. E. Philpott, of Winnipeg, occupied the chair in the absence of President Asmus. The attendance was light and, in the hope of stimulating interest, it was voted to set up a dollar dinner to each member present at the July meeting. A committee consisting of A. I. Simmons, W. F. Scofield and Alex. Henderson was appointed to have charge. Capt. Simmons is in charge of the commissary department of the Seventh Regiment, I. N. G., so this assignment is right in his line and should draw a crowd.

P. J. Saunders and George Grimm were elected to membership. A representative of the Michigan Central was present to tell the club what a fine road his is for the trip to Rochester to the S. A. F. convention. He offered a special train for 100 people paying $12.88 each.

Various Notes.

The Jones Dry Goods Co., Kansas City, went into the hands of receivers June 4. At times this concern is one of the largest buyers of cut flowers in the Chicago market. Their specialty has been Saturday special sales of carnations, though occasionally short roses would be used. They often bought from 10,000 to 25,000 flowers on a Friday, paying $7.50 to $12.50 for carnations and a little more for roses. The firm owes over a million dollars, mostly to banks, but the receivers say it is solvent and will come out all right. They will continue. Bad weather is said to have caused the trouble. Spring stocks have not moved.

August Poehlmann is feeling especially jovial these days. The month of May made a new record for his establishment, and helping at the store during the Memorial day rush made him feel a special degree of satisfaction over the big volume of business. The firm fed its store force at the Perfecto for three days during the Memorial day rush, covers being laid for twenty-two. O. W. Frese is again on duty.

Jesselson & Wiener, provision dealers at 623 West Sixty-third street, have opened a flower store.

The Percy Jones side of the Flower Growers' Market has thus far borne the brunt of the changes being made in the building, but they hope to get straightened around in a few days. Business goes on as usual.

1910 have exceeded the record for any five months since he started.

The land show has secured the Coliseum for November 4 to 28.

C. L. Washburn points out that there has been practically no glut thus far in 1910. He says he never has seen so long a period of constantly good demand and fair prices.

Wietor Bros. point to the quick recovery made by Mrs. Jardine since the few days in May, when all roses deteriorated, as one of the strong points in favor of Jardine.

The Briggs House florist has taken a store in the Masonic Temple, on the Randolph street side, next to the one in which Visias Bros. once did business.

At Winterson's Seed Store bedding plants are moving steadily, both in wholesale and retail quantities. Canna plants are said to be selling especially well.

John Zech says he thinks the spurt of business is only the normal increase from year to year, and that he always has found the first part of June a busy time.

At J. A. Budlong's they say the Butterfly peas are as good a seller as anything on the list.

Tim Matchen, at Peter Reinberg's, says they had about all they could jump to in shipping orders last week.

The Market.

From reports of the various retailers, Memorial day business was much better than most of them expected. Nearly all of them had some shipping orders to points outside of the city. Last week the trade was mostly for weddings and school commencements, which will keep up until June 15, when the season is practically ended. The plantsmen are slacking up in their line, as most of the planting has been completed and bedding stock is running low. They all say they cleaned up nicely this season. The wholesalers have been receiving good and large consignments of cut stock, with prices much lower, but stock all has sold well in the higher grades.

Roses, carnations and sweet peas still are coming in heavily, with good grades in gladioli, Harrisii lilies and lily of the valley. Peonies have been somewhat scarce. Ferns are scarce; fancy are up to $2.50 per thousand and dagger at $2. Other greens are plentiful.

Various Notes.

E. W. Guy, of Belleville, was made a Shriner here last week. Mr. Guy reports that Memorial day with him was the best in years, and says all the other florists in Belleville also had all they could do.

Victor Peterson, of Western Springs, Ill., spent last week here as the guest of A. Y. Ellison. Mr. Peterson says he will remain here if he finds a position.

Miss Frances Kling, head lady clerk for W. C. Young at the greenhouses, will leave next week to spend two months' vacation at Atlantic City, for a much needed rest after a busy season.

Business was good last week. After the strenuous time at Memorial day, things are now back nearly to normal again. Carnations are quite plentiful and retail at 50 cents and 60 cents per dozen. Roses of good quality sell at $1.50 per dozen. Sweet peas from indoors are getting poor and retail at $1 per hundred blooms. Snapdragons sell at 75 cents and $1 per dozen; lilies at $2 per dozen. Callas are getting scarce and poor now. Outdoor flowers in the hardy line are now quite plentiful. Geraniums, salvias, coleus, ageratums, vincas and other bedding plants sell well and at fairly good prices. Pansies and daisies, with the warm weather, are beginning to be played out. These sold fast at Memorial day, as well as geraniums, forget-me-nots and hydrangeas in pots.

All seemed to be satisfied with Memorial day for 1910. Some of the florists had to work one or two nights to get their orders out on time. Funeral work was good last week.

Various Notes.

William P. Peirce and E. H. Chamberlain had some fine hydrangeas for Memorial day.

R. H. Woodhouse had about 3,000 late tulips to cut from, which came in splendidly. He also had an enormous supply of geraniums, which sold well.

S. S. Peckham cut about 15,000 stocks, besides candytuft. He had a big lot of geraniums also.

E. G. Davis, on Shawmut avenue, had about 25,000 stocks to cut.

M. B. Sylvia, at his nursery, reports a good sale of bouquets and plants.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Wedding bells are ringing constantly. Every retailer seems to have his share of the good things, and some of the decorations run up into the thousands. It is going to be a good month—this leafy month of June—good for the orchid men, and the gardenia men, and the rose men, and the valley men. The florists surely deserve a fat June. The picking has been light of late and business far from inspiring. Prices do not rise, and if they hold steady where they are until July, we may be thankful.

There is nothing to add to last week's record. Beauties and all other roses are about the same. Careful selecting sometimes adds a little to the average quotations, but not much. Carnations are down; 2 cents buys the best of them. Valley holds firm and at times 4 cents is obtainable, 3 cents and 4 cents for the stock for the swell wedding bouquets. Good sweet peas sell readily, as well as selected gardenias and orchids, for which the wedding call is persistent. Grand is the cut of peonies. Lilies are falling again, and of outdoor stock of roses and shrubs there is no limit.

Changes Among Wholesalers.

John I. Raynor made a graceful retirement, June 4, from the wholesale cut flower business, after an experience of many years. He leaves the street with a competence and a reputation for square dealing unsurpassed, and with the good will and wishes of all his customers and competitors. His record in the business covers over thirty years. P. J. Smith, who succeeds him, has himself been over twenty-one years in the wholesale cut flower trade, two years with Burns & Raynor, two and one-half years with W. S. Allen and seventeen years with Mr. Raynor as foreman. He is popular and efficient, and the same business principles that characterized his predecessor will continue. Mr. Smith has the esteem and good will of all who know him.

Gradually the veterans of the business are retiring on their laurels, or gravitating towards the simple life. William Ford is on his fine estate in Pennsylvania. John Young is growing young on his big farm and among his Beauties at Bedford Hills. The young men are slowly but surely taking up the responsibilities of those who have borne the burden and heat of the day. Some of the veterans have earned a well-deserved retirement, but it is a work, this daily contact with nature and the beautiful, in which men do not grow old. The first wholesaler of all is still active and every day finds him caring for a string of hotels, and in the same store he occupied when he began his career, over thirty-five years ago—the venerable Jimmy Hart, of Madison.

The firm of A. Moltz & Co., on the second floor of the Coogan building, is another enterprise that will be established July 1. Mr. Moltz has been in the wholesale cut flower business for twenty years, dealing exclusively in roses. Maurice Glass is a brother-in-law of Mr. Moltz and has been in his service for eight years. He is a young man of excellent character and a natural salesman. The firm will enlarge its floor space and will deal in all kinds of cut flowers hereafter. The business will be strictly wholesale.

Various Notes.

Monday, June 13, the final meeting of the season for the Florists' Club takes place at its rooms in the Grand Opera House building, Twenty-third street and Eighth avenue. Competition for the Hitchings cup begins, and some fine exhibits are assured. Also, there will be much business of importance and interest. The club's outing is less than three weeks away.

The annual outing of the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association will take place early in July, if present plans are completed, with a boat trip as the principal feature. In the same month the Greek florists' society will celebrate as usual.

Everybody is going to Rochester in August. The New York special will have a larger crowd than the one that journeyed to Buffalo at the time of the world's fair. All our exhibitors, as usual, have secured space and will make larger displays than ever.

C. C. Trepel is enlarging his conveniences at Loeser's and Bloomingdale's, doubling the size of his space in both cut flower departments and adding to his greenhouse facilities.

The annual exhibition of the New York Horticultural Society in the Museum building of the Botanical Gardens opened June 3, with George V. Nash in charge. Large crowds attended Saturday and Sunday.

Bonnot Bros. report a case of repudiation of order that may interest others who have had similar experiences. A retail florist up state ordered $50 worth of carnations to be sent on a specified train on a Saturday and sent his check for the goods. The express company failed to get them to the customer before Monday. The florist refused the goods and stopped payment on the check. The wholesaler had already deposited it and protest charges were added. He shipped the goods at the exact time specified by the retail florist and at the extra expense of local cartage. Who is responsible, and can the wholesaler collect by law?

June 4 the final meeting of the New York Cut Flower Exchange for the year was held in Long Island City, John Donaldson presiding.

Kessler Bros. imported 400 bay trees and phœnix in decorative sizes, which arrived last week and have sold rapidly. They are much pleased with their temporary store at 450 Sixth avenue. A large importation of kentias has been secured for the fall. This firm will at that time add a wholesale cut flower department to its business.

The bouquets illustrated this month so profusely in the Ladies' Home Journal also feature the ribbon creations of Wertheimer Bros.

Joseph Levy, of John Seligman & Co., has installed a large new ice-box in his store on West Twenty-sixth street, opposite the Coogan building.

William Mathews, of Great Neck, who grows Purity freesia bulbs for the Stumpp & Walter Co., and cut flowers for Kessler Bros., was in the city June 4.

YONKERS, N. Y.

The regular monthly meeting of the Yonkers Horticultural Society was held in Wiggins hall, Friday, June 3, with a large number present and President Bennet in the chair. He appointed the following as judges of the peony exhibits: L. Whitman, J. Goff and Mr. Knapper. The competition was close, the prizes being placed as follows: First, R. Cochrane; second, J. Campbell; third, W. Habach. W. H. Waite had some very fine muskmelons on exhibition and was awarded a cultural certificate.

After the judging a discussion was taken part in by several of the members, telling how they grew peonies. H. Nichols read an able and instructive paper on calceolarias and fully explained how to grow and handle that interesting plant. There was also a general discussion on the paper.

The executive committee reported on the June show and said all arrangements are made to hold it June 17, afternoon and evening, in Hollywood Inn hall. Louis Nielliot has been appointed show manager. The secretary of the committee is W. H. Waite, super-

The Rising Eastern Market.

Quality and variety play the leading roles on the floral stage this week, and when their parts are properly filled there is a good run. Large orders for sweet peas, valley, Beauties, fancy roses, and smaller ones for cattleyas, are everyday affairs, yet the market is quieter than it was and ordinary flowers feel the difference.

Sweet peas have been the liveliest factor in the June market, the weather, so unusually cool and cloudy, having much to do with the odd antics of sweet peas. One day they are fine and plentiful; the next one cannot get them for love or money, to say nothing of a few hard words. The indoor crop is mostly disappearing through the exit, the outdoor crop coming through the entrance, but they cannot get in with such weather as we have been having. However, a single day of warm sunshine will bring in enough outdoor sweet peas to fill the entire stage. The quality of these outdoor peas is remarkable. A number of growers are sending in stock fully equal to the new crop indoor, of which there are still some houses.

Valley has been in splendid demand. It is noted by the wide-awake valley growers that the demand for this flower is best on Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays, indicating that the weddings and greatest floral activity are early in the week, while toward the end of the week the absence of these gayeties, the cessation of the May day festivities in the churches, and the Saturday half holidays make it dull, in direct contrast to May.

There is enough business to keep prices firm where the flowers retain quality. The difference is felt chiefly in carnations, where there is a falling off since the high-water mark of last week, the poorer grades being particularly hard to sell.

Peonies are still abundant. The local crop has nearly ceased coming into the market, but it will be followed by the peonies from a cooler clime. Easter lilies are regaining their hold on popular favor with the increase in weddings. Cattleyas are excellent, in two varieties, and in demand. Gardenias are dull. There is some activity in the finer greens.

The Cemetery Florists.

Memorial day is the big day among the florists who depend on one or another of our large cemeteries for their business. By May 30 they expect to dispose of all their spring plants, foliage or flowering, that can be got into condition. The demand is largely for rustic baskets and vases, and a sprinkling of elaborate beds, a generous planting of ivy, hardy rose bushes and shrubbery.

Inquiry at some of the establishments in the neighborhood of Laurel Hill and West Laurel Hill, including Westcotts' Nurseries, Mrs. Mary Alburger and Edward Alburger, confirms the impression that the season has been one of great activity. The demand is generally believed to have been better than in previous years.

A new ruling at West Laurel Hill cemetery forbidding outside florists to do work inside the cemetery grounds is a serious drawback to the business interests there. It appears that the erection of the new greenhouse plant of the cemetery company is an industry requiring protection, for the present at least, and the florist industry is therefore restricted in this direction. Whether this policy of restriction can be continued remains to be seen.

est. Mr. Berger has purchased a property on the west side of Germantown avenue, half a block south of his present location, where he will at once build a modern flower shop with conservatories in the rear. The new property is thirty-four feet front and 492 feet deep. This will give ample room for a driveway beside the store, in order to obtain access to the conservatories in the rear.

It is interesting to look back at the steady progress made by Mr. Berger and his son. The greenhouses on Queen street, doing a wholesale and retail business, have been a factor for years. Then came the little shop on East Chelten avenue, so tiny that you waited on the sidewalk while the pretty girl ahead of you purchased her flowers inside. But Germantown was not slow in finding out that Fred Berger had taste. That fact once ascertained, progress was steady, for Germantown knew a good thing and meant to keep it. The little store on East Chelten avenue was succeeded by a much finer store on Germantown avenue nearby, where a flourishing business was built up. The present store, however, is not equal to the requirements of the business and Fred Berger has promised that the new shop will be a distinct improvement on anything that Germantown has seen in the past.

Mr. Rice's Return.

As chronicled in this column, M. Rice returned from his European trip to New York June 2. When seen this week in his business home Mr. Rice spoke with pleasure of his trip, joshed his interviewer a little and then proceeded to tell of his success. "Mr. Zirkman says," Mr. Rice wound up enthusiastically, "that the coming season will be the greatest in the history of this house, and of florists' supplies, for we have a wonderful collection of the best things." Of course, this was after Mr. Zirkman had had a preliminary view of what is to come.

Alphonse Pericat spoke on "Commercial Orchids" before the Florists' Club, on the evening of June 7.

The steamers Manitou, Menomenie and an Italian boat have brought large supplies of wheat, cycas and magnolia to H. Bayersdorfer & Co.

Walter P. Stokes will sail for Europe June 15, on the steamer Campagnia, for two months' vacation. Mr. Stokes goes with S. F. Willard, of Comstock, Ferry & Co., Wethersfield, Conn., their plan being to visit the seed farms abroad.

Hoopes Bro. & Thomas, West Chester, Pa., have sent samples of their two new roses to this city. One, Christine Wright, is a cross between Wichuraiana and Caroline Testout. The other is a climbing sport of American Beauty. Both are of interest.

The Mt. Desert Nurseries, Bar Harbor, Me., A. Miller, manager, have sent to this city a crested sport of Nephrolepis Scottii that it is rumored one of our shrewdest buyers desires.

Fred Ehret, our successful uptown retailer, is fortunate in having so able a partner in his business as Mrs. Ehret. She has the happy combination of artistic and business ability.

W. E. McKissick & Bros. have Easter lilies in mid-winter form.

The 350-acre seed farm of the D. Landreth Seed Co. is in fine condition at this time; fifty-five acres of tomatoes are out, also three and one-half acres of Salvia splendens. The large crop of turnip seed will be harvested this week. The cabbage and kale fields are in a mass of glorious bloom, while everywhere are extensive plantings of flowers and grass, making the entire farm under heavy cultivation.

The Market.

Business has been most satisfactory the last week. We have been experiencing some unusually cold, wet weather for this time of the year, causing much sickness. Funeral work has been making big demands on the market. The usual June weddings are creating a call for peas, valley, etc., which it is hard to meet.

Dark, rainy days shortened up the supply of stock of every description. Just at present prices remain about the same as last week, but there is every indication that we will have warmer weather and clear skies; consequently, there will be a big increase in the supply, and naturally, the prices will come down.

Sweet peas have been quite scarce of late. Roses and carnations are arriving in fairly large quantities and of fine quality. Few peonies have been available so far this season, still it needs only a few days of warm weather to bring in a large crop. Japanese irises, which are becoming more popular each year, are about gone for this season.

Decorations for the Taft banquet at the Light Guard Armory were elaborately carried out by J. Breitmeyer's Sons. Covers were spread over 800 feet of table space, the decorations of which consisted chiefly of thousands of Richmond roses, arranged in Imperial chinaware ferneries and vases. In addition, many thousand carnations were strewn loosely on the tables. Laurel wreathing was festooned from column to column. An immense bank of palms was arranged back of the speakers' table. Hon. P. Breitmeyer, mayor of our beautiful city, occupied the third seat to the left of the chief executive of the United States.

Chas. Plumb, president of our club, sails on the steamer Adriatic from New York, June 28, for an extended European trip. It is his intention to visit the principal cities in England, Scotland, Germany, Holland and France, although his main reason for making the trip is to see his mother and help celebrate her eighty-sixth birthday.

Friends of Fred Pautke will regret to hear of the death of his daughter, Elsie, who died June 4 after a lingering illness. She was 4 years and 9 months old. A pretty wreath of Bon Silene roses expressed the deep sympathy of the Detroit Florists' Club.

A new stunt was pulled off in this city last week. The morning after the Taft banquet a young man, claiming to be in the employ of the firm who did the floral

DES MOINES, IOWA.

The Market.

Decoration day business was a record-breaker with all the florists here. The weather was ideal. Saturday and Sunday proved as good selling days as Monday and the florists enjoyed three big days, selling out clean by noon on Monday. Plant trade was exceptionally good, every plant being sold that showed a flower. Good carnations sold for $1 per dozen; peonies, $1.50; roses, $1.50 to $2.50; jasmine, 35 cents to 50 cents per dozen.

Various Notes.

William Trillow reports that his trade on Decoration day was almost double that of a year ago.

The Iowa Seed Co. says Decoration day business broke all records.

The J. S. Wilson Floral Co. reports a fifty per cent increase over Decoration day of last year, both in cut flowers and plants.

The Rush Floral Co. did a great business on Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

The Guthrie-Lorenz Co. had about all the business it was possible to handle, disposing of a great many blooming plants. This city is about cleaned out of good geraniums and vincas.

C. E. Elder is the new manager of the flower department of the Iowa Seed Co.

The Iowa Floral Co. is building eight more greenhouses. Frank Riley has left the employ of this firm. Booster.

DAYTON, OHIO.

The Market.

While it is a little late to make a report on Decoration day business, still the report is too good to keep. The good report comes from all sides, combined with the general complaint of not having nearly enough stock. People who waited until the last minute to get their flowers were greatly disappointed. The weather, being quite cool, was just right for keeping stock, but, on the other hand, it greatly checked the progress of outdoor stock, especially peonies, the supply of which was so scant that it was an utter impossibility to fill orders on them.

Carnations were quite abundant and the prices on them held up well, while many more could have been handled to good advantage. The rose crop was also heavy, but the trade did not seem to call for roses as readily as other stock. Nevertheless, when the supply of other stock was exhausted, they were glad to take what they could get. Considerable quantities of double narcissi and jasmines were shipped into this market and all were disposed of. Unfortunately, it was an impossibility to get ferns in quantity. Not one-half of the orders could be filled, which was a great inconvenience to those who had lots of bouquet orders. Besides, there was a great deal of funeral work coming in continually, and this, combined with Decoration day orders, kept the florists on the jump from early morning until late at night. Bedding plants were well cleaned out by May 30, and thus, luckily, there were not many plants to handle during the other rush.

Last week's business, too, was quite heavy. An unusual demand for funeral work was largely the cause of this. Light carnations were so scarce that it was impossible to fill half the orders for them.

Trade previous to Decoration day, and in fact throughout the month of May, was exceedingly good. The weather, however, was not at all in harmony with the month of May, but was more like a mixture of March and April, with practically more rain than sunshine. Such weather was hard on all outdoor crops, especially farm crops. Farmers were greatly delayed in putting in their crops, while some have been obliged to plant their corn as often as three times. A severe hail storm, accompanied by high winds, struck this section of the state May 29 and did a great deal of damage, breaking glass and shattering all sorts of vegetation. Fortunately for the florists, the brunt of the storm struck the country regions about two miles north of the city. Thus none of the florists suffered any loss.

Various Notes.

Mrs. B. Hendrichs reports that Decoration day trade this season was the best that she has ever experienced. She thinks this is partly due to the fact that a great deal of outdoor stock was killed or crippled by frost and held back by the continuous cold weather.

Mrs. E. Young says that everything in sight, even peony buds, sold for May 30, and business suited her well.

"Decoration day was unquestionably a most successful one, but we needed more stock," is the report of the Heiss Co. This firm has been greatly inconvenienced by the exceedingly cool weather, which has sadly delayed spring planting. R. A. B.

Washington, D. C.—The latest addition to the trade here is the retail firm of Leapley & Meyer, who have opened at 905 G street, northwest.

Hudson, N. Y.—R. W. Allen says he has no trouble to get $1.50 per dozen for geraniums, if they are branchy plants, grown near the glass, well looked over and shifted several times. It pays, he says, to do this. Mr. Allen laments the fact that the great orchid show at Boston was held during the busy week, when it was impossible for the general craftsman to leave home. He is one of many who are growing orchids commercially, and consequently are much interested in them.
